SITUATION, STREETS, BUILDINGS, &c.—Aberdeen is pleasantly situated upon an eminence rising gradually from the sea, the beach presenting a beautiful even surface of fine hard sand. When the tide is receding, a person may walk for many miles along the shore, and contemplate a noble expanse of the German ocean, which, from the town, has a fine appearance, and adds to the beauty of its picturesque situation. The new streets are spacious, uniform, and elegant; the houses are built of granite stone, which the neighbourhood produces. A noble street, named Union street, running to the west is particularly handsome. About the middle of this fine street a magnificent granite bridge, designed by Telford, of one arch, spanning one hundred and thirty feet, is thrown across a ravine, through which runs a brook called the Denburn, and divides the older parts of it from the more modern and fashionable. The Denburn is now arched over, and the new line of railway which forms a junction between the Scottish North Eastern and the Great Northern Railway, runs over it for a short distance. The modern part of the town has been all built within the last fifty years, and is of very considerable extent. There are three other fine streets, namely King-st, Market-st, and George-st, and for some time past the city has been extending in every direction. The town-house, gaol, and new court-house are situated in Castle-street. In the centre of this street stands a highly finished statue of George, the late Duke of Gordon, erected by the gentlemen of the county. It is composed of that beautiful grey granite for which Aberdeen is so noted, and represents His Grace in a martial cloak and head uncovered, with one foot placed upon a cannon, and both hands supported by a sword. The pedestal is a square slab of granite, and the entire height of the whole is about twenty feet; At the corner of Union-terrace, near the bridge, is a beautiful bronze statue of his late Royal Highness the Prince Consort, placed on a pedestal of polished Peterhead granite. In the town-house is the town's armoury, in which are deposited about three hundred stands of muskets, an ancient coat of mail, the standard carried by the citizens at the battle of Harlaw, and other warlike implements; also the axe of the machine known by the name of the maiden, which in times of old was used for the decapitation of criminals, and the furniture of the provost's charger, when he attended as commissioner for the town, at the coronation of King Charles I. at Edinburgh. The court-house was commenced in the year 1818, and first opened in 1820. It stands behind the town-house, and is connected with it. The principal entrance is from Castle-street, by a Gothic doorway, and a handsome stone stair leads to the vestibule of the court on the first floor. The Post-Office is in Market-street, and was erected about 1845. It is now found far too contracted for the despatch of busines, which is every year expanding. Eight years ago, in 1858, the estimated number of letters delivered at the Aberdeen Post Office was 2,454,020, or 47,210 weekly. In 1864 they had increased to 3,349,272, or weekly 62,101. The estimated total of newspapers passing through the office in 1864, was 583,827; of book-packets, 20,397; of pattern-packets, 4,589; of money orders issued, 22,135, amount £48,679; of money orders paid, 28,129—amount, £64,935—postage stamps sold, £15,471 14s. 6d. exclusive of those sold by the Inland Revenue Office in town, and supplied to the stamp distributors in the country. The progression in the various departments shows an average increase of 30 per cent., independent of the savings bank department. The public assembly or county-rooms, intended chiefly for the accommodation of the united meetings of the counties of Aberdeen, Banff, Kincardine and Forfar, are in Union-street, at the west end of the town. This elegant edifice is decorated with a portico of six columns of the Ionic order, thirty feet in height. The principal entrance, under the portico, leads into an outer vestibule, having a flight of six steps conducting to the grand saloon, which is sixty feet in length and twenty feet in breadth, and is divided into three compartments by fluted Ionic columns, with ornamented capitals and corresponding pilasters. The centre part is thirty-two feet high, and the ceiling is a dome, finished with coffering. In the middle of the building, and opening into the saloon, through a screen of columns, is a spacious gallery or prominade, seventy feet in length, finished with pilasters, and an arched and panelled ceiling. It communicates on one side with the ball room, and on the other with the supper or refreshment room, and the card-saloon. The end of the gallery opens into the banqueting-room: which is of the same dimensions with the ball room, the walls are finished with pilasters, in imitation of Sienna marble, with ornamented capitals. The whole forms a superb suite of rooms, opening into each other by folding doors, and presenting vistas the full length of the building. The expense of erection was £11,500; the foundation-stone was laid on the 26th of April, 1820, by the Right Honable. James, Earl of Fife; the building was designed by the late Archibald Simpson, Esq. The Corn Exchange, erected in 1854, is the property of a joint-stock company; the cost of erection was about £1,000. The market-cross, near the western extremity of Castle-street, cannot be too highly admired, whether as an architectural object or as an antiquarian curiosity. It is of a hexagonal form, with a pillar rising from the centre. In a cornice around the upper part of the structure are twelve compartments for figures cut in relief; ten of these contain the portraits of Scottish monarchs; the last of the series being James VII. in whose time the edifice was completed. This fine erection was once removed by the magistrates as a nuisance, but was afterwards restored by civic authorities of better taste. The market-house, which stands in Market street, is one of the largest and most beautiful buildings of its kind in the kingdom; it was erected by a joint-stock company, and opened in 1842. It contains two floors and north and south galleries. In the west end of the market is a beautiful fountain of polished Peterhead granite. The theatre, in Marischal street, is finished in a very neat style, and has accommodation for about six hundred persons; this erection cost near £3,000. The barracks on the Castle-hill, are fitted up for the convenience of six hundred men, although, according to the usual mode of military accommodation, it is capable of containing double this number: there is an excellent hospital attached to it on an adjoining eminence. The town is admirably paved with granite, well lighted with gas, and plenteously supplied with excellent water, taken from the Dee, about three miles and a half above the village of Banchory; three quarters of a mile is cut through a solid rock from the entrance from the Dee. The arrangements for cleansing the streets and watching the city are fully efficient.

Trade and Commerce.—The port of Aberdeen is admirably adapted for commercial intercourse with the northern parts of Europe, and it also participates in a good share of trade with America and the West Indies.

Early in the seventeenth century, a considerable number of ships, of small tonnage, belonged to the port. A considerable import and export trade was carried on with various parts of the continent, as well as coast trading. The shipping appears to have considerably decayed during the civil wars and visitations of the plague, and no revival took place for many years. In the year 1656 there were only nine vessels of the aggregate amount of 440 tons. In 1692 all the shipping was two galliots of 30 tons burden each! Soon after this time, however, when the affairs of the country got into a more settled state, we find shipping, along with general trade, making considerable progress. In 1788, the number of ships registered was 169, aggregate tonnage, 11,820: and in 1818, the ships registered were 237, tonnage, 36,471. Of late years the number of ships has not so much increased as the tonnage. As an example of tonnage of ships we find that in the year

1656 the average of tonnage per ship was	49
In 1800	78¾
In 1850	210
In 1865	300

By this it will appear that the average size of ships is now six times as great as it was 200 years ago. The great superiority of construction, combining strength, with high sailing qualities, form distinguishing features in our modern mercantile marine. The number of ships, including steamers, registered in the port of Aberdeen was, in 1864, 256: amount of tonnage, about 85,000. Since the year 1810, when the principal improvements in the harbour commenced, there has been expended upon it over £600,000. Notwithstanding that a large portion of trade is absorbed by the railways north and south, the harbour imports and exports are yearly increasing; in some departments; such as the exports in cattle and salmon the sea transit shows a decline. The total revenue for 1864 was £30,723, showing a surplus of £13,226 over expenditure. The revenue in 1851 was £20,189. In the coasting trade during 1864, 1,688 vessels, 270,235 tons have entered inwards, and 1,039 vessels, 197,607 tons cleared outwards, exclusive of lime, stone, &c. Foreign imports were 138 British vessels, 28,213 tons, and Foreign vessels 142, 18,881 tons. Revenue of the customs for the same year, £90,357, showing an increase of £5,000 since 1858.

The fame of the "Clipper Bow," so justly due to the ship builders here, especially to Mr. Hall, who has successfully established his claim to the invention, has spread the fame of Aberdeen shipbuilding to all quarters of the world. From May 1864 to May 1865, there were built and launched 11 ships of the aggregate of 8,385 tons, giving an average of about 780 tons per ship. The salmon fishings on the Dee and Don have for long formed an important branch of industry; but whatever the effect may be of recent legislation in fostering the breed of this fish, the statistics of many bygone years show a marked decline in the produce of the Dee and Don river and coast fishings.

Aberdeen has been the seat of manufacture from a very early period. We find Provost Jaffray, with his coadjutors, establishing a woollen manufactory in 1636, in the Correction Wynd, under the patent of Charles I. for the manufacture of "broad cloth, kerseys, serges, and other coarse cloths." The manufacture of these, and of stockings, had been cultivated so successfully and extensively for some time, that Sir Patrick Drummond, Conservator of Holland, often remarked that "Scotland was more obliged to the town of Aberdeen for returns of money in its export trade than to all the other towns in Scotland." This manufacture, in its various branches, is still extensively carried on. Messrs. Alexander Hadden & Sons, have three establishments—in the Green, at Garlogie Mills, and at Gordon's Mills. Their chief produce is in carpets, tweeds, hosiery, worsted, and woollen yarns. In addition to the material manufactured within their premises, they give partial employment to a great number of women over the country, by giving out worsted to be knitted into hose. Messrs. Crombie, of Grandholm Mills, are also large manufacturers. The manufacture of winceys seems to have been originated with the late firm of Messrs. John Barker and Sons, of Gordon's Mills, and prosecuted with success by Mr. James Clark, the predecessor of Mr. Adam Smith. It is now successfully carried on by at least thirteen firms in Aberdeen. The demand still continues to expand, the quality of the Aberdeen fabrics being found very superior. The only cotton spinning establishment now in Aberdeen is that of Bannermill, belonging to Messrs. Robinson, Crum & Co. The manufacture of tape was carried on for many years by Messrs. Milne, Low & Co. It is now manufactured on an extended scale by Messrs. Shirres, Leslie & Co., of Rosemount Works, Gilcomston, who are the only tape manufacturers north of the Tweed. The manufacture of combs was introduced about the year 1830, by Messrs. Stewart and Rowell, and has been conducted on a very extensive scale since that period, first by the original firm, and latterly by Mr. Stewart and his son. It is also carried on by Messrs. John M'Pherson & Co. Five firms are engaged in the manufacture of preserved provisions. All manner of flesh, fish, soups, vegetables, fruits, &c., and in every form, are preserved in tin cases of all sizes, and of every variety of preparation. The extensive paper works at Stoneywood, carried on by Messrs. Pirie & Sons, were established nearly 100 years ago, and they are the largest manufacturers in Scotland. Messrs. C. Davidson & Son, manufacture very extensively wrapping and packing papers of all kinds, they have also a patent for making paper bags, in which they do a considerable trade. Messrs. Thomas Tait & Son, of Inverury Mills, having lately erected a mill for the manufacture of printing papers.

The chemical works at Sandilands, near the Links, cover several acres of ground, and were begun by Messrs. John Miller & Co., in 1848, for the purpose of working up the Gas Company's liquid products into naptha, creosote oil, asphalte, sulphate of ammonia, &c. But several branches have been added since, the most important of which are the manufacture of artificial manures and paraffine oil. Messrs. Farquhar and Gill, in addition to their painting, plumber and brass works, have for several years been engaged in the manufacture of colour and paint. Their establishment in Drum's Lane consists of six mills, impelled by steam power, producing above 200 tons annually, the demand being considerably on the increase, chiefly in the north of Scotland.

The granite trade may be said to be indigenous to Aberdeen. The greater part of the county, and including portions of the adjoining districts, is composed of igneous rock of all varieties, the quarrying of which commenced about 250 years ago, but made little progress till the year 1741, when a disastrous fire occurring in Aberdeen, burnt down a large number of the wooden houses of which the town was chiefly composed. An act of the magistrates and council was then passed, ordaining the outside walls of dwelling houses to be built of stone or brick. About 1764, the streets of London began to be paved with Aberdeen granite: but it was not till 1795, that larger blocks were required, and machinery began to be applied. Rubislaw Quarries then supplied stones for the Government Docks; and Daneing Cairn, which began to be wrought about this time, supplied granite for Union Bridge, and the new street extensions of the city. Subsequently, the demand has considerably increased, as granite is used extensively in the construction of bridges, docks, and other public works, in addition to the continued requirements of the London streets. There are about 20 quarries in operation in the district, yielding granite of various colour and quality; above 600 men are employed, and 50 to 60 horses. The quantity of stone quarried annually is about 53,000 tons, 35,000 of which is exported chiefly from this port. The trade is estimated to be increasing at the rate of about 500 tons annually. The facilities afforded by railways in lessening the expense of carriage from the quarries will tend to increase the demand, as the superiority of the granite becomes better known. The granite polishing has now acquired large dimensions here. About 45 years ago, the late Mr. Macdonald was the first to apply machinery to the cutting and polishing of granite. The present firm, Messrs. Macdonald, Field & Co., had the honour to supply the enormous granite sarcophagus (30 tons in weight), now containing the remains of his late Royal Highness the Prince Consort, in the Royal mausoleum at Frogmore, besides a smaller one for H.R.H. the Duchess of Kent; they are yearly extending their large premises to meet the ever increasing demand for architectural decoration. Mr. Wright, of John street, Mr. Keith, of King street, and Mr. Frazer, of Broadford, with other firms, do considerable business. The process of all their operations is by steam machinery. From 7,000 to 8,000 tons of granite per annum are used for polishing purposes at the various works. The demand for polished granite increases every year, and orders for architectural, general, and monumental purposes come from all parts of the world to the Granite City.

There are three Joint Stock Companies for the manufacture and sale of agricultural materials. The "Commercial," the "Lime," and the "Northern Agricultural," each of them having steam mills for pulverizing bones. The latter, in addition, carries on the manufacture of oilcake, linseed oil, rape oil, &c. There are two establishments for the manufacture of agricultural implements. Three brick and tile manufacturing companies, three soap and candle manufactories, and four coach builders, and many large establishments are connected with the shipping, manufactories, and railways, of which our space prevents us from giving detail. The iron and metal works employ a large number of skilled workmen; there are seven or eight engineering establishments and three foundries, with other works connected with shipping—sail and rope works, chain works, boiler making, &c., &c. Apart from the import of foreign timber, there is a large business carried on in home-grown wood, from the upper districts of Aberdeenshire. Deeside fir has been a staple article in Aberdeen from time immemorial. Many hundred thousand trees have been wafted down in rafts, and now the rail forms a formidable competitor in the transit

The first banking company was formed in Aberdeen in 1752. It was begun on a limited scale, but was soon after relinquished: the "Aberdeen Banking Company" (now merged into the Union Bank of Scotland) was formed in 1766, and still continues to do a large business, both in the town and over the north, in connection with that bank. There are at present two native banks, both doing a large business, while their numerous branches, extend their connection over the northern counties—the Town and County Bank, established in 1825, the North of Scotland Bank, in 1836; there are likewise seven branch banks. The National Security Savings Bank, for the accommodation of depositors of smaller sums, has been in operation for a long period. Aberdeen is the head station of two highly respectable insurance companies, namely, the "Scottish Provincial," established in 1825, and the "Northern," in 1836: and there are also two Sea Insurance Companies. Many very excellent inns afford accommodation to various grades and travellers—the commercial man, the tourist, or the family passing through, will find a domicile suited to their respective desires, and their means.

A regular communication is maintained with London, Edinburgh, Newcastle, and the Orkneys, by steam packets, a species of conveyance which has done more to lay open the north-east shore of Scotland to improvements from the south than any other means. In addition to the above, there exists the means of rapid transit on land by the Scottish, North Eastern, and Scottish Central railways, and by the Dundee and Arbroath lines to all parts south of Aberdeen; and access is given to the north by the Great North of Scotland railway, open to Bonar Bridge, in Ross-shire. The Dee Side line to Banchory was opened in 1853, and is now extended to Braemar. The Formartine and Buchan, opened in 1862, to Peterhead and Frazerburgh. There are other lines of railways in Aberdeenshire, a list of which will be found under public buildings. Of other conveyances the Directory furnishes full information.

The Municipal Government.—The burghal constitution of Aberdeen has undergone various alterations since its first establishment. The original magistracy consisted of an alderman, four baillies, and a common council, chosen by the inhabitants; subsequently this arrangement gave way before the gradual and perfect introduction of a self-electing system. From the year 1817 until 1826, the city revenues were gathered by and dispensed under the control of trustees, for behoof of creditors. The credit of the burgh may now be considered as good as that of any other in the kingdom. In 1855 its revenues produced a surplus of £2,964, being a larger sum that the entire revenue thirty-five years before. The government of the city is now regulated by the Municipal Reform Act, and the corporate body consists of a provost, four baillies, a dean of guild, and a treasurer, with a council of seven deacons of the incorporated trades. The police establishment consists of a board of eighteen commissioners, of which the provost, the dean of guild, the treasurer of the city and the convenor of the trades are commissioners ex-officiis. The circuit court of justiciary for the counties of Aberdeen, Banff, and Kincardine is held in Aberdeen in the months of April and September, for the trial of criminal cases, at which one or two lords of justiciary preside; and here also appeals from inferior courts, in civil cases, are decided. A sheriff's court is held every Wednesday and Friday; a burgh baillie court every Saturday: a justice of peace court quarterly, and their small debt court every fortnight. A sheriff's small debt court, and a commissary court also sit at stated periods. The city returns one member to the imperial parliament. Aberdeen confers the title of Earl on a branch of the noble family of Gordon, which was distinguished for its active loyalty to the crown in the seventeenth century.

Municipal, Benevolent, Literary, Scientific, &c. Institutions.—The municipal institutions consist of seven incorporated trades:—1st, the Hammermen, incorporated September, 1519: 2nd, the Bakers, recognised as a company as early as the year 1398; 3rd, the Wrights and Coopers, who obtained their original seal of cause on the 5th of August, 1527; 4th, the Tailors, who were recognised in a corporate capacity about the year 1511; 5th, the Shoe Makers, acknowledged as a corporated body in the years 1484 and 1520; 6th, the Weavers—the deacons of this corporation were approved by the council and sworn into office in the year 1449; and, 7th, the Fleshers or Butchers; these originally dealt in fish as well as flesh, but were prohibited, in the year 1518, from practising more trades than one; they received a seal of cause in 1534. The affairs of each corporation are under the direction of a deacon, box-master, and masters, who are chosen annually. In the year 1609, a common fund was instituted by the corporations, intending to afford pecuniary relief to members contributing to it, if they should happen to be reduced to indigence. The Advocates Hall is in Union street. This society was erected into a corporate body in 1774, and had their privileges confirmed in more ample terms in 1799. A library, principally on law subjects, was established in 1786; it contains about four thousand volumes. The number of members belonging to this institution is about 140. Among several clubs formed in this city, the "Union Club," the "Royal Northern Club," and the "Spalding Club," are the principal. There is the Athenæum in Union Buildings, and there are several well-stored circulating libraries. The Mechanics' Institute, in Market street, was erected in 1824; it is in the Italian style of architecture, and contains a good library, and reading room, and news rooms, &c. The various institutions of a charitable, social, educational, and humane character, are numerous and well supported. A list of all such will be seen under the head "Public Buildings," &c.; whilst those most prominent, or otherwise remarkable, have been, or will be, more particularly described. Six newspapers are issued weekly from the Aberdeen press—their titles and other particulars are given in their place. The first almanack ever printed in Scotland was published in Aberdeen, in 1677, by a printer named John Forbes; it was entitled "A New Prognosticator, calculated for North Britain." He sold fifty thousand copies annually, and the price of each was only a plack, or the third part of a penny sterling. His success induced the publication of pirated editions at Edinburgh, which were very properly put down by the court of session, and for many years the town enjoyed a complete monopoly in the sale of almanacks.

Places of Worship.—East and West Churches.—These form one building, and occupy the site of the ancient parish church of St. Nicholas, which was probably first built about the middle of the twelfth century. The original church was progressively built at various periods, and the only part of the fabric now remaining is the transept, with the superincumbent belfry and steeple.—The present West Church occupies the site of the ancient nave, and was erected about a century ago, from a design by the celebrated architect Gibbs, a native of Aberdeen. It is in the Italian style, and accommodates about 1,700 persons. There are several monuments in it worthy of attention, particularly one to the memory of Mrs. Allardyce, of Dunnottar, which is a splendid specimen of the talents of Bacon.—The old East Church, founded in 1477, which it was deemed necessary to take down, stood on the site of the original chancel of the church. The new church, from a design by the late Mr. Archibald Simpson, is built of granite, on the foundations of the old one, and is a beautifully chaste specimen of the simple Gothic style. It is calculated to accommodate 1,700 persons, and is so constructed that the pulpit is visible from every sitting. The roof of the interior is lofty, and adorned with the appropriate ornaments of the antique Gothic hall. The building combines, in an eminent degree, convenience of arrangement with simple elegance of design.—The South Church is situate in Belmont-street, and is calculated to accommodate 1,600 persons. It is in the Gothic style, and is distinguished by a handsome and lofty tower, which forms a striking object in the approach from the south.—The North Church, placed in King-street, is a handsome building, in the Grecian order, executed in finely dressed granite; it will seat a congregation of 1,200.—Old Machar Church, at the north extremity of Old Aberdeen, in the parish of Old Machar, consists of the nave of a cathedral founded by Bishop Alexander Kyninmunde II., about the middle of the fourteenth century. The ceiling is of the finest oak, of excellent and curious workmanship, and may vie with anything of the kind in Scotland. It consists of three compartments of square panels, joining at the opposite angular points. On these panels are painted the arms and titles of the princes, nobles, and prelates who contributed towards the expense of the building. Along the top of the walls, on the south side, are inscribed the names of the successive sovereigns from Malcolm II. to Queen Mary. On the north side are the names of the several bishops, from Nectanus to William Gordon—the last Roman Catholic prelate. All these inscriptions, as well as those on the roof, are painted in the old black Saxon character. This church, within these few years has been renovated in a very tasteful style.—Saint Clement's Church, or Foot Dee Church, has a tower forty five feet high, with a clock presented by the magistrates.—Greyfriars or College Church, which stands on the east of Broad street, near Marischal College, is said to have been erected by Bishop Dunbar, for the Grey friars, about the beginning of the sixteenth century, and is now the only church in town where the Roman Catholic worship was performed previously to the Reformation.—Saint Paul's Chapel was erected in 1721, for the accommodation of such of the Episcopalians as refused to submit to the jurisdiction of the Scottish bishops. It contains sittings for 1,000 persons.—Saint Andrew's, or Scotch Episcopalian Chapel, is an elegant edifice, built in 1813; in it is performed the service of the Church of England. It occupies the centre of the east side of King-street; the gable or end fronts the street, presenting a centre and side aisles, the corners of which are ornamented with lofty octagonal turrets, those on each side of the entrance being upwards of eighty feet in height. The turrets are finished with panelling and richly crocketed pinnacles. The entrance gate is embellished with clustered columns and crocketed mouldings and the windows are finished with tracery in a corresponding style. The interior presents a simple style of Gothic architecture, corresponding with the entrance front. At the west end is a large and fine-toned organ, underneath which is a handsome monument to the memory of the late Bishop Skinner.—Saint John's Chapel, in Saint Mary's place, for Scotch Episcopalians, has a small spire on the north end, and will contain about 500 persons; the interior has undergone much alteration and repair.—The new Catholic Church (of the Assumption), in Huntly st, was consecrated on the 16th of March, 1859 Longitudinally the church is almost east and west, with a nave, north and south aisles, north and south porches, and a tower, with a spire, at the west corner, one hundred and seventy feet high. The sanctuary, situated at the east end, forms a continuation of the nave. On each side of the sanctuary are vestries; and in advance of the high altar, which is raised seven steps, are two side altars under lofty arched recesses, formed in the east end of the aisles. Internally the dimensions of the church are—one hundred and fifty feet in length sixty-nine feet wide, and sixty-nine feet high from the floor to the apex of the roof, and it will comfortably seat 1500 persons. The principal entrance is from Huntly street, and above this entrance is the large west window, which is thirty feet high by fifteen in width, with tracery and sculptured figures in the centre. On the north side is the priest's house, and on the south a convent, the schools running backwards from the convent along the wall of the south aisle—all having access by a doorway to the church—the whole of which (the arcade excepted) is built of Aberdeen granite. The cost of erection was £12,000., the architect being Alexander Ellis, Esq. There is in connection with the church a very handsome schoolhouse, in Constitution street, erected in 1832, in which are educated Catholic children belonging to the congregation. In addition to these places of worship, there are others belonging to various denominations, for the names and situations of which we must refer our readers to the list given at a subsequent page, where will be found also the name of the officiating minister.

University, Colleges, Schools, &c.—The two colleges which now form the university of Aberdeen are very ancient seminaries of learning, King's College, in Old Aberdeen, and Marischal College, situate in Broad-street. The former was first instituted in the year 1494, by a bull of Pope Alexander VI. dated at Rome, February 10. The original foundation charter is still extant in the charter chest of the college. The library, to which all the students have free access, is a very valuable collection of books; the museum, also for their use, is furnished with an extensive assemblage of Greek and Roman coins, specimens of mineralogy and zoology, fine engravings, and a good assortment of most things interesting in natural history. The students wear a scarlet cloth gown, but do not reside within the college. The building forms a quadrangular court; the east end is a plain structure, containing the public hall, and class-rooms underneath; the north-east corner is a lofty building of six storeys. On the north side are the public school and library hall. On the south-west corner is a lofty square tower, strengthened by buttresses, and covered with a flat roof, having on the top a parapet, over which springs from each of its corners a slip of stone-work highly ornamented. These slips meet at the top, and form four open arches, in imitation of an imperial crown. On the top of this is a stone lantern, surmounted by another imperial crown of stone work, with a globe and cross. The tower formerly contained peal of thirteen bells. The south side of the court consists of a plain building, one hundred and twelve feet long, with a piazza underneath; there was anciently a round tower at each end, but one only now remains. The common hall is ornamented with portraits of Bishops Elphiston, Dunbar, &c. The erection of these buildings commenced about the year 1500.

The Marischal College was founded and endowed by George, Earl Marischal of Scotland, by charter dated the 2nd day of April, 1583. This college is now joined to King's College, under the title of the University of Aberdeen. Some years since the old college, which was inconvenient, was taken down, and a grant obtained from government for the erection of a new one immediately adjoining. The foundation stone was laid in 1837, and the building finished in 1841; at a cost of £21,240. Of this sum government granted £15,000, and the balance was raised by public subscription. The new college is a spacious, elegant, and convenient building, in the Gothic style, from a design by the late Mr. Archibald Simpson, architect. It forms three sides of a square of one hundred feet. From the centre of the middle compartment springs a lofty tower, surmounted by an observatory; the public hall and museum extending the whole length of one of the sides—the approach to them is by a noble staircase of polished granite. The philosophical apparatus belonging to this college is perhaps the finest and most extensive in the kingdom.

The Grammar School is a new and handsome building at the west end of the town. It is in the old Scotch baronial style, and was built in 1863, at a cost of about £15,000, from plans drawn by James Matthews, Aberdeen. It contains a large public school, 80 feet by 40 feet, lofty, airy, and well lighted; five class rooms on the ground floor for the classical department, and four class rooms for arithmetic, writing, and modern languages; the library and reading room is in the upper storey. The school is of very ancient origin, the first recorded date being as far back as 1262. There are nearly 30 Bursaries, in connection with the school, for the education of poor scholars, and in 1634, Dr. Patrick Dunn left a handsome bequest for the better payment of the masters. Many eminent men have received there education here, among whom may be mentioned Lord Byrom, 1797; Sir James M'Gregor, 1784; David Wedderburn, 1602; Thomas Reid, private secretary to James VI., Dr. James Dunn, Dr. James Melvin, &c.—The Free Church Divinity Hall is a beautiful building in the Elizabethan style of architecture, erected in 1850, at a cost of £2,000. In this hall the Aberdeen Presbytery of the Free Church hold their stated meetings.—Robert Gordon's Hospital, School hill, is a spacious buildings, standing on the ground anciently possessed by the Dominican friars, and having an extensive piece of ground in front. It consists of a centre or main building, and two wings. The original structure occupies the greater part of the centre, and is three storeys in height, having a small but neat spire rising from it. The hall, on the second floor, is thirty feet by twenty feet wide, and twelve feet high. This building was erected in 1739, after a design by Gibbs, at an expense of £3,300. The remaining part of the centre and the wings are new, and were completed in 1832, from a design by the late John Smith, Esq., architect, at an expense of about £13,000. The new erection is in the Grecian style of architecture, presenting a chaste and elegant appearance. The more ancient part has been altered to correspond, and a collonade now traverses the building from the old house to the projecting fronts at the ends of the wings. The ground in front, which is tastefully laid out, much improves the appearance of the edifice. There are generally one hundred and fifty boys in the institution, but there is accommodation for one hundred more. The sum originally bequeathed was £10,000; this was invested in land of constantly increasing value, so that at the present time the annual revenue is about £4,000. The object of the charity is to maintain and educate the sons and grandsons of decayed burgesses; they are admitted between the ages of eight and eleven, and remain until they are fifteen. A Trade's Hospital was founded in 1632 by Dr. Gould, one of the town's ministers, afterwards Principal of King's College, and in the year 1633 the same gentleman granted to the members of the town's corporations the monastery and other property, which had formerly belonged to the monks of the Holy Trinity, for the benefit of their indigent brethren; the town council also gave 1,000 merks, and the different corporations made liberal contributions. The new buildings were designed by the late John Smith, Esq., city architect, and erected in 1846-7, the old building, with the ground, &c. having been sold to the Aberdeen Railway Company, in 1845. The Royal Infirmary, which is situated on the Woolman hill, is a modern erection, and consists of a central compartment and projecting wings, the length in front being about one hundred and fifty feet, and the breadth one hundred and twelve. The building rises to the height of three lofty storeys, the lowest containing the requisite offices for the establishment, and the other floors, wards and private apartments. There is accommodation for three hundred patients. One of the wings is so contrived that it may be used as a separate fever hospital. In the centre of the upper part of the front is a spacious operation room, lighted from above through a dome thirty feet in diameter. The whole is designed in a simple style of Grecian architecture, and executed in dressed granite. From the elegance of the design and the beauty of the materials, as well as the situation of the building, it forms an ornamental feature of the city from various points of view, and is allowed to be a highly creditable proof of the skill of the architect, the late A. Simpson, Esq., to whose talents the city is indebted for some of its most tasteful public buildings and private mansions.—The Lunatic Asylum consists of two buildings, one of which was raised in 1800, the other in 1819. The insufficiency of the old building for the purposes of the institution rendering the erection of a more spacious and commodious one necessary, an adjoining field of three acres was purchased, and an elegant edifice erected according to a plan given by the architect of the infirmary—the late Archibald Simpson, Esq. Since that period it has received additions, under the superintendence of William Ramage, Esq., architect.—The Asylum for the Blind, situated in Huntly street, was endowed by Miss Cruickshank, and opened in 1843; there is accommodation for forty inmates. The funds of this charity received an important accession from the bequest of the late Miss Janet Walker, of Kirkhill. Several trades are taught, as the making of baskets, mats, rope, twine, and weaving, &c.—The Institution for the Education of the Deaf and Dumb is in Belmont street, and is principally supported by voluntary contributions. The average number of pupils of both sexes is thirty.—The Poor's Hospital for boys is in Upper Kirkgate; that for the girls in the Gallowgate.—The Medical Society's Hall, King-street, has a handsome front, with a portico of four Ionic columns. It contains a library and museum, a large room for the meetings of the society, committee-rooms, &c. It was built in 1818, at a cost of £2,000, from the plan of the architect of the Infirmary. In the hall are some portraits; among the rest, an original painting of Harvey, by Vandyke; there are also two by T. Giles, Esq., R.A. which are both favourable specimens of the skill of this distinguished native artist.

The weekly markets are held on Tuesday and Friday, and the annual fairs are Paschal market, on the last Wednesday in April (old style); and Wednesday after the third Tuesday in October; (feeing) markets Friday before the 26th of May, Friday before and after 22nd November; and (wool) markets last Thursday and Friday in June, and Thursday and Friday of first and second week in July: (timber) the last Wednesday in August.

Old Aberdeen stands about a mile to the north of the city, on an eminence on the south bank of the river Don, in the parish of Old Machar, of which it is the capital. Formerly this town was the seat of the Bishop of Aberdeen, but it now derives its only importance from King's College and the Cathedral. Its charter was renewed by George I, when a power was conferred of electing its own magistrates, which are now provost, three baillies, a treasurer, and council, with the deacons of six incorporated trades. The principal curiosity in the neighbourhood is the old bridge, which crosses the river Don by one Gothic pointed arch—the only structure of the kind in Scotland, if not in the United Kingdom. Mr. Kennedy, in his "Annals of Aberdeen," states it to have been erected by Robert Bruce. The parish of Old Machar lies in the peninsula between the Dee and the Don, where they join the ocean; its length is about seven or eight miles, and its greatest breadth four. The land rises in a gentle slope from the sea, and is beautifully diversified by undulating grounds. The windings of the Dee and Don—the manufactories and the woods on the banks of the latter, interspersed with many gentlemen's seats and villas, together with the numerous admirable prospects of the sea—impart a pleasing variety to the general appearance of the parish. Great improvements in agriculture, at a very considerable expense, have been effected, which have been the means materially to enhance the value of the land, and beautify the neighbourhood of Aberdeen

NIGG is a parish in Kincardineshire situated near the termination of the ridge of the Grampian mountains. It is bounded by the Dee on the north, which separates it from Aberdeen on the east, and on the south and west by Banchory-Davenick; it extends four miles in length by two in breadth. The coast is bold and rocky; the north-east point, called Girdleness, is a remarkable promontory, forming the south side of the estuary of the Dee. There is a small bay called the bay of Nigg, at the head of which stands the parish church. The district contains the fishing village of TORRY, which has a small harbour and pier, and also the village of COVE.

ALFORD,

GLENBUCKET, STRATHDON, KEIG, KILDRUMMY, MIDMARR, TOUGH, TOWIE, AND TULLYNESSLE WITH FORBES.

ALFORD is a village and parish—the former the seat of a presbytery, is 27 miles from Aberdeen, and 18 from Huntly, and it is the terminus of the Alford Valley Line, a branch of the Great North of Scotland Railway. The parish is seven miles in length, and about three in breadth. Markets are held on the first Tuesday of every month. The half-yearly feeing markets being held on the Mondays before the 26th May, and the 22nd November.

KEIG, a small parish intersected by the Don, is nearly of a circular form, and between three and four miles in diameter. Castle Forbes, the seat of Lord Forbes, is in this parish, surrounded by thriving plantations, besides a natural wood of considerable extent. The seat commands a fine view of the windings of the river Don for many miles. The parish is about twenty-five miles from Aberdeen.

GLENBUCKET is a small Highland parish in the district of Marr, 29 miles from Huntly, situated on both sides the Bucket, a tributary stream to the Don, and extending four miles in length by about one in breadth. The ruins of Badenyon House, alluded to in the popular Scotch song of John of Badenyon, are in this parish.

STRATHDON parish lies between those of Glenbucket and Kildrummy. The land in this district is for the most part fertile, and tolerably well cultivated, although its surface is irregular.

KILDRUMMY parish lies in a valley, distant 35 miles from Aberdeen and 16 from Huntly. The castle of Kildrummy, which anciently belonged to David, Earl of Huntingdon and Garioch, was a seat of King Robert Bruce, and served as a place of retreat to his queen in the winter of 1306; it is a ruin of great antiquity, and appears to have been strongly fortified, having subterraneous passages and concealments. It was distinguished by its seven towers, one of which, from the whiteness of its stones, was called the Snow Tower: these ruins cover an acre of ground. Markets are held on the first Tuesday in February, the 26th of May (F. M.), first Tuesday in July (O. S.), and the Thursday after the second Tuesday in August (O. S.)

MIDMARR parish, 15 miles from Aberdeen, is about four miles and a half in length and four in breadth. The Vale of Corrichie, near the southern boundary, is well known as the scene of a battle, fought during the reign of Queen Mary, when the contending parties were headed by the Marquis of Huntly and the Earl of Murray. The principal eminence in this part is the Hill of Fare, which rises nearly eighteen hundred feet above the level of the sea.

TOUGH parish is 23 miles from Huntly and 22 from Aberdeen. Several druidical temples may be seen in this district, one of which, on the hill about two miles from the church, still retains the name of the Old Kirk of Tough.

The parish of TOWIE is 23 miles from Huntly, and is watered by the Don, which flows through it from east to west. The general appearance of the country is hilly, and the eminences are mostly covered with heath.

TULLYNESSLE and FORBES, parishes united, lie 27 miles from Aberdeen and 18 from Huntly, on the north bank of the Don. The appearance of the country is hilly, or rather mountainous; some of the hills are of considerable altitude, and game is abundant.

POST OFFICE, ALFORD, William Hay, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive at five minutes before ten morning, and at ten minutes before seven evening, and are despatched at a quarter past seven morning and five minutes past four afternoon.

AUCHTERLESS, FORGUE, MONTQUHITTER,

CUMINESTOWN, GARMOND AND INVERKEITHNY.

AUCHTERLESS, a parish situate about midway between Aberdeen and Banff, is about seven miles long and three broad; the soil is generally productive, and is watered by the river Ythan. The vestiges of an extensive fortified camp, the enclosed area of which is computed at one hundred and twenty acres, are well worthy the attention of the antiquary.

FORGUE is a parish nine miles in length, and its greatest breadth about six; its situation is north-west of Huntly, and it is intersected by two rivulets, the Fendraught and the Forgue. The soil in the lower parts produces good crops, but towards the south the ground is mostly covered with heath. On several of the estates much has been done in planting and improving the wastes. The celebrated Glendronach distillery is situated in this parish.

MONTQUHITTER is a parish, extending about nine miles from north to south, and six from east to west; bounded by Turriff on the west, King Edward on the north, New Deer on the east, and Fyvie on the south. The surface is uneven, and arable in the lower parts; the district was once very mossy and moorish, but has been considerably improved. The parish is watered by two small rivers; one of these discharges itself into the Ythan, and the other into the Deveron; both abound with delicious trout. CUMINESTOWN and GARMOND are two villages in this parish.

INVERKEITHNY, a parish in the south-eastern corner of Banffshire, lies on the right, or south bank of the Deveron, along which, it extends about six miles, and measures from one to four miles in breadth. Marnoch bounds it on the north, Turriff and Auchterless on the east, Forgue on the south, and Rothiemay on the west. The district is chiefly hilly and pastoral.

POST OFFICE, AUCHTERLESS, George Dingwall, Post Master.—Letters arrive at one afternoon, and are despatched at six evening.

Post Office, CUMINESTOWN, John Lamb, Post Master.—Letters arrive (from Turriff), at one afternoon, and are despatched thereto at half-past four morning.

Post Office, FORGUE, Alexander Stewart, Post Master.—Letters arrive (from Huntly), at seven evening, and are despatched thereto in the morning at six.

CRATHIE AND BRAEMAR, WITH CASTLETOWN.

CRATHIE, or Crathy, is an extensive mountainous parish, in the heart of Marr, among the Grampian mountains, incorporating the suppressed parish of BRAEMAR; jointly they comprise a territory forty miles in length and twenty in breadth. This district is supposed to be more elevated above the level of the sea, and farther distant from the coast in every direction, than any other parochial section in Scotland. On some of the mountains snow may be found all the year round. Ben-Macduie, four thousand three hundred feet in height, is among the stupendous eminences in this quarter. Nearly the whole of this district was once covered with wood, and was called the Forest of Marr, which, with those of the Duke of Athol in Perthshire, and the Duke of Gordon in Badenoch and Glenaven, constituted the principal part of the great Caledonian forest. In Brae-mar a considerable portion of the wood still remains, which is well stocked with deer. Balmoral Castle, the highland residence of Her Majesty Queen Victoria, and Lochmuich a shooting-box belonging to His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales are in this parish; and many seats of the nobility and gentry embellish this interesting locality—LOCHNAGAR too, so famed for its whisky distillery, is likewise in Crathie parish. The principal lakes are Loch Callader and Loch Brotachan, which contain trout, salmon and eels. The great military road from Blairgowrie to Fort George passes through the whole extent. On this line is the village of CASTLETOWN, near which are the ruins of an old castle, said to have been a hunting seat of King Malcolm Canmore. The village is divided by the river Cluny—the one side of the water, called AUCHENDRYNE, belonging to the Earl of Fife, the other to Mr. Farquharson, of Invercauld. At a short distance from Castletown is the castle of Braemar, once garrisoned by King William, and burnt in the contest which took place between the royal forces and the Earl of Marr; it was rebuilt in 1749, and till within the last few years was occupied by Government troops, to prevent the smuggling which was so frequent in this district. This part contains inexhaustible quarries of limestone and fine slate.

CRIMOND, LONMAY, RATHEN, AND ST. FERGUS.

CRIMOND is a parish lying at an equal distance from the towns of Fraserburgh and Peterhead, upon the coast of Buchan, with a front to the German Ocean, of about three miles in breadth, which declines to a point, inland, at the distance of rather more than five miles. Rattray Head is on this coast, a very dangerous promontory. Near the east end of the lake Strathbog, is a small hill, called the Castle hill, where Comyn, Earl of Buchan, had a castle. About a hundred years ago, there was a communication between the loch of Strathbog and the sea; and a harbour at the east end, close to the castle, for small craft: in one night the mouth of the harbour was filled up by the drifting of sand, and the communication has been interrupted ever since. On this harbour formerly stood the burgh of Rattray.

The parish of LONMAY has about four miles of seacoast, is ten miles long, and nearly four broad. The soil is various, but generally fertile; and there are two fishing villages on the estate of Mr. Gordon, of Buthlaw. A considerable branch of the Ugie passes through the parish, which abounds in limestone.

RATHEN parish is about three miles distant from Fraserburgh, about seven miles long, at a medium of two in breadth; it possesses two creeks, on each of which is built a fishing village. There are two old castles in ruins, at Cairnbuilg and Inverallochie, which seem to have been places of considerable strength. This parish is destitute of growing timber, though large masses of oak are occasionally dug up from morasses.

ST. FERGUS, a village and parish, though locally situate on the coast of Aberdeenshire, is in that part of the district of Buchan which belongs to the county of Banff. It is bounded on the east by the North Sea, and on the south by the small river Ugie, which separates it from Peterhead—the village is five miles distant from that town, and thirteen from Fraserburgh. The great Field Marshall Keith was born in 1696, at Inverugie Castle, the ruins of which, in a bend of the river, still attract the notice of the traveller.

POST OFFICE, CRIMOND, William Pirie, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Peterhead), at a quarter past twelve noon, and are despatched thereto at half-past one afternoon.

Money Orders are granted and paid here.

Post Office, ST. FERGUS, Alexander Walker, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Peterhead), at five minutes before eleven morning, and are despatched thereto at ten minutes before three afternoon.

CARRIERS.

To & from PETERHEAD & FRASERBURGH. William Willocks, jun. and William Willocks, sen. from Crimond, on Friday

ECHT,

DRUMOAK, KINNELLAR, BLACKBURN, NEWHILLS, PETERCULTER, AND SKENE.

ECHT, a parish 12 miles west of Aberdeen, is about five miles in length, and the same in breadth; it is a hilly district, but having a large proportion of the land under cultivation. In this parish is Dunecht House, the property of the Earl of Crawford and Balcarres, the present residence of Lord Lindsay. Fairs are held on the first Monday in every month, with the following exceptions—the second Monday in May, the day before Michael fair in October, and the second Tuesday in November.

DRUMOAK parish is chiefly in Aberdeenshire, having a small portion in Kincardineshire: it is about four miles long, and about the same in breadth. The surface is hilly, a great part being fit only for sheep-pasture; while the arable land is shallow, and produces but moderate crops. There are two stations here on the Dee Side Line. The tower of Drum is a very ancient edifice.

KINNELLAR is a small parish, on the south side of the Don, on the Inverness road, distant from Aberdeen about eight miles and a half; and comprises an irregular assemblage of hills of considerable elevation, the summits of which, are covered with small plantations of firs. The village of BLACKBURN is in this parish.

NEWHILLS parish is of an irregular hexagonal form, six miles and a half in diameter, distant from Aberdeen five miles, the river Don forming its boundary on the north-east. The general appearance of the country is hilly, and towards the west becomes mountainous. In this parish are the extensive paper mills of Messrs. Alexander Pirie & Sons, and Messrs. Charles Davidson & Sons, of Muggiemoss Mills, and three corn mills.

PETERCULTER parish is about eight miles in length, and six in breadth; the surface is rugged and uneven, with hills and valleys, rocky eminences and marshy flats, interspersed. On the banks of the Dee, and its tributary streams, however, the soil is tolerably fertile. On the summit of the hills of Oldtown, are the remains of a rectangular encampment. The Dee Side Railway Company have three stations in the parish. In this parish are paper mills belonging to the Culter Mills Paper Company, Limited, and the woollen manufactory of Mr. Edmund Chadwick.

SKENE parish is about eight miles from Aberdeen, the same number of miles in length, and four at its extreme breadth. On the south is the Luchar burn, a tributary stream of the Dee, issuing from Loch Skene, a small lake; and in a north west direction, thence, is Skene House, belonging to the Earl of Fife—an elegant country residence, surrounded by some thriving plantations, now occupied by Sir John Dick. In this parish is an extensive spinning and carding mill, worked by Messrs. Alexander Hadden & Sons: these gentlemen have benevolently founded a very excellent school. For the churches of these several parishes, and their ministers, see places of worship. A fair is held on the Tuesday before Easter.

POST OFFICE, DRUMOAK, Elizabeth C. Myle, Post Mistress.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Aberdeen), at half-past eight morning and at nineteen minutes past five afternoon; and are despatched at five minutes past nine morning and at three afternoon.

Post Office, ECHT, William Malcolm, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Aberdeen), at five minutes past eight morning, and are despatched thereto at ten morning.

Post Office, NEWHILLS, James Fyfe, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Aberdeen), at half-past five morning and afternoon at half-past two; and are despatched thereto at twenty minutes past ten morning and at ten minutes to three afternoon. On Sundays letters arrive at half-past five and are despatched every morning at twelve minutes before eleven only.

Post Office, BLACKBURN, parish of Kinnellar, John Scott, Post Master.—Letters arrive (from Aberdeen), at fifteen minutes before ten morning and at thirty-five minutes past two afternoon; and are despatched thereto at eight morning.

Post Office, PETERCULTER, Margaret Thomson, Post Mistress.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Aberdeen), at a quarter past eight morning and at twenty minutes past five afternoon; and are despatched at sixteen minutes past nine morning and at ten minutes past three afternoon.

Post Office, SKENE, Jane Hogg, Post Mistress.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Aberdeen), at nine minutes past six morning, and are despatched at ten minutes past two afternoon.

ELLON, BELHELVIE, CRUDEN, FOVERAN, NEWBURGH,

AND LOGIE BUCHAN.

ELLON parish extends about nine miles in length from north to south, and five in breadth; the surface is uneven, and there are some rising grounds, the heights of which are considerable. The village of Ellon is about 16 miles N. E. of Aberdeen, pleasantly situated on the Ythan, which is crossed here by a handsome bridge. Upon the river, which is navigable for large boats, within half a mile of the village, a trade in coal and corn is carried on of some importance; and the monetary affairs of the district are facilitated by three highly respectable banking establishments—they are branches, respectively, of the 'Union Banking Company;' the 'Aberdeen Town and County Bank;' and the 'North of Scotland Bank.' The Esslemont Brick and Tile Company's works are in this parish. A small debt-court is held here four times a year, for adjudicating claims of debts, not exceeding £5. The places of worship are, Established and Free churches, and others for United Presbyterian and Episcopal congregations. There are several public schools in the parish—chiefly parochial. The market is held on the first Monday in each month, also on Tuesday after the 11th of May, and on the Wednesday after the 12th of November.

BELHELVIE is a coast parish in the district of Formarten, eight miles from Aberdeen. The aspect of the country is very unfavourable, especially at a distance from the sea coast, where it exhibits nothing but heath and stones; towards the sea, however, there is some arable land.

CRUDEN parish lies on the east coast of Buchan district, and extends from eight to nine miles along the shore, and about seven miles inland. The soil is various; a large proportion being a deep rich clay, while the remainder is light and gravelly, with some mosses. Slaines castle, the seat of the Earl of Errol, a large edifice, on a precipice overhanging the sea, is in this parish. In the village, which is about eight miles from Peterhead, is an Episcopal chapel.

The parish of FOVERAN extends four miles in length from east to west, and about two in breadth; distant from Aberdeen ten miles, and from Belhelvie two. Its general appearance is level; but the ground rises by a gradual ascent from the sea, though not to any considerable height. The soil varies from sand to a rich loam and strong clay, the whole of which is arable. The Ythan, navigable for about three miles, forms the boundary of the north. At the mouth of the river is the small village of NEWBURGH, in which a considerable trade is carried on, in grain, lime, bones, and guano. In this parish are to be seen the ruins of several ancient castles and chapels.

LOGIE BUCHAN, a parish giving name to a district, is about four miles in length, from one and a half to two and a half in breadth; and is thirteen miles from Aberdeen, and three from Ellon. It is divided into two parts by the river Ythan, to the right of which stands the parish kirk. The surface of the country is tolerably level, and presents capabilities of cultivation, the soil being in general fertile. The Ythan is navigable with the tide, for small boats, to the extent of three miles up the country—which is of material advantage to the agriculturists, by supplying them with lime. At TIPPERTY, in this parish, are extensive brick and tile works, carried on by Mr. William Forbes.

POST OFFICE, ELLON, John Rae, Post Master.—Letters arrive from Aberdeen at half-past seven morning and at twenty minutes past three afternoon; and are despatched thereto at a quarter past ten morning, and at thirteen minutes past six evening. Letters arrive from Peterhead, Fraserburgh, and Mentley at five minutes before eleven morning and in the evening at seven; and are despatched at five minutes before seven morning and afternoon at eighteen minutes before three (to Fraserburgh and Peterhead only.) Letters from Cruden and Burnes arrive at ten morning, and are despatched at twenty minutes before four afternoon.

Money Orders are granted and paid from nine morning till six evening.

Post Office, NEWBURGH, Alexander Crevie, Post Master.—Letters arrive from Aberdeen at twenty minutes past nine morning and at six evening; and are despatched at twenty minutes past eleven morning and evening at eight.

Post Office, CRUDEN, Alexander Joss, Post Master.—Letters from Aberdeen arrive at five evening, and are despatched at fifteen minutes past eight morning.

Post Office, BELHELVIE, David Donald, Post Master.—Letters from Aberdeen arrive at twenty-five minutes past eight morning and afternoon at five; and are despatched at ten minutes before nine morning.

CARRIERS.

To ABERDEEN, William Thomson, from Ellon, Tuesday and Friday and John Kelly and James Connon, on Friday from Newburgh and Foveran

FRASERBURGH AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

FRASERBURGH is a respectable and flourishing sea-port town and burgh of regality, in a parish of that name, 151 miles N.E. of Edinburgh, 42 N. of Aberdeen, 22 E. of Banff (26 by the new road), and 18 N.W. of Peterhead; situated on the south side of Kinnaird Head, which is a bold promontory, surmounted by a lighthouse. The parish occupies the north-eastern angle of land in this part of the county, and extends about three miles and a half each way, containing 7,000 acres, of which 6,914 are arable. At one time the name of the parish was Philorth, and the possessions of Lord Saltoun here retain that appellation. In the middle of the 16th century, a town was erected upon the estate of Sir Alexander Fraser, of Philorth, which, from the name of the proprietor or superior, was called Fraserburgh. The charter of erection is dated February 13th 1613, by which considerable powers are vested in the proprietor. The town is neatly built, forming a square, and the streets, which are tolerably spacious, are lighted with gas by a company. Near the centre are the town-house and a cross—the latter of modern date. A sheriff's small debt court is held quarterly in the town-house. Lord Saltoun is hereditary provost, but His Lordship has most generously decided on giving up his rights to the inhabitants, and steps are being taken to obtain an act of parliament for securing these rights. His Lordship, with a baron baillie and twelve councillors, regulate the affairs of the burgh. Sir Alexander Anderson (Lord Provost of Aberdeen) has succeeded Lewis Chalmers, Esq., advocate, as Lord Saltoun's commissioner. There is an excellent harbour, which has been much improved under powers granted by an act of parliament of 2 and 3 Victoria, cap. 65. It is managed by the magistrates, the town council, and five fenars, who are appointed commissioners for executing the act. A new harbour has been constructed, containing an area of eight acres, and affording a berthage of 2,110 feet, but making, with the former berthing, an aggregate of 5,010 feet. In connexion with the harbour is a patent slip, capable of carrying vessels of 400 tons burthen, and which is found to be of great utility. Contiguous to the harbour is a tolerable road for shipping, in a bay nearly three miles in length, and upwards of one in breadth, with a good anchorage ground. Two vessels belonging to this port are engaged in the Greenland seal fishery. A herring fishery, with excellent accommodation for curing, has been established here half a century, and is now one of the most successful stations on the east coast of Scotland. The average number of boats employed in this fishery is between two and three hundred. The principal exports are herrings and other fish, grain, potatoes, and butter; also fat cattle for the London market.

The places of worship are, a church of the Establishment, a Free church, a Scotch Episcopal chapel, one for Independents, one belonging to the Evangelical Union, one for the United Presbyterians, and one for Baptists. There are two parochial schools, one Free church school, one belonging to the Episcopalians, and several respectable private schools in the parish. On the 1st of May, 1865, the Fraserburgh extension of the Formatine and Buchan Railway was opened, and has greatly added to the interests of the town. There is a first-class hotel here, called "The Saltoun Arms Hotel," in which will be found every convenience. The markets, chiefly for corn, are held on Tuesdays and Fridays; the fairs on the second Wednesday in March, the second Thursday in June, and the second Friday in September, all old style.

POST OFFICE, Frithside street, FRASERBURGH, Charles M'Beath, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Aberdeen), at ten minutes before nine morning and afternoon at twenty minutes before five; and are despatched thereto at ten minutes past nine morning, twelve noon, and evening at five minutes past five.

The Money Order Office is open from nine in the morning till six in the evening.

FYVIE, METHLICK, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

Fyvie is an inland parish on the high road from Aberdeen to Banff, 8 miles from Meldrum, and 26 from Aberdeen; lying on both sides the river Ythan. Fyvie Castle, the seat of Captain C. W. Gordon, stands in a delightful situation; it is among the first specimens of Gothic architecture, and has been repaired and greatly improved. The scenery around is highly pleasing, and a beautiful loch intersects the grounds. Near the church, on the banks of the river, are the ruins of a priory, founded along with the parish church, in honour of the Virgin Mary, by Fergus, Earl of Buchan, in 1179, and was given to the abbey of Arbroath. The places of worship in the parish are Established and Free churches—one each, and two Episcopal chapels, respectively situated at the villages of Woodhead and Meiklefolla. At Millbrex is a chapel of ease under the establishment. Cattle markets are held at Fyvie station, on the second Monday in every month.

Methlick parish, about 22 miles from Aberdeen, is bounded by Fyvie on the west, New Deer on the north and Savoch & Ellon on the east, and Tarves on the south; it extends nine miles in length, by upwards of four in breadth. The district is intersected, throughout its extent from the north-west to the south-east, by the river Ythan; on the banks of which there now appear, some thriving and decorative plantations. The village is neat and rural; close to it the river is crossed by a handsome iron bridge. There are two churches in the parish—one Free, the other under the Establishment. About two miles from the village is Haddo House, a seat of the Earl of Aberdeen. Fairs are held in the village on the first Thursday after the 5th of May, and the first Wednesday after the 18th of November.

POST OFFICE, Fyvie, Alexander Stephen, Post Master.—Letters from the North arrive at eight morning, and are despatched thereto at nine morning. Letters from Aberdeen and the South arrive at eleven morning and are despatched thereto at seven morning.

GARIOCH,

CLUNY, CULSALMOND, DAVIOT, INSCH, KEMNAY, LESLIE, MONYMUSK, OYNE, PREMNAY, RAYNE, AND THEIR NEIGHBOURHOODS.

GARIOCH, CHAPEL OF GARIOCH or LOGIE-DURNO, is a district and parish lying in the centre of the county, 20 miles from Aberdeen, 18 from Huntly, and 5 from Inverury. It is eight miles in length and seven in breadth—the river Don dividing it on the south from Kemnay, the water of Urie being its northern boundary. The castle of Balquhine, now in ruins, in this parish, is famed for an echo, supposed to be the finest in Scotland. In this district was fought the battle of Harlaw, in 1411, between Alexander, Earl of Marr, and Donald, Earl of the Isles. Buchan relates that the number of nobility who fell, in this obstinately contested action, was greater than had fallen in any foreign engagement for many years before.

CLUNY parish is in the district of Kincardine-O'Neil, situated between the Dee and the Don waters, distant from Aberdeen 18 miles, and from Inverury 9. In length it is about ten miles, and in breadth from two to three. Four-fifths of this parish are under cultivation. There are three druidical temples, and several cairns of great size in this district, besides two large castles—Castle Cluny and Castle Fraser, erected in the beginning of the 15th century. The castle of Cluny has still a double-barred iron gate, weighing thirty-two stone, with massive iron bolts. This is said to have been the birthplace of the 'Admirable Crichton.'

CULSALMOND parish is distant from Huntly 10 miles, and from Aberdeen 28. This is one of the most fertile parishes in the shire, having a flat surface, intersected with thriving plantations. Newton House is the principal residence in this parish, which extends about three miles both in breadth and length. An annual fair is held at St. SAIRS, on Wednesday after last Tuesday in June, old style.

DAVIOT, a parish in the district of Garioch, is 19 miles N.W. from Aberdeen, and is about five miles in length by four in breadth; the surface is level, and has a south-eastern exposure. It has two druidical temples, one of which forms part of the churchyard. The land is now enclosed, and very productive. The small village of Daviot contains a church of the Establishment, and a school belonging to it.

INSCH is a burgh of barony in the before-mentioned district, 27 miles from Aberdeen. The parish extends five miles in length by three in breadth, and is bounded by Culsalmond on the east, Kinnethmont on the west, and separated by the water of Urie from Drumblade and Forgue. The burgh and village is lighted with gas, supports three banking establishments and a savings bank, and there are two churches, with schools in connexion. On the top of the hill of Dun-o-Deer are the ruins of an old castle, said to have been erected by King Gregory the Great. In the most elevated part of the hill of Foudland, within this parish, are extensive quarries of fine blue slate. Markets are held monthly.

KEMNAY parish, four miles and a half in length, and three in breadth, is distant from Aberdeen 15 miles, and from Inverury 5. The House of Kemnay is delightfully situated on the banks of the Don, and surrounded with a park and pleasure-grounds, laid out with great taste.

LESLIE, a parish in the district of Garioch, comprehends a superficies of four square miles; it is watered by the small river Gadie—a stream celebrated by Arthur Johnston in his elegant Latin poems. In several places towards the south there is found a species of greenish coloured amianthus, which is easily cut, and formed by the common people into snuff boxes and other trinkets, which have a very beautiful appearance. Several remains of druidical temples, cairns, and an ancient encampment, are pointed out. In the parish is a church of the Establishment, a Free church, and a Congregational chapel.

MONYMUSK parish is about seven miles long, and from four to five broad; and is distant from Inverury eight miles. Monymusk House, the seat of the Grant family, is an elegant building on the right bank of the Don, environed by fine plantations. The village is well built, in form of a square, with the church in the centre, and the houses being constructed of granite, the place altogether has a remarkably neat and clean aspect. A market or fair is held annually on the 29th of August.

OYNE, a parish likewise in Garioch district, is of an irregular figure, stretching about six miles in length, by from two to three in breadth; it is mostly of a fertile and cheering aspect. Aberdeen is about 25 miles distant, and Huntly 14. In this parish may be seen the ruins of an old castle, which tradition states to have belonged at one time to the family of Leith.

PREMNEY parish is 24 miles from Aberdeen, and extends four miles in length, by from one to two in breadth. It is bounded by Insch on the north, Oyne on the east, Tough and Keig on the south, and lies on the north side of the hill of Bennochie. The land is chiefly arable, and the greater part of it is enclosed.

RAYNE parish lies on the left bank of the Urie, betwixt Culsalmond on the north-west, and Daviot and the Chapel of Garioch on the south-east; it extends about four and a half miles from the Urie, by a breadth of from two to four miles. Except a small eminence, covered with heath, on the north side of the parish, the surface is flat, with a few rising spots on the banks of the Urie. The district on the whole has a pleasing appearance, and is ornamented by plantations. In the central part of the parish stands the village of Rayne, and on the public road, along the Urie, is the little post village of OLD RAYNE, distant 24 miles N.W. from Aberdeen, and 9 from Inverury; it is in Rayne that the church is situated. An annual fair is held on the second Tuesday in August, on the Thursday before the 26th May, and the Thursday before the 22nd November.

GLENMUICK,

WITH THE VILLAGES OF GLENGAIRN, TULLICH, BALLATER, PANNANICH WELLS, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

GLENMUICK is a large parish in the district of Marr, formed by the union of the parishes of Glenmuick, Tulloch, and Glengairn. It lies about 40 miles W. of Aberdeen; is about eighteen miles in length, and fifteen in breadth, intersected by the Dee and several of its tributary streams. The soil is shallow, and early producing good grain; the hills are of considerable elevation and many of them covered with wood to the very summits. Specimens of lead ore have been found near the castle of Glengairn, and limestone is everywhere abundant.

In the village of TULLICH are seen the remains of the old kirk, the walls of which inclose the burial-place of the Farquharsons' of Whitehouse. The view from this spot, looking towards the west, is much admired, and presents a series of hills rising one above another, with the lofty Lochnagar towering over all.

In this parish (Glenmuick) is the agreeable and quiet village of BALLATER, much resorted to in the summer by tourists, on account of the scenery around, which combines both the picturesque and the grand. The neighbourhood is also occasionally honoured by the presence of Royalty—Balmoral Castle being at no great distance; and His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales having two shooting boxes—Birk Hall and Gairnshiels, in this vicinity. The ruins of Knock Castle is ornamental to the scenery at one point, and the country is studded with many seats of the gentry. Loch Cannor, or Kan, a lake, is in this neighbourhood; on a small island within it are the ruins of a castle, said to have been once a hunting seat of Malcolm Canmore. The lake is beautiful and romantic in its features, and skirted with birch, hazel, and other woods; speaking of this district, indeed, it may be pronounced one of the most interesting in Aberdeenshire. The village of Ballater is small, but regularly formed—the church standing near to its centre. Several houses have been erected expressly for the reception of visitors, and additional accommodation is found in a very superior hotel—the 'Invercauld Arms,'—it contains every convenience that may be desired, either by families or commercial gentlemen.

The mineral wells and baths at PANNANICH are within about two miles of Ballater, on the banks of the Dee. The waters are highly serviceable in cases of scrofula and dyspepsia, and in all complaints where the blood is either deficient in quantity of vitiated in quality; they have also proved beneficial in cases of stone and gravel. The increasing demand for accommodation evinces that the wells are justly rising in public estimation. Fairs are held at Ballater on the first Tuesday in May, and the second Monday and Tuesday in September (O.S.), and on the Saturday previous to the twenty-second of November (N.S.)

POST OFFICE, BALLATER, Elizabeth Farquharson, Post Mistress.—Letters from all parts arrive at twenty-five minutes past eleven morning, and are despatched at ten minutes past six morning. Letters from Crathie and Braemar arrive at a quarter before six morning, and are despatched at ten minutes past twelve noon. Money Orders are granted and paid here.

HUNTLY,

WITH THE PARISHES AND VILLAGES OF CAIRNEY, GLASS, DRUMBLADE, GARTLY, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

HUNTLY, a burgh of barony and seat of a presbytery, is a pleasing and modern town, the capital of the parish of that name; 123 miles N. of Edinburgh, 66 E. of Inverness, 38 N. of Aberdeen, 21 S.W. of Banff, and 18 S.E. of Fochabers. The parish is about ten miles in length and four in breadth, formed by the annexation of the parishes of Dunbenan and Kinnoir. Perhaps there is no part of the county in which agriculture has achieved more success than in this parish. A few years ago, the general surface was anything but productive, but through systematic culture and perseverance, it has been wonderfully enriched; and now, for production and quality, is inferior to none in the North of Scotland. The acreage of arable land is very considerable, and some of the eminences are clothed with fine plantations. The district is watered by the Bogie and the Deveron. St. Mungo's hill, in the district of Kinnoir, has the appearance of a volcano; and on the summit there is an opening, which is generally filled with water—though, in dry seasons, peat is obtained from it, strongly impregnated with sulphur; and pieces of lava, it is said, have been found round it. Limestone, some of which approaches to the nature of marble and takes a very high polish, is obtained in the parish. The town, which is well lighted with gas by a joint-stock company, is in a dry and salubrious situation, on the point of land formed by the confluence of the Bogie with the Deveron, the stream of each being crossed by a handsome bridge; it is neatly built, having two principal streets, crossing each other at right angles, and forming a spacious square for the market-place. The Duke of Richmond who is superior, appoints a baron baillie. Justice courts are held as occasion require, and a sheriffs' small debts' court quarterly—the jurisdiction of the latter extends over twelve parishes. Huntly is a station on the Great North of Scotland Railway—a constant supply of manures, coals, &c. and facility for the transmission of agricultural produce, are amongst the advantages, which this line affords the town and neighbourhood. This town was once famed for the weaving of fine linen, introduced by an Irish manufacturer, in the year 1768; and the quantity annually manufactured used to amount to £30,000 or £40,000; but during and since the time of the continental war, this branch of industry has gradually decreased. It is now a place of no particular manufacture, and the trade is merely local and domestic.

There are, besides the parish and Free churches, several other places of worship in Huntly and its vicinage—these include temples for the worship of various religious denominations—of which a list with their officiating ministers is appended; among them is a handsome Roman Catholic chapel. Several public and charitable educational establishments are well sustained and conducted with ability. The Gordon schools, opened in 1841, were founded by Her late Grace of that title, in 1839, and are situated near to the lodge, formerly the residence of the lady. The school premises, which are handsome and fitted in every convenient way for their purpose, comprise four departments—namely, the parochial school, the school of the Free church, the industrial school, and one for infants; the teachers of the two latter classes have residences in the establishment. A home for the aged, founded and endowed by the late Alexander Scott, Esq., of Craibstone House, affords an asylum for the aged destitute of both sexes. Markets for cattle are held on the first and third Wednesday of every month. A sheep fair is likewise held on the Thursday before the second Tuesday in August (O.S.) Feeing markets for hiring servants are held on the Wednesday before the 26th May, the second Thursday in July, and the Thursday before the 22nd November.

CAIRNEY is a tolerably extensive parish, contiguous to that of Huntly, lying chiefly in the county of Banff. The land for the most part is mountainous, but much of it is, notwithstanding, in a high state of cultivation, and bears prolific crops.

The parish of GLASS is likewise adjacent to that of Huntly on the west, and is also in both counties, lying on either side of the river Deveron.

DRUMBLADE parish extends from five to six miles in length, and from four to five in breadth. There are three tumuli, near one of which are the remains of an encampment of King Robert Bruce, after he had defeated Comyn, Earl of Buchan, near the burgh of Inverury. The soil is generally fertile and the surface greatly diversified.

The parish of GARTLY, partly in Aberdeenshire and partly in Banffshire, is of an irregular oval figure, extending about twelve miles in length, by six in breadth. The Duke of Richmond is sole proprietor of this extensive tract. An excellent quarry of blue slate is in the parish, and the hills afford peat in abundance. Improvements in agriculture have been actively progressing for some years past.

POST OFFICE, Nelson street, HUNTLY, James Lawson, Post Master.—Letters from parts South arrive at twenty-six minutes before eleven forenoon and thirty-one minutes past three afternoon; and are despatched at nine morning, one afternoon and a quarter past six evening.—Letters from parts North arrive at six minutes before ten morning and eighteen minutes before two afternoon; and are despatched at a quarter before ten morning and a quarter before three afternoon. A Bag from Aberdeen every Saturday night at seven. On Sundays letters arrive (by mail gig from Keith), at half-past five evening, and are despatched at twenty minutes past seven morning.

INVERURY KEITH HALL, PORT ELPHINSTONE,

AND KINTORE, THE PARISH OF KEITH HALL, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

INVERURY is a parish, lying at the termination of the peninsula, between the river Urie on the north, and the Don on the south—the town, which is a royal burgh, is 16 miles N.W. of Aberdeen, 22 S.W. of Huntly, and 5 W. by S. of Old Meldrum; pleasantly situated on the neck of land formed by the confluence of the streams before-mentioned. Tradition reports that Inverury was erected into a royal burgh, by King Robert Bruce, on the occasion of a signal victory obtained by him, in the neighbourhood, over Comyn, Earl of Buchan, the King of England's general in Scotland. The oldest charter is a novodamus by Queen Mary, the preamble of which states that Inverury had been a royal burgh time immemorial, but that the charter of its erection had been lost during the civil wars. The town is now governed by a provost, three baillies, a treasurer, and four councillors; and it joins with Kintore, Peterhead, Banff, Cullen, and Elgin, in sending a member to parliament. Inverury confers the title of baron on the Earl of Kintore, who has a fine mansion a little to the east of the town. By means of the influence and under the patronage of this noble family, a bridge was erected, in 1791, over the Don, at an expense of £2,000; and, subsequently, another was carried over the Urie. A sheriffs' circuit small debt court is held here in the months of March, June, September, and December. The Aberdeen Town and County, the North of Scotland, and the Union Banking Companies, have each a very respectable branch establishment here. There is also a savings bank. Inverury has become a favourite resort during the summer months—the Don and the Urie affording ample sport to the angler. The 'Kintore Arms Hotel' is replete with comfort. It has hot, cold, and shower baths, and a choice library for the use of visitors. The opening of the Great North of Scotland Railway from Aberdeen to Inverness, which has a respectable station here, and a branch line to Old Meldrum, gave a new stimulus to industry, and the town, which is well lighted with gas, has a respectable and thriving appearance. The tan works of Mr. Davidson are on an extensive scale, and at the contiguous village of PORT ELPHINSTONE are established meal, bone, and saw mills, paper mills, and a brewery; here also have been erected several respectable residences, and a subscription school opened. The places of worship in the parish are, Established and Free Churches, and Episcopalian, Independent, and Methodist chapels, and a handsome Roman Catholic chapel. A free school, under the management of the office bearers of the Free church, is respectably attended. By the benevolence of the present Countess of Kintore an infant school house, with accommodation for the teacher, has been erected. The other various educational establishments are noticed in the list of schools. Markets are held fortnightly, from the first Tuesday in November to the end of March. The other markets are held on the second Tuesday (N.S.) and third Tuesday (O.S.) in April, the Wednesday before Wartle (F.M), Tuesday before second Wednesday (N. S.), day before St. Sairs, day before Aikey fair, day before Old Rain, first Tuesday in September (O.S.), and first Tuesday in October (O.S.)

KINTORE is likewise a royal burgh, and the capital of its parish—the town, which is small, is between 3 and 4 miles S.E. from Inverury; situated on the public road, near the Don. The burgh is governed by a provost, two baillies, a dean of guild, and a treasurer, assisted by a council of eight other burgesses; and it is, as before-stated, a contributory burgh, in returning a member to parliament. In this parish are numerous cairns and tumuli, which are said to point out the position where Robert Bruce overtook and destroyed the army of Edward I., after the defeat of Comyn, Earl of Buchan, near Inverury; and within the parish is Hall-Forest Castle, formerly a hunting seat of King Robert, now the property of the Earl of Kintore, to whom three-fourths of the parish belongs. Two churches, respectively of the Establishment and Free, with schools in connexion, are in the parish. The North of Scotland Banking Company have here a branch establishment.

KEITH-HALL and KINKELL form a united parish, in the district of Garioch; lying on the left banks of the Urie and Don, which rivers unite opposite its centre.

The parish is hilly but not mountainous; the western part is tolerably fertile, and produces good crops, but the eastern is much less fruitful. It is recorded that many who fell in the battle of Harlaw—among others Scrimgeour, the high constable of Dundee—were buried at Kinkell, which, at that period, was the principal church in this part of the country. The Earl of Kintore has a seat in this parish.

KINCARDINE-O'NEIL, CHARLESTOWN OF ABOYNE

AND GLENTANNER, BIRSE AND LUMPHANNAN.

KINCARDINE-O'NEIL is a parish and village—the latter the seat of a presbytery, is situated on the public road, and the banks of the Dee, between Aberdeen and Ballater, 26 miles from the former, 16 from the latter, and 24 from Stonehaven. At TORPHINS, in this parish, is a station on the Dee Side Railway. The buildings which principally surround the church, command an extensive prospect up the river, towards the Grampian mountains, and the place is much resorted to for the summer retirement of invalids. In early days Kincardine was of some note, for, it is upon record that, a wooden bridge was built across the Dee, six hundred years ago, the expense of which was defrayed by a knight, called Allan Durward. The parish, which is about seven miles in length, by six in extreme breadth, is partly hilly and pastoral, and partly arable, while in some places, are thriving plantations. The greater proportion of the inhabitants are occupied in agriculture, and others are employed by the manufacturers of Aberdeen, in knitting worsted stockings. The village contains three very good inns. Fairs are held on the second Tuesday in May, and on the Wednesday and Thursday after the last Tuesday in August (o.s.) Markets are also held at TORPHINS in February, March, une, and December.

CHARLESTOWN (or Charlestown of Aboyne), now generally called ABOYNE, is a small village in the parish of Aboyne, district of Mar, about four miles from Kincardine; situated on the north bank of the Dee. The parish is united to that of Glentanner, and is watered by the river just named, and likewise by the Tanner and the Allachy, which during heavy rains become impetuous streams. The forest of Glentanner is extensive, and contains some large timber. The Dee is here crossed by a very handsome suspension bridge, built at the sole expense of the Marquis of Huntly, whose seat, Aboyne Castle, ornaments this locality. In the grounds of the castle is a remarkable stone, shaped like a coffin, with a cross cut upon it. Fairs are held at Aboyne on the third Thursday in January, March, May, August, September, and December, second Wednesday in April, last Wednesday in June, the Friday after Aiky fair in July, first Tuesday and Wednesday in October (old style), and second Wednesday in November.

BIRSE, the most southern parish of Aberdeenshire, lies on the south bank of the river Dee, and forms nearly a square of ten miles. There are three districts in the parish, inclosed by the same number of ridges of hills, which take a south-westerly direction towards the Grampians from the river Dee; in the valleys formed by these ridges run two streams of water, the Feuch and the Chattie. The proportion of uncultivated land is very considerable, but the old system of agriculture is giving way to modern improvements. The road from Dundee to Inverness passes through this parish. Large upright stones, cairns, and other monuments of antiquity are frequently met with, as is limestone in abundance. The parish church is distant about twenty-eight miles from Aberdeen.

LUMPHANNAN parish, about six miles in length and four in breadth, is nearly surrounded by hills. The name signifies 'the bare little valley;' but this designation is not, in the present day, applicable to the low lands, which are now well cultivated and fruitful. This is the district in which the usurper Macbeth is said to have been slain by Macduff, in the year 1057; the spot on which tradition asserts the combat to have taken place, is about a mile north from the kirk, on the brow of a hill, where a large cairn of stones has been raised commemorative of the event, and corroborative of the finale of Shakespeare's drama.

POST OFFICE, KINCARDINE-O'NEIL, Joseph Petrie, Post Master.—Letters arrive from all parts at five minutes past ten, morning, and ten minutes past seven, evening, and are despatched at twenty minutes past seven, morning, and fifteen minutes before six, evening.

CARRIERS.

To ABERDEEN, Alexander Sheriffs, Tuesdays and Fridays, from Kincardine, and Thomas Martin, from Birse on Wednesdays.

NEW AND OLD DEER,

NEW MAUD, LONGSIDE, MINTLAW, FETTERANGUS, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

NEW DEER parish lies almost in the centre of Buchan district, and extends fourteen miles from north to south, and about seven in breadth. At NEW MAUD, about 3 miles from New Deer, is a railway station. The church, a neat edifice, and the village, which is tolerably well-built, are situated about 30 miles north from Aberdeen. About two miles from the church stands an old castle, called Feddoratt, which appears to have been a place of considerable strength. There are a few remains of Druidical temples, and several tumuli—these, having been opened, were found to contain urns, enclosed in stone coffins. Three miles from New Deer is Brucklaw Castle, built in the year 1540, the seat of Captain William Dingwall Fordyce, J.P. The situation of the castle is most romantic, and the scenery delightful: the lawns are tastefully laid out, and the park is beautified and encircled by the waters of the Ugie. Within the last few years many parts of the castle have been rebuilt, adding greatly to its beauty. Fairs are held on the third Wednesday in January, Wednesday after the 12th of April, Thursday before 26th, or 26th if Thursday, of May, Wednesday after 19th of June, second Tuesday in August, Wednesday after 19th of October, Thursday before 22nd, or 22nd if Thursday, of November.

OLD DEER parish is ten miles in length, by a mean breadth of between five and six. Like New Deer, it lies in the district of Buchan, and contiguous to the former parish; but the village is situated some five or six miles distant, 10½ west from Peterhead, and 26 north from Aberdeen by the Mintlaw road. One branch of the river Ugie intersects the parish about its centre, whilst another branch enters it for a short course on the north; upon these streams are several mills. A sheriffs' small debts-court is held in this parish in the months of January, June, and October. The abbey of Deer, which stands about a mile from the village, was built in the beginning of the 13th century, by William Comyn, Earl of Buchan; it is mostly in ruins, but there is still enough remaining to show what it originally was. There were at one time no less than twelve Druidical temples, of which four, tolerably entire, are yet remaining. The Druids' temple at Buffie is the most conspicuous, and is an object of great attraction to the antiquarian and traveller. The pleasure grounds and woods of Pitfour will at once arrest the admiration of strangers. A fair is held at AIKY BRAE on the first Wednesday after the 19th of July, and at Old Deer on the second Tuesday in January, February, and March, Wednesday after the 12th of April, second Tuesday in May, June, August, September, October, November, and Wednesday after the 19th of December.

LONGSIDE, also a parish in Buchan, contains the village of its name, which latter is about 30 miles north of Aberdeen, 6 west of Peterhead, and 4 from Old Deer. A handsome church was opened here for divine service on the 7th of August, 1836; an Episcopal chapel and a parochial school are also in the village. Fairs are held at Longside on the Wednesday after the 12th of May, and the second Tuesday in August and November. The village of MINTLAW, in this parish, is three miles from Longside, on the road leading from Aberdeen and Fraserburgh. Fairs are held at Mintlaw on the second Tuesday in every month.

POST OFFICE, NEW DEER, John Middleton, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Mintlaw) at twenty minutes past eleven, morning, and are despatched thereto at twenty minutes before six, morning.

Post Office, OLD DEER, John Lawrence, Post Master.—Letters arrive (from Aberdeen) at five minutes before ten, morning, and are despatched thereto at twenty minutes before seven, morning.

Post Office, MINTLAW, Bathia Levay, Post Mistress.—Letters arrive from Aberdeen and the South at twelve minutes past eight, morning, and are despatched thereto at ten minutes before eight, morning. Letters also arrive from Fraserburgh and the North at ten minutes past seven, morning, and are despatched thereto at a quarter before nine, morning. Money Orders granted and paid here.

Post Office, LONGSIDE, Mary Watt, Post Mistress.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Mintlaw) at ten minutes before ten, morning, and are despatched at ten minutes past six, morning.

Post Office, STEWARTFIELD, Margaret Pyper, Post Mistress.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Mintlaw) at a quarter-past ten morning, and are despatched at a quarter before six, morning.

NEW MACHAR, CRAIG DAM, DYCE, FINTRAY, & UDNY.

NEW MACHAR is a parish in the district of Buchan, lying chiefly in Aberdeenshire, but partly in the county of Banff, it extends nine miles in length, by two and a half in breadth; the parish kirk is ten miles from Aberdeen. The country is generally rather flat, and the soil is mostly arable, with several patches of wet mossy land; while in the southern quarter are some fine plantations. There is a small lake, near the boundary of Old Machar, called Bishop's Loch, in which is an island, whereon stands the ruins of a castle once belonging to the bishops of Aberdeen.

CRAIG DAM, in the neighbourhood of Tarves, has a neat chapel of the United Secession, and a free school, endowed by a Mr. Peter Barron, of Harpley, in the county of Norfolk. The river Ythan passes through this district, watering a soil various in quality, but mostly fertile. Fairs are held on the third Thursday in January, March, May, and November, and the second Thursday in July.

DYCE parish is of considerable extent, lying on the south bank of the Don, which river separates it from Fintray, and Newhills parish divides it from Old Aberdeen. The Tyre-begar ridge runs through the district from south to north; one of the loftiest hills is surmounted by a Druidical temple. The parish kirk is seven miles and a half from Aberdeen, and four from New Machar. The Great North of Scotland Railway Company have a station here.

FINTRAY parish is five miles in length, by from three to four in breadth. On the banks of the Don the land is fertile, and susceptible of profitable cultivation; but other parts are hilly. An abbey formerly existed in this parish—the Rev. J. Leslie, the late minister, possessed a stone inscribed with the date 1386—supposed to have formed a fraction of the building, and a silver cup, dated 1633, which tradition records to have been manufactured from the silver of the image of St. Meddin, the tutelar saint of the parish. The kirk is about ten miles and a half from Aberdeen. There is a station on the Great North of Scotland line, at KINALDIE, about one mile from the village of HADDON. Within the parish is a considerable mill for the manufacture of woollen goods, the machinery of which is worked both by steam and water power. Fairs are held on the first Saturday in February, April, July, and December.

UDNY parish extends about five miles in length and breadth, and contains a neat and pleasantly situated village, fourteen miles north of Aberdeen, and four from New Machar. The soil of the parish is for the most part fertile, and the land enclosed and well cultivated. It has a well conducted school. Fairs are held at Udny Station on the fifth Wednesday or last Thursday in January, February, March, April, June, August, October, November, and December.

OLD MELDRUM, BOURTIE, AND TARVES.

OLD MELDRUM is a parish, a burgh of barony, and a market town—the latter pleasantly situated on the road from Aberdeen to Banff; 18 miles N.W. of the former, 27 from the latter, and 5 from Inverury. The streets and dwellings are irregularly laid out; the principal building is the town-hall, which has a neat spire. Meldrum was constituted a burgh of barony in the year 1672, under the jurisdiction of two baillies; B. C. Urquhart, Esq. is superior of the burgh. The seat of this gentleman (Meldrum House) is romantically situated, and, from its antique style of architecture, possesses a striking effect; and being surrounded with fine scenery, presents the characteristics of a delightful residence. The principal branches of business are comprised in an extensive distillery, a brewery, and corn mill. The district is partly arable and partly pastoral; the soil of the southern portion is fertile, but that of the northern shallow, and less fruitful. The places of worship are, the Established and Free churches, and United Presbyterian, and Episcopal chapels. There are two excellent schools in the town. Markets are held Tuesday fortnightly, from the 3rd of January to the 22nd of May (F.M.), and one each in June, July, August, September, and October, three in November, and two in December. Winter markets commence on the 14th of November, and every alternate Tuesday until April.

BOURTIE, a parish, is four miles in length and two in breadth, generally cultivated; it lies between Meldrum and Inverury. About the middle of the parish there are two ranges of hills, the greater part clothed with refreshing verdure. The remains of ancient fortifications are visible throughout this district.

The parish of TARVES lies between Ellon and Old Meldrum; is bounded by Methlick on the north, and Old Meldrum on the west, and is watered in its eastern quarter by the river Ythan; its length is about nine miles, and its breadth six. The general outline of the parish is a flat surface, interspersed with some hills of inferior altitude. The soil is diversified in its composition, but is for the most part fertile; and there are some fine plantations on the verge of the river.

POST OFFICE, OLD MELDRUM, William Den, Post Master.—Letters from the South arrive (from Aberdeen) at half-past seven, morning, and from the North and South at four, afternoon, and are despatched to Aberdeen and all parts South at twenty minutes before one, afternoon, to Inverury and all parts North at ten minutes before twelve morning.

Post Office, TARVES, Frances Lumsden, Post Mistress.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Aberdeen) at half-past six, morning, and are despatched thereto at half-past twelve, noon.
Money Order Office open from nine in the morning until six in the evening.

To ABERDEEN, James Chapman and James Webster, from Old Meldrum, Tuesdays and Fridays

PETERHEAD,

WITH THE VILLAGE OF BODDAM, INVERNETTIE, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

PETERHEAD is a considerable sea-port town, a burgh of barony, and parish, within the district of Buchan, 141 miles N. by W. of Edinburgh, 34 S.E. of Banff, 32 N.E. of Aberdeen, and 18 S.S.E. of Fraserburgh. It is situated upon a peninsula (the most easterly point of Scotland), about a mile south of the mouth of the river Ugie, the isthmus between the peninsula and the mainland being only eight hundred yards wide. The town is built in the form of a cross, and is divided into four districts, called the Kirktown, Ronheads, Keith-Inch, and Peterhead Proper. The houses, which are built of granite (so abundant in various parts of the county), are all of them neat, and many of them commodious and elegant. The town is gas-lighted, and the inhabitants are plenteously supplied with excellent spring water. The wells of Peterhead have long been resorted to; the waters are chalybeate, and are abundant in the town and neighbourhood. Fossel shells in great quantities, and of various kinds, are found in the neighbourhood, twenty or thirty feet above the level of the sea, and these of kinds not to be met with in an original state; many curious pebbles also may be picked up on the shore. The ruins of Inverugie Castle are situated about 2½ miles from Peterhead. The walls of this castle are still standing, and by means of a winding staircase in one of the towers, an ascent may be made to the roof, and a beautiful view of the valley of the Ugie obtained. The ruined castle of Ravenscraig stands on the opposite side of the river, about a quarter of a mile from Inverugie castle. It is built upon a rock, and is a very good specimen of the ancient Scottish baronial style, in the square form so common to the beginning of the 13th century. Its walls are of such strength that, previous to the use of artillery, would have rendered the place impregnable.

A public building which claims particular attention is the town-house, at the head of the principal street; it is an elegant edifice, sixty feet long, and forty-nine feet wide, with a spire 125 feet high, and a fine clock; the town-hall, one of the apartments, is a spacious elegant room: and one of equal dimensions is handsomely fitted up as a court-room, in which the baillie court hold their sittings; and here the sheriff's debt-court is held on Tuesday and Thursday. Peterhead was founded and erected into a burgh of barony, by George, Earl Marischal, in the year 1593; but in 1715 it was forfeited by this family, in consequence of their adherance to the unfortunate house of Stuart, and purchased, with the neighbouring lands, in 1738, by the trustees or governors of the Merchant Maiden Hospital, Edinburgh, who are still the superiors. The nomination of the magistrates was, by charter, vested in them and the magistrates and councillors, the latter of whom were formerly elected by a majority of the feuars; but since the elective franchise was conferred upon the burgh, the magistrates and councillors are elected by the £10 voters. The town now enjoys the privileges of a royal burgh, and, in conjunction with Kintore, Elgin, Cullen, Banff, and Inverury, returns one member to parliament.

For a long series of years the harbours of Peterhead have been held to be of great importance. So early as 1661, in the first parliament of King Charles II., an act was passed "For a contribution for repairing the harbours of Peterhead." In 1705 an act of the Scottish privy council was obtained, for a voluntary contribution within all the parish churches of the three Lothians and bewest the Forth, for building and repairing these harbours; and in 1729, and again in 1739 the convention of royal burghs authorized a voluntary contribution throughout all the royal burghs in Scotland for the same purpose. In 1807, and again in 1827, acts of parliament were obtained for their further improvements, and since 1798 considerably upwards of £100,000 have been expended on these improvements. The harbours are managed by a rotary board of trustees, a certain number of which are elected annually. The revenue can be applied only to the maintenance of the harbours, the payment of the interest of the debt, and the liquidation of the principal; no individual or body of persons have any pecuniary interest in them. Peterhead possesses the grand advantage of north and south harbours respectively of eleven and seven acres in extent, communicating by means of a canal or channel, over which is an elegant and permanent cast iron swing bridge, upon the construction of which upwards of £8,000 was expended. In the north harbour their are two graving or dry docks, and at the entrance to both harbours are good lighthouses. There is a spacious bay, with good anchorage, on the south of the town, on the opposite side of which stands the Buchanness lighthouse, having a beautiful revolving light. The bay is perfectly safe in any sort of weather, except when the wind is eastward. The bridge over the canal that connects the harbours, forms the communication between the Keith Inch and other parts of the town. The south harbour has twelve to fourteen feet of water at medium springs, and eight to ten feet at neap tides; and the north harbour has, at spring tides, eighteen feet of water. At an early period its vessels traded to the ports in the Baltic, to the Levant, and to America; and in 1795 its merchants could fit out twenty-eight vessels, carrying upwards of 3,000 tons. The revenue of the harbours in 1800 was only £100, while, in 1849, it amounted to £4,000, and in 1858 to £4,391 19s. 7d. In no subject is this community more deeply interested than in the whale and seal fisheries, many having their capital largely invested, and others their friends and relatives engaged in this important but hazardous branch of national industry. Seventy eight years have now elapsed since the first vessel sailed from Peterhead for the icy regions; and while many other ports have been declining, and some have given up the trade altogether, Peterhead has still continued it, and now takes the lead of all the British ports in the whale fishery. In the year 1788 one vessel was sent out, and up to 1803 there was no increase. From 1804 to 1814 the number varied from two to eight, and to 1830 from ten to sixteen; but in 1843 they had decreased to nine. Since then the number has continued to increase, the highest being thirty-two, including two steamers, added in 1857. The number is again diminished, only seventeen vessels being employed in the years 1862-3-4. The herring fishery has become most important, Peterhead having now attained the second rank in this branch of maritime industry. In 1864 the quantity of herrings caught was 31,700 crans, and employed 370 vessels. Owing to the liberal encouragement, both by the superiors of the town and the trustees of the harbours, this fishery must go on rapidly increasing; and Peterhead may, in a few years, be reasonably expected to stand inferior to none as a fishing station. Independent of the fishing and shipping trades, the town enjoys a good local one. There are many respectable and well stored establishments, in the wholesale and retail business of grocery, drapery, &c. Five banking establishments are in operation here, one iron foundry, four ship and boat builders, several curriers, millers, timber merchants, coach builders, and brick and tile manufacturers in the neighbourhood. Exclusive of the facilities which the granite quarries in the neighbourhood present for local purposes, they supply no inconsiderable item in the amount of exports. Between the years 1817 and 1822 inclusive, 35,112 tons of this stone were shipped at Peterhead, chiefly in large blocks, for the docks at London: but since that period the exportation has considerably decreased. The quarries are principally worked by the Aberdeen polishing firms. There is an extensive works, for the cutting and polishing of granite, employing upwards of sixty men, together with powerful machinery. The exports beside, consist of cattle, oats, meal, pork, cheese, eggs, butter, herrings, oil, &c. A few years ago Peterhead ranked as a creek only, under the port of Aberdeen: but it has been made a separate and independent port, the limits of which extend from Rattrayhead on the north, to Ythan river on the south. The Formartine and Buchan railway, opened in 1862, connecting this town with Fraserburg and Aberdeen, adds much to its importance.

The Established church situated at the conjunction of the south and west roads, combines elegance with convenience, and has a fine spire: and the Episcopal chapel is a handsome modern edifice, in the design of which the architect has displayed superior taste. The other places of worship are, one for the Free church, one for Independents, an United Presbyterian chapel, one for Methodists, a Baptist Meeting house, and a chapel for Roman Catholics. Amongst the literary institutes of Peterhead may be mentioned as the principal, a reading society, established in 1808, and a mechanics, institution, founded in 1836. The library belonging to the reading society numbers upwards of two thousand volumes, and the library of the mechanics' about one thousand. There is also a solicitors' library. A very valuable museum, the property of the late Adam Arbuthnot, Esq., by whom it was bequeathed to the authorities for the use of the town, contains a great variety of specimens, collected from the animal and mineral kingdoms. There are many excellent schools, both of a public and private character, and a ragged school is very efficiently conducted by one paid master, who is assisted by the humane and benevolent of both sexes of the town gratuitously. There are two newspapers established here. The 'Peterhead Sentinel' and the 'Buchan Observer,' both creditably conducted, and enjoying an encouraging circulation, especially in the district of Buchan. The market is held on Friday, and the fairs on the third Tuesday in May and the second Tuesday in November, both old style.

BODDAM is a neat village and considerable fishing station, in the parish of Peterhead, about four miles south of that town. The harbour here was extended a few years since by the Earl of Aberdeen, at a cost somewhat exceeding £2,000, and an act of parliament was passed in 1845, constituting Boddam a port or harbour. The fishery here is prosecuted with great diligence and success. A chapel of ease and a good parochial school, supplementary to Peterhead, are in the village.

INVERNETTIE is likewise in the parish of Peterhead, and is chiefly inhabited by fishermen.

RHYNIE AND ESSIE, AUCHINDOIR AND KEARN,

WITH LUMSDEN, CABRACH, CLATT, AND KINNETHMONT.

RHYNIE and ESSIE is a united parish in the district of Strathbogie; it comprehends a superfices of thirty square miles; bounded on the north by the barony of Gartly, on the south by Auchindoir, and on the west by Cabrach. The centre may be about ten miles south from Huntly. The soil is rich and fertile on the banks of the Bogie; towards the hills it is light and gravelly, yet productive. The only antiquity in this parish, deserving of notice, is a vitrified fort on the top of the hill of Noth. There are two springs in the neighbourhood of Rhynie, remarkable for the surprising quantity of water they discharge, each being capable of turning a mill at its source. Markets are held on the first Wednesday in June, the day after Keith in September, and the day after Kinnethmont in October. Feeing markets are held on the Mondays before the 26th of May and 22nd. of November.

AUCHINDOIR, a parish with which KEARN has been incorporated, is about seven miles long and five broad, distant from Huntly twelve miles. A bluish coloured fibrous asbestos is found in great quantities in the fissures of the rocks, which the sportsmen frequently use for wadding to their fowling pieces. The parish also abounds with freestone. The only river of note is the Bogie. In this parish is a small village called LUMSDEN, erected within the last thirty-five years, and named after the proprietor. Fairs are held on the last Tuesday in April, last Friday in May, and third Tuesday in August (O.S.)

CABRACH parish is partly in the county of Aberdeen, and partly of that of Banff; extending in length five miles, by about three in breadth; distant from Aberdeen 45 miles and from Huntly 20. The Deveron and the Fidditch water this parish. The mountains abound with game.

CLATT is a parish in Aberdeenshire—the village is situated 10 miles S.S.E. from Huntly and 33 W.N.W. from Aberdeen, on the rivulet Gardie, which afterwards falls into the Urie. It was elevated into a burgh of barony by James VI, in 1501, with power to hold weekly and annual markets. The superiority belongs to the family of Gordon, of Knockespock, who have evinced a laudable anxiety for the improvement of the place. A fair is held on the third Wednesday in November.

KINNETHMONT parish extends about six miles in length, by three in breadth, and is about 8 miles south from Huntly. The parish is watered by several small streams, and the general soil is fruitful.

POST OFFICE, RHYNIE, James Roger, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive at a quarter before eleven, morning, and are despatched at a quarter before seven, morning.
Money Orders granted and paid here.

Post Office, KINNETHMONT, John Morrison, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive at half-past ten, morning, and afternoon at half-past three, and are despatched (South) at twenty-five minutes past seven, morning, and (North) at half-past nine.

ROSEHEARTY IN PITSLIGO AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

ROSEHEARTY is a maritime village and burgh of barony, in the parish of Pitsligo, 4½ miles w. from Fraserburgh and 18 E. from Banff. It has a good harbour, capable of admitting vessels of from eighty to one hundred tons. The chief imports are timber, coals, and salt, and it exports fish and grain; its commerce, however, is not extensive. Although inconsiderable in size, it is a burgh of barony, having been raised to that distinction by Charles II. Within the parish are two or three private schools, a parochial one, and a female school.

The parish of PITSLIGO lies in the district of Buchan, on the sea-coast, betwixt Aberdour on the west, and Fraserburgh on the east, and commencing about two miles west of Kinnaird Head. The land is generally fertile, and the face of the country level. Pitsligo Castle, formerly the seat of Lord Pitsligo (a title in the Forbes family), is an ancient structure, surrounded with extensive gardens. The labouring portion of the population are principally employed in fishing, and others in agriculture. PITTULIE and SANDHAVEN are two other small villages in this parish, both situated between Kinnaird Head and Rosehearty Point. Inhabited chiefly by fishermen.

POST OFFICE, ROSEHEARTY, Matthew Duncan, Post Master.—Letters arrive from the South (by Aberdeen), at eleven morning, and are despatched thereto at half-past six evening. Letters arrive from the North (by Banff), at half-past six evening, and are despatched thereto at eleven morning.

STRICHEN, ABERDOUR, TYRIE AND NEW PITSLIGO.

STRICHEN is a parish in the district of Buchan—the village a neat one, is 33½ miles N. from Aberdeen, 20 W. from Banff, 16 W. by N. from Turriff, 15 N. by W. from Peterhead, and 9 S. from Fraserburgh; situated on the north bank of the Ugie. The town house is a convenient and elegant structure, erected in the year 1816, by the Right Hon. Lord Lovat, at an expense of £2,000. On the side of one of the hills in this parish is the figure of a horse formed by large pieces of stone, which has a singular effect at a distance. Upon the same hill is a hunter's lodge, on which is inscribed, 'This hunter's lodge Robb Gibb commands.' The places of worship are a church of the Establishment, a Free church, an Episcopalian chapel, also one for the Roman Catholics, and the schools are, a parochial, a Free church, and two or three private ones. Fairs are held here on the first Thursday of every month.

ABERDOUR parish stretches along the Moray Frith for about ten miles. The shore here is so bold and precipitous, that there are only three places where boats can effect a landing; and the rocks have been excavated by the sea into innumerable caves, one of which is ninety feet long and twenty-two broad. Upon a precipice overhanging the sea are the ruins of the ancient castle of Dundargue; a place of great strength and importance in feudal times, and noted for sustaining a long siege in 1336, when Henry de Beaumont, the English Earl of Buchan, was obliged to capitulate to Andrew Murray, regent of Scotland, during the unwarrantable captivity of King Robert Bruce, in England. The small village situated on the shore of Aberdour bay, is chiefly inhabited by fishermen.

TYRIE parish extends about ten miles in length, by four and a half in breadth; the surface is agreeably diversified with hill and dale, heath, moss, meadow, corn land, and grass parks. On the northern verge of the parish is the village church of Tyrie, an ancient structure, supposed to have been originally erected about the year 1004, when the Thane of Buchan routed the Danish army upon the neighbouring eminences. The late Sir William Forbes, founded, in the southern quarter of the parish, the village of NEW PITSLIGO, into which the weaving of linen has been introduced, and affords employment to some of its inhabitants. The village is now lighted by gas.

TARLAND AND MIGVIE, COULL, AND LEOCHEL AND CUSHNIE.

TARLAND AND MIGVIE, united parishes, form a very irregular and disjointed district on the western borders of Aberdeeenshire. The village of Tarland, which is a burgh of barony, is thirty-one miles from Aberdeen and sixteen from Alford; situated nearly in the centre of the district of Cromar. The lands about the village are mostly level, but the greater proportion of the parish is mountainous, and the seasons are cold; the woods which have been planted will, however, be the means of materially ameliorating the latter inconvenience. A small rivulet runs by the village and falls into the river Dee, near Aboyne village; and a detached part of the parish is watered by the Don. Branches, respectively, of the Union Bank of Scotland, and the Aberdeen Town and County Bank, have been lately established in this burgh; and a sheriff's small-debt court is held here four times a year, when claims are adjudicated to the amount of £12, or under. Fairs are held on the Wednesday before the 5th of January and on the 5th if a Wednesday, second Wednesday and last Wednesday in February, first Wednesday and Wednesday after the 26th in May, Friday after St. Sairs in June, on the Friday after first Tuesday in August, Wednesday after Aboyne in October, Tuesday and Wednesday after 22nd or on that day if a Tuesday in November and on the Wednesday before the 5th in December.

COULL is a parish in the district of Marr—the Kirk is about thirty miles from Aberdeen; lying at the head of Strathcromar, and separated from the Dee on the South by Aboyne. It is a finely sheltered tract of land triangular in shape, and generally fertile; the hilly portions being, however, bleak and pastoral. The ruins of the very old castle of Coull are distinguishable, but of its ancient possessors little is known.

LEOCHEL and CUSHNIE are united in one parish, and contain two ancient castles, now in ruins, called Linturk and Corse; in the latter were born several of the Forbes', one of whom (Patrick Forbes, of Corse), wrote a commentary on the Revelations. Craigievar, the elegant seat of Sir William Forbes, is also in this parish, and from its elevated situation commands an extensive prospect of the country.

To ABERDEEN, William Reid, from his house on Mondays
To ABOYNE, Smart & Massey, from Tarland, Monday, Wednesday and Friday

TURRIFF AND KING EDWARD,

WITH THE VILLAGE OF NEW BYTH.

TURRIFF is a free burgh of barony, the seat of a presbytery, and the capital of the parish of that name. 34½ miles N.N.W. of Aberdeen, 17 N.N.W. of Meldrum, and 11 S.S.E. of Banff, situate on a tributary stream of the Deveron, near that river. Its charter, dated the 10th of March, 1511, was granted by James IV. in favour of Thomas Dickson, prebend of Turriff; by this, the inhabitants were entitled to hold a weekly market on the sabbath day, and three fairs annually, each to continue eight days. A sheriff small debts' court is held quarterly in the Town's House, and justice of peace courts, on the first Monday in each month. Turriff is one of the most flourishing little towns in the north of Aberdeenshire. The place is clean and neat, and gas-lighted by a joint-stock company formed in 1837. In the same year a branch of the Commercial Bank of Scotland was established here and subsequently three other banks have been engaged in the monetary transactions of the place. There are also two good inns and posting houses.

The places of worship are a church of the Establishment, a Free church, and an Episcopalian chapel, and the schools comprise a parochial one, and a private academy, in which boarders are received. The vicinage of Turriff is of an agreeable character; and the neighbourhood is very respectable, and several families of distinction are among the residents. Forglen House, the seat of Sir Robert Abercrombie, Bart. a few miles distant is one of the most elegant and imposing mansions in the north of Scotland. Fairs are held on the second and fourth Wednesday's in each month, also Saturday before the 27th in May and Saturday before the 23rd in November.

KING EDWARD, properly Ken Edar, a parish in the northern part of the county, is twelve miles in length from north west to south east by from two to five in breadth; its western extremity being washed by the Deveron—on the north it is bounded by Gamrie, on the east by Fyvie, and on the south by Montquhitter and Turriff. The general surface is hilly and heathy, and not more than half the soil is arable; there are, however, extensive plantations, and the district is progressively improving. A streamlet tributary to the Deveron, pursues a westerly direction through the parish; on its right bank stands the ruin of the ancient castle of Ken-Edar, once the seat of the potent Earl of Buchan. Within the south eastern border is situate NEW BYTH, a village formed in the course of the last century.

POST OFFICE, TURRIFF, George Alexander, Post Master.—Letters arrive from Aberdeen and the South at fifteen minutes past ten morning and afternoon at twenty minutes past three; and are despatched thereto at five minutes before seven morning, afternoon at twenty minutes before one, and evening at twenty-five minutes past six to Aberdeen only.

Letters also arrive from the North (from Banff), at half-past seven morning, again in the afternoon, and evening at ten minutes before seven; and are despatched thereto at twenty minutes before ten morning and afternoon at three.

Money Orders are granted and paid from nine morning till six evening.

Post Office, KING EDWARD, John Lumsden, Post Master.—Letters arrive (from Banff), at half-past three afternoon, and are despatched thereto at twenty minutes before four afternoon.

Post Office, NEW BYTH, John Mair. Post Master.—Letters arrive (from Turriff), at half-past two afternoon, and are despatched thereto at eight evening.

ARGYLESHIRE,

OR, as it is frequently written Argyllshire, is a large county in the south-western extremity of the Highlands. What may be termed the continental part is bounded on the north by Inverneshire; on the east by that county, and by Perthshire and Dumbartonshire; and on the south and west by bays and straits of the Atlantic Ocean. Its extreme length is one hundred and fifteen miles; its breadth averaging about thirty-three; and it has not less than six hundred miles of coast washed by the sea. The mainland, including the peninsula of Kintyre, has been computed to contain 2,735 square miles; while the islands connected with it are supposed to comprise 1,063 more: whereby the whole extent of land in Argyleshire may be estimated at 3,800 square miles. The county is divided into six principal districts—ARGYLE PROPER, COWAL, ISLAY, KINTYRE (or Cantyre), LORN and MULL. Cowal is divided from Dumbartonshire by Loch Long, and bounded by Loch Fyne on the west; betwixt Loch Fyne and Loch Linnhe, and stretching away to the north, is Lorn; from which, on its south-west quarter, their extends, in a southerly direction into the Irish sea, the peninsula of Kintyre. The islands of Mull, Jura, and Islay, are divided from the continent, or from each other, merely by narrow sounds; and may be taken from their proximity and accessability, as little else than portions of the mainland, surrounded by salt-water rivers. There are other districts of inferior size within the principal ones—as Ardnamurchan, the most westerly point of Suhart; Appin, a piece of Lorn bordering on Loch Linnhe; Glenorchy, another portion of Lorn on its eastern side; and Knapdale, occupying a position between Kintyre and Nether Lorn.

EARLY HISTORY.—This county, together with that of Perth, is presumed to have constituted the ancient Caledonian Kingdom, while the Romans and Picts were in possession of the greater part of Scotland. In former ages the western coast of Argyleshire was perpetually exposed to the descents and depredations of the Danes and the Irish, but the original inhabitants never suffered them to penetrate any considerable distance into the interior: if an enemy landed, or was seen hovering on the coast, in the course of a few hours the whole country was alarmed, and the men repaired to the shore completely armed. The heroes celebrated by Ossian were a militia, established in Argyleshire, for the purpose of defending the country in any sudden emergency. Of old the chieftain was considered the father, rather than the master of his clan: his followers loved him with a degree of enthusiasm, which made them cheerfully undergo any fatigue or danger; and it was his interest as well as his pride and glory, to requite so animated an adherance to the utmost of his power. The rent paid him was chiefly consumed in feasts given at the habitations of his tenants; on these occasions they all lived together as friends, and the departure of the chief always occasioned regret The cattle and corn, formerly consumed at these feasts of hospitality, were, in more polished times, required to be brought to the landlord's mansion, and thus friendship degenerated into oppression. Campbell of Auchinbreck had anciently a right to carry off the best cow he could find, upon several properties, each Martinmas, by way of mart—the island of Islay paid five hundred such cows yearly; but this badge of slavery has been converted into a modus of twenty shillings a head. The inconveniences attending this state, arose from the petty quarrels between neighbouring clans, excited by a spirit of plunder, and absurd points of fantastical honour. At this period the Scottish Kings had no authority over this part of the country; the M'Donalds of the Isles assuming royal powers, holding parliaments, and enacting laws, until the Bruces brought the disorderly clans into some kind of subordination. From this time, in their different wars with the English, the chiefs had recourse to the assistance of the Highlanders, with whom and the inhabitants of the low country, they contracted debts, rendering the condition of the middle classes worse, as the chiefs found it necessary to require an addition to their yearly revenue, and, in order to enforce obedience, reference was had to penal laws. In this respect the king was obliged to gratify his feudal barons; for they were always formidable to his throne. But when the laws presented any obstacle to their rapacious exactions, they openly set them at defiance: they erected gibbets, and hanged their tenants without trial or mercy. The evil became at last so flagrant, that a jury, and bailiff or sheriff, were introduced; but this measure did not remove the mischief; for the law officer was not unfrequently bribed to spare the real culprit, while the poorer, and more innocent, were considered fit subjects for the gallows. In 1748 these abominable jurisdictions were totally abolished; and no sooner were men emancipated from their fetters, than they began to improve their properties; and since that time, the face and condition of this county has undergone the happiest change. The ancient inhabitants of the Highlands of Argyleshire prided themselves on their endurance of hunger and fatigue; they were passionately fond of music and poetry; and the song and the dance soon made them forget their toils. Now the sound of the bagpipe is more rarely heard; the taste for poetry has disappeared; the deer have abandoned the mountains, and extensive forests are either converted into sheep walks, or have succumed to modern cultivation.

SOIL, SURFACE, PRODUCE, CLIMATE, &c.—The surface of this county is, like most other parts of the Highlands, mountainous, bleak, and uncomfortable to the view; hills, rocks, and huge mountains, rise upon each other in stupendous and fearful disorder. Glencroe and Glencoe, are perhaps amongst the most awfully picturesque valleys that can be contemplated. The coast is rocky, but indented with navigable bays, and islets, which afford good harbours for shipping. The vales and flat parts are cultivated; the mountains feed great quantities of sheep and black cattle; the woods, of which there are still some, principally in the Breadalbane district, afford shelter to deer and other game, while much wealth is got from the bowels of the mountains, which contain mines of lead, copper, &c., with extensive quarries of slate—of the latter, the most considerable, perhaps, are wrought at Ballachulish, and in Easdale, Seil, and Belnahua Islands, &c.; there are likewise several large granite quarries; of these, the principal are in Mull, by Auchnacraig, wrought by the Scottish Granite Co., who have supplied large blocks for the memorial to the late Prince Consort, in course of erection in London; at Furnace and Ardshiel, are those leased by the Messrs. Sim, from which are obtained the stone for paving the streets of Glasgow, and other large towns. In the beginning of the eighteenth century, much of the natural wood was cut up and sold by the proprietors, at prices by no means proportionate to the injury perpetrated upon the face of the country; despoiling it of one of its most interesting features, finding, in the introduction of modern plantations, but a meagre substitute for the noble forest tree. The county, altogether, abounds more in romantic scenes than fertile plains and wood-clad hills. The number of acres in tillage bear an insignificant proportion to those occupied by pasture, wood, hills, lakes and rivers. The CLIMATE of the lower parts of Argyleshire is mild and temperate, but in the upper inland districts, the atmosphere is severe. On the tops of many of the hills the snow often lies for months, chilling the air, and giving the country a cheerless wintry aspect, even in tolerably mild open weather. In the sinuosities of the valleys the air is of a more bland nature, these places being protected from the north and north-west winds, and having generally a southerly exposure. The central districts are more subject to rains than the coast, from the proximity of high hills, whose summits attract and break the clouds from the Atlantic. The most considerable elevations in Argyleshire are, Beininturk, 2,170; Sliagaoil, 2,228; Beneaton, 2.306; Scur Choinich, 2,364; Beinima, 2,389; Creach Bein, 2,439; Paps of Jura, 2,476; Bennabna, 2,515; Buchael Etive, 2,537; Benreisipoll, 2,661; Benanambran. 2,720; Scur Dhonuil, 2,730; Bein-more, 3,185; Cruachlassa, 3,000; and Cruachan, 3,670 feet, respectively, above the sea.

The MANUFACTURES of Argyleshire are yet in so feeble a state as to be scarcely worthy of notice. The principal article made on a large scale for exportation is whiskey, which is of a remarkably fine quality; there are distilleries in several parts of the county, for which Glasgow is the depôt. From the peculiar form and watery intersection of this county, the communication between its insular and mainland portions has been greatly facilitated by steam power navigation; and now a very considerable number of steam vessels are constantly employed in conveying passengers and goods to and fro throughout the county, and in transporting the country produce to Glasgow. There is not, at the present day, a bay, a loch, or inlet, but holds a daily or commands a weekly communication with the Lowlands, and the several districts of the country. By this means the farmers are encouraged to fatten stock which they would never otherwise think of rearing. Steam boats are, in short, the lively causes of every kind of improvement in this county, and in agriculture changes are yearly witnessed in the different districts, from the modern improvements in husbandry.

RIVERS AND LAKES.—The county is well watered by rivers (not considerable), brooks and lochs, which abound with fish. Loch Fyne is celebrated as furnishing the best herrings of any found on the coast of Scotland, and it was estimated, that there were caught, in this arm of the sea, from twenty to thirty thousand barrels annually; but the "take" has greatly fallen off in later years. Loch Awe (pronounced Loch O), is a beautiful-fresh water lake, about twenty-eight miles long and from one to two broad, reckoned the most picturesque lake of any in the Highlands, and possesses many lovely woody islets, among which are seen the ruins of several old castles; its waters, which abound with salmon, trout, and eel, discharge themselves into Loch Etive, a branch of the Atlantic Ocean, at Bunaw Ferry.

ECCLESIASTICAL DIVISIONS, REPRESENTATION, &c.—This extensive county is divided, ecclesiastically, into not more than fifty parishes, which contain only two Royal Burghs, INVERARAY, at the head of Loch Fyne, and CAMPBELTOWN, in Kintyre, the former of which is a station of the circuit court of justiciary. One member is returned to parliament for the county, the present representative being Alexander Struthers Findlay, Esq., of Castle Toward; the burghs of Campbeltown, Inverary, and Oban, in conjunction with Ayr and Irvine are also represented, the sitting member being Edward Henry John Craufurd, Esq. The Duke of Argyll is the proprietor of a large portion of the shire; and he is the chief of the family of Campbell, a surname which is found over the whole region, among high and low. The lordship of Campbell was elevated to the earldom of Argyll in 1457 by James III., to a Marquisate in 1641 by Charles I.; and to a Dukedom in 1701 by William III.

APPIN AND BALLACHULISH SOUTH.

WITH CORPACH, ARDGOUR, KINGAIRLOCH, AND THE ISLANDS OF LISMORE, SHUNA, AND THEIR VICINITIES.

APPIN, or as it is more generally called, PORT APPIN, is a small village, in the united parish of Lismore and Appin, and comprised in a district of the latter appellation; situated on the point of a small promontory, on the eastern shore of Loch Linnhe, 13 miles N. of Oban, 15 N.W. of Bonawe, 35 N.W. of Inverary, 136 N.W. of Edinburgh, and 29 S.S.W. of Fort William. The parish is of great extent, chiefly occupied as grazing farms; but the village contains very few houses, and is a mile and a half off the main road. Three miles to the north is Appin house, the seat of the late R. Downie Esq., of Appin, whose mansion is surrounded by some of the finest timber on this coast. Miss G. Downie, is the present occupant. The church is in the same direction, nearly two miles north of the village, and there is a parliamentary church nine miles distant, on the way to Ballachulish South. On a small island near PORTNACROSS, full two miles north, is the ancient and partly delapidated castle of Stalker; it is nearly square, of considerable height, and evidently has been a place of some strength; and though its area is not extensive, it occupies almost a moiety of the little islet on which it stands. About half a mile from Stalker Castle, on the ISLAND OF SHUNA, are the still more ruinous remains of another fortress of this description. A fair, formerly held at Port Appin on the Friday before Martinmas, now possesses but little attraction. There is a well-attended fair, however, for black cattle, held at SHIAN FERRY, nearly three miles to the south on the Friday last Wednesday in May, and the Friday before last Wednesday in October; at CONNELL on Monday before the last Wednesday in May, and on Friday before the last Wednesday in October, and at COBRAN of ARDGOWR, on third Friday in October.

BALLACHULISH SOUTH is a straggling but populous village on the south shore of Loch Leven, about three miles east of Ballachulish Ferry (in the same parish), and 15½ N. of Port Appin. Near the village at the foot of the Glencoe hills, are very extensive slate quarries, the property of Robert Tennant, Esq., of Ballachulish, and wrought by Alexander Pitcairn, Esq. of East Larroch house, Glencoe, who exports annually about 30,000 tons of his article to all parts of Scotland and the north of England; it is a blue slate, and of a quality equal to any produced in Britain; there is a convenient quay for its shipment, and in connection with the works there are about four hundred men employed; there is also an excellent granite quarry on the same property, and at ARDSHIEL is another worked by the Messrs. Sim. A branch of the Bank of Scotland is established in the village. Within a mile of the quarries westward is an Episcopalian chapel, and a small one for the Established Church of Scotland, also one for Roman Catholics, erected in 1836, which stands at a short distance from the village. About a mile above the quarries, on the margin of Loch Leven, near the opening of a glen exceedingly wild and romantic, and almost embosombed by trees, is Invercoe House, and opposite, on the north shore of the loch (which is here fully a mile broad), in the county of Inverness, is Callart, the modern mansion of the late Sir Duncan Cameron, Bart., of Fassifern and Callart, contributing in an eminent degree to the beauty of the landscape. At BALLACHULISH SOUTH FERRY is a comfortable hotel and posting house, a commodious and handsome building, lately rebuilt and pleasantly situated; about three quarters of a mile distant, a pier with waiting-room, &c., have been erected, here the steamers call, and a conveyance from the hotel awaits their arrival. A sub-post-office is also here. In the immediate vicinity, at the entrance of a sequestered valley, is Ballachulish House, the property of Robert Tennant, Esq., westward, three miles from which is ARDSHEAL, the seat of Donald Campbell, Esq.

At CORRAN FERRY, where Loch Linnhe narrows to a quarter of a mile in breadth, a new lighthouse has been erected. Ben Nevis is distinctly seen from here, and to the right there is a magnificent view of Glencoe.

LISMORE is an island in Loch Linnhe ten miles in length by about two in breadth; it lies between Appin and Morven, and belongs to the same united parish with the former place. Great quantities of excellent lime, as well as oats and potatoes, are exported from hence. There is a small village on this isolated fertile spot, called PORT RAMSEY; and at the southern point on a ridge of rocks projecting some distance into the channel stands a lighthouse, almost in a direct line between Oban and the sound of Mull; the light, a catophric, is on a high rounded pillar of stone masonry, and is an excellent and most useful beacon. On this island are also a church, formerly the Cathedral of the diocese of Argyll, the remains of Doune or Auchindoune Castle, at one time the residence of the bishops of Argyll, and the ruins of a Danish fort.

BONAW, TAYNUILT, AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

BONAW, or BUNAWE, is a small scattered village, on the river Awe, 122 miles N.W. of Edinburgh, 80 N.W. of Glasgow, 12 E. of Oban, and 20 N. of Inverary by Port Sonachan ferry—but round the head of Loch Awe, by Dalmally, avoiding the ferry, it is 32 miles. The Lorn Furnace Company have an establishment here, for making pig-iron. The ore is of a peculiar kind, imported by the company from the district of Furness, in Lancashire, and is smelted entirely with charcoal, made in the neighbourhood, from the timber produced on a large tract of country; they are said to be the only furnaces in Scotland heated solely by charcoal, and the iron is considered equal to any smelted in the kingdom. Alexander Kelly, Esq., employs about three hundred men in the manufacture of the charcoal for these works. Bonaw is also much celebrated for its salmon fishery, which affords employment to a considerable number of persons in the fishing season. Large quantities of the fish are sent fresh in boxes to Glasgow and other parts of Scotland, as well as pickled, sealed in jars, and kits or firkins, for the London market.

The church which was erected in 1827-8, stands about half a mile above the iron furnace, near the road to Inveraray, where also is the parish school; the funds for both these structures were supplied by the munificence of General D. Campbell, of Lochnell. A rude block of granite, the first monument erected in Britain to the memory of Lord Nelson may be seen on an eminence near the village. Near the church is the Taynuilt Inn, a comfortable and convenient house between Inveraray and Oban; and at Ardchattan, about four miles north-west, on the opposite side of Loch Etive, stand the remains of an ancient priory of the Benedictines; the venerable mansion of Mrs. Jane E. Popham, of Ardchattan, is situated on a part of the site of the priory. A new church was erected at Ardchattan in 1836, at an expense to the heritors of about £1,000; it contains sittings for four hundred. The objects that most forcibly strike the attention here are Loch Etive and Ben Cruachan—the latter, with its broad shoulders, rearing its blunt-pointed summit 3,670 feet above the salt water that laves his foot. Its circumference at the base is twenty miles, and it is about five miles from the Taynuilt Inn to the top of this stupendous eminence. The journey is somewhat fatiguing, but the view obtained from the summit will amply reward the tourist for the trouble of ascending, as it extends over the whole archipelago of the Western Isles from Islay to Skye; previous to rain and other changes of weather sounds are said to issue from Ben Cruachan.

Two miles east of TAYNUILT, where a stone bridge crosses the river Awe, is the scene of Sir Walter Scott's tale of the "Highland Widow," and two miles further is the PASS OF CRUACHAN or BRANDER, where King Robert Bruce defeated Macdougal of Lorn, in 1309. Fairs are held at GLENORCHY, on the third Wednesday in March, and fourth Tuesday in November; at SHEAN FERRY, on Friday before last Wednesday in May, and Friday before last Wednesday in October; at CONNELL on Monday before last Wednesday in May, and on Friday before last Wednesday in October.

POST OFFICE, TAYNUILT, John Mc.Ilriach, Post Master.—Letters from Edinburgh, Glasgow, the South, &c., arrive at five minutes past eleven, morning; from Oban, at ten minutes before two, morning, and from Fort William at twenty minutes past ten night, and are despatched to Edinburgh, Glasgow, and the South, at ten minutes before two, morning; to Oban at eleven morning, and to Fort William at a quarter before twelve morning.

CAMPBELTOWN,

WITH SALT-PANS, SADDEL, CARRADALE, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

CAMPBELTOWN is a royal burgh and seaport, 144 miles W. by S. of Edinburgh, and 100 S.W. of Glasgow, by sea, but by land the distance to either city is greater by 36 miles; 76 S. S. W. of Inveraray, 37 S. of Tarbert, and 10 N. of Southend; beautifully situated on a fine bay or inlet of the sea. It is a place of great antiquity, having been a royal residence so early as the fifth century, at which period Fergus the first king of Scotland, fixed his residence here, and it continued the seat of his successors till 843. It was then called Dalruadhain, and a place on the north side of the present town is still known by that name, now written Dalaruan; but the appellation formerly applied to the site of modern Campbeltown was Ceann Loch (i. e. the 'head of the Loch'), by which name the country people still designate the town in Gaelic) the present name was given to it in honour of the Duke of Argyle, when it was made a royal burgh, in 1701. The town is sheltered on the north and south sides by lofty mountains, and has one of the safest harbours in the Western Highlands, possessing a depth of from three to fifteen fathoms at low water. The haven is spacious, being nearly two miles in length by one in breadth, and protected at its mouth by the Isle of Devar, which is joined to the main land on the south side by a bar of sand, visible at low water, nearly half a mile long—the entrance to the bay being from the north. A new lighthouse was erected in 1855 on the Isle of Devar, which is far more efficient than the old one formerly on the shore. On opening into the bay, the stranger's attention is arrested by the grand though wild scenery, particularly on the south side; and the prospect immediately comprises the neat local capital, Campbeltown, situate at the head of Loch Kilkerran; the public buildings are seen towering above the dwelling houses—beyond which the eye is carried for some distance over a fine, fertile, yet mountainous country. From the shore two quays project into the bay, so as to allow vessels to load and unload at low water: the principal one, appropriated to the convenience of steam boats and heavy vessels, was much improved in 1836, and is almost on a line with the Main-street; the other stretches from Shore-street; and there is a third quay on the opposite side of the loch, adjoining that part of the town called Dalintobar.

Campbeltown formerly derived great advantage from the herring fishery, for which it was particularly famed; but since the withdrawal of the bounty it has almost gone to decay, few vessels being now engaged in the trade. The staple at the present time is distilling whisky, and in this branch seventeen firms are engaged, producing an article inferior perhaps to none in the kingdom, chiefly for the Glasgow and English houses. Next in consequence, and mainly, if not entirely dependent for its prosperity on the last named branch, is malting. Agriculture of late years, has risen into great importance. Some of the finest and richest land in this part of Scotland lies to the north and west of the town, and is chiefly the property of the Duke of Argyle, and George Macneal, Esq. A small woollen manufactory, a colliery, a tannery, a net manufactory, rope walk, &c. adds to the business importance of the place, whilst its neighbourhood abounds with lime, stone, &c. for building, and other purposes. Few towns of the size of Campbeltown possess equal commercial advantages; there are a custom-house, an extensive excise establishment, and branches of the Commercial Bank of Scotland, the Clydesdale Bank, and the Royal Bank of Scotland. The three banks are thus situated, one in Main-street, and two in Longrow, besides a Bank for Savings, in Back street—which was established in 1827, under the provisions of the Act 59, George 3, cap 62. Steam vessels sail regularly to Glasgow, Greenock, and Ayr, and occasionally to the adjacent coast towns, and to Belfast, &c, in Ireland; and numerous coasting vessels freighted to Liverpool, and other more distant parts of the empire. The principal exports are whisky, wool, herrings, live stock, salt, potatoes, &c) the imports are timber, coal, grain, yeast, groceries, ironmongery, &c. Campbeltown is connected by telegraph with the principal towns and villages in the county, as well as with Glasgow, &c. The municipal government of the town is vested in a provost, two bailies, a dean of guild, and twelve councillors, and combined with Ayr, Inveraray, Irvine and Oban, returns one member to the imperial parliament—the gentleman at present sitting being Edward Henry John Craufurd, Esq. The town is gas lighted, and the inhabitants are well supplied with water, by pipes conducted from Crosshill, into the principal streets. The town hall, a convenient building, ornamented with a handsome spire, contains a council chamber, and an assembly and other rooms. Campbeltown is the head quarters of the Argyll and Bute Artillery Militia, and a large and efficient staff are here permanently stationed, in the town are also an Artillery Volunteer Battery, and a Rifle Volunteer Corps

PLACES OF WORSHIP, SCHOOLS, &C. — The Castle Hill church, so called from its occupying the site of the ancient royal castle, was erected in 1781. The Gaelic church, so named from the language in which the service is performed, was built in 1807, and a beautiful stone spire added in 1836. The United Presbyterian church was erected in 1767, and is ornamented with a handsome and substantial stone tower, in the Gothic style, raised in 1834. The Episcopal church opened also in 1834, was at first occupied as a Secession church, but afterwards as a branch of the Scotch Episcopal church. The Roman Catholic chapel opened in 1849, is a neat structure, with carved stone front and pinnacles, which gives to it a rather imposing appearance. The burgh and parochial school is an extensive and very useful institution, supported by the corporation and the heritors in the parish; the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge have a school in the town, and another about five miles north: there are two schools of industry for girls: and the Dalintobar boys and girls schools, endowed by a Miss Lucy Campbell, in 1843.

The most remarkable piece of antiquity is an ancient cross, erected in the middle of the main street. The inscription is in the Saxon character, and the following is a literal copy, with the translation annexed.

> Hæc: est: crux: Domini: YVARI: M: H: EACHYRNA. quondam: Rectoris: de KYREGAN: et: Domini: ANDRE: nati: ejus: Rectoris de KIL: COMAN: qui hanc crucem fieri faciebat: 'This is the cross of Mr. Edward M. H. Eachran, once Rector of Cyregan, and Master Andrew his son, Rector of Kilcoman, who erected this cross.'

There is, however, no date, but it is said to have been executed about the twelfth century, and to have been brought from the Isle of Iona. South of the town is the high mountain called Bengoelion, from which there is an extensive view in the neighbouring country, including the distant objects of Arran and Pladda islands, Cowall hills, the bay and heads of Ayr, the Lowlands as far as Loch Ryan, the Craig of Ailsa, Black Head at the entrance of Belfast Lough, Donnavertie, Sanda Isles, part of the Irish coast near the points of Garronhead, Red Bay and Fair Head, the dangerous bay of Macrahanish, the Mull o' Islay, and the Paps of Jura; also the cemetery at Kilkerran, with the points of Saddel, Carradell and Skipness. As the north and south shores of Campbeltown are both pleasant and healthy, they are the residence of many respectable families; and in the neighbourhood the seats of G. Macneal and J. L. Stewart, Esqrs., deserve particular notice.

The market is held on Thursday, and the fairs on the first Thursday in February for horses; the second last Wednesday in May, for horses and cattle; the Wednesday before the third Tuesday in August, for sheep and lambs; and on the second Thursday in the same month for horses; the Friday before Kilmichael market, in October, for cattle; and the third Thursday in November, for horses.

SALT-PANS, so called from salt having been made here from sea water, is a small village, five miles west of Campbeltown, on the southern shore of Macrahanish bay, the dashing of whose waves can be heard to a great distance; and the continual heavy swell here, caused by the Atlantic rolling in between Islay and the northern coast of Ireland, is justly dreaded by the mariner. Nearly half a mile south is "Losset House," the tasteful and modern mansion of George Macneal, Esq.; of Ugadale; and a mile on the way to Campbeltown, by DRIMLEMBLE, is the Campbeltown colliery, the only work of the kind in the county; the coal lies in a bed of considerable thickness, is rather inferior in quality, and is conveyed in wagons to the town. Here are an Assembly and Free Church schools.

SADDEL and SKIPNESS form a united parish, situate at the inner extremity of the peninsular of Kintyre—the village of Saddel being about ten miles north of Campbeltown. It contains the ancient castle of Somerled, the great chieftain and founder of the clan Macdonald; and the ruins of a monastery, of the Cistercian order, founded by Somerled in 1160. Saddel is now the family residence of Dugald M'Neill, Esq., whose mansion stands in a good situation, in the centre of this fine glen. The ancient castle, which is still entire, and the ruins of the monastery, in which is the cemetery of the ancient Macdonald family, are well worthy of being visited by the curious. At CARRADALE, a village in the above parish, and a few miles north of Saddel, a pier has been erected, where the steamer calls on its voyage to and from Glasgow and Campbeltown. A sub-post office and assembly schools are in the village.

POST OFFICE, CROSS-STREET, CAMPBELTOWN, James M'Ewing, Post Master.—Letters from Edinburgh, Glasgow, and places North and South, also from England, arrive every evening at six, and from Greenock by steam-boat three times a week in winter, and every day in summer, time uncertain, and are despatched to Edinburgh, Glasgow, and Greenock by the boat at eight in the morning. On the days when there is no steamer, they are despatched the previous night by mail gig at half-past ten. Letters from the West Highlands arrive daily (except Sunday), at six evening, and are despatched at half-past ten night.

Savings Bank and Money Order Office.

Post Office, CARRADALE, John M'Arthur, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Campbeltown) on Tuesday and Saturday, and are despatched on the same days. From Greenock letters arrive and are despatched three times a week in winter, and almost daily during summer.

CLACHAN, TAYENLOAN, KILLEAN, GLENBARR,
AND BALLACHANTUIE, WITH THE ISLANDS OF GIGHA, CARA, AND THEIR VICINITIES.

CLACHAN is a village in the parish of Kilcalmonell, situated in a fine valley on the banks of a small stream, over which is a good stone bridge, and on the road from Tarbert to Campbeltown, 11 miles S. of the former, and 26 N. of the latter place. In the village is the parish church, a chapel in which Free Church service is held, and the parochial school; and a little to the east is the residence of John Gordon Mc.Millan, Esq., of Balinakill, who is the proprietor of the village. In the vicinity, to the north-west, is a vitrified fort on a large scale, and another contiguous fortification in ruins; and among the hills to the east are several beautiful fresh water lochs, well stored with trout. Seven miles south, on the same road, and near the coast is

TAYENLOAN, a small village in the parish of Killean; about half a mile in a northern direction is Largie Castle, the residence of the Hon. A. H. Mc. D. Morton; and opposite the village, but separated from the main land by a sound about four miles broad, is the island of GIGHA, which is nearly six miles long, and from two to three broad, is the property of J. W. Scarlett, Esq., of Achamore House. An established church and parochial school are in the island.

CARA, a neighbouring island, which is about one mile in length, is the property of the Honourable A. H. M'Donald Morton, who acquired it by marriage with one of the Misses Lockhart.

KILLEAN is about four miles south of Tayenloan. Near the road stands the parish church, a small neat stone building, erected in 1787, and the parochial school, and about a quarter of a mile further, on an eminence, is a handsome Free Church, with a tower erected in 1846, connected with which and situated close by is also a school. Seals are very frequently seen lying on rocks near this coast. Nearly three miles south from Killean and twelve north of Campbeltown, is the village of GLENBARR, situated on the banks of the Barr water, which is well stocked with fine salmon and trout, and nearly a mile from the shore, in a rich and well cultivated glen, is Barr House, the property of Keith Macalister, Esq, a fine structure, built in the Gothic style, and from its site an extensive view of the sea and the north east coast of Ireland may be obtained. Three miles S. of Glenbarr, and nine and a half N. W. of Campbeltown, on the main road near the shore, is erected in 1825. The road between this village and Campbeltown has been much improved of late years, and a new line, several miles in length, was cut along the shore, at a great expense, to avoid the hills on the old road. The chief employment of the people on this coast is fishing and agriculture.

BALLACHANTUIE, a small village in the united parish of Killean and Kilchenzie, containing a small church,

DUNOON,

WITH THE VILLAGES OF KIRN, INNELLAN, GLENLEAN, SANDBANK, GLENDURUEL, TIGH-NA-BRUAICH, COLINTRAIVE, & THE PARISHES OF INVERCHAOLAINE, KILFINAN, KILMODAN, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

DUNOON and KILMUN, is a parish, lying on the western shore of the Frith of Clyde—the town of Dunoon, a thriving little one, is the principal place in the district of Cowal; 27 miles S.S.E. of Inveraray, 21 S.S.W. of Strachur, and 7 S. of Kilmun: by sea it is 74 miles W. of Edinburgh, 30 W. of Glasgow, 10 N. of Rothesay, 8 W. of Greenock, and 4 W. of Gourock. Its prosperity may be mainly ascribed to the pleasant site it occupies, having in front the famed frith of Clyde, always studded with numerous sailing and steam vessels. The town extends over considerable space along the shore; for a distance of two miles in both directions, there are several ranges of genteel looking and well furnished houses, for the accommodation of families who resort hither in the summer season for sea bathing. Any information connected with those to let may be obtained of the post master and agent. Intermixed with the lodging houses are many tasteful villas, chiefly occupied by the merchants and professionals of Glasgow, &c. for country retirement. There are also several good hotels, foremost amongst which is the Argyll, a handsome and commodious house, with excellent accomodation, most delightfully and conveniently situated on the shore, and close to the pier. It is only since the year 1821 that Dunoon has become a place of resort for sea bathing; at that time there were only three slated houses in the place, and the population did not number above one hundred. In 1835 a wooden pier was constructed, three hundred feet long and twelve broad, with a projection, nearly at right angles with the end, ninety feet long and twenty broad: this substantial and convenient work cost £1,500. About a mile distant, at KIRN, is another pier, similarly constructed: and two miles north-east is Hunter's quay, a good stone building with a projection and slip, erected in 1828. Nearly a mile further, at the entrance of Holy Loch, on its southern shore, is 'Hafton House', an elegant mansion, this seat occupies a pleasant and picturesque situation, amidst thriving plantations and tastefully arranged pleasure grounds. In Holy Loch fifteen hundred vessels may ride in perfect safety, however boisterous the weather.

The parish church was built in 1816, and considerably enlarged in 1835, containing at present nearly nine hundred sittings; it is a Gothic edifice, with a square tower, and stands on an eminence in a conspicuous situation. A chapel of ease to Dunoon was erected near Toward lighthouse, seven miles south-west, in 1836-7, by subscription; it is a neat Gothic structure, containing two hundred sittings, and cost £400. In 1828, a United Presbyterian church was erected in Argyle-street, with three hundred sittings—which being found insufficient, a gallery was subsequently added. A Free church, a Scotch Episcopal church, and an English Episcopal Church, also chapels each for Baptists and Roman Catholics—all neat buildings, are the other places of worship in the town and immediate neighbourhood. There are also several public schools as well as private, boarding, and day schools. Two churches, one for the Establishment, the other for the United Presbyterians are situated at KIRN.

A sheriff and small debts court is held once a quarter at the Crown Inn, Dunoon. Fairs are held at Dunoon on the third Thursday in January, February, August, and November.

INNELLAN, is a thriving and respectable village, four miles west of Dunoon on the shore of the Frith of Clyde. The houses are mostly of a first class order, and the grounds adjoining being tastefully laid out, give them a neat appearance; many being the summer residences of the Glasgow merchants. There are two churches, and a good school. The Royal Hotel which deserves particular notice, is built on an elevated site, its dimensions are large and imposing; it stands second to none in this part of the country for its excellent accomodation; in front is the pier at which steamers to and from Glasgow call several times a day. A few miles further on is Castle Toward, a massive modern edifice, erected by the late Kirkman Finlay, Esq., and now the residence of his son; the grounds contain the ruins of the ancient castle.

GLENLEAN or CLACHAIG is a village in the parish of Dunoon, from six to seven miles north-west therefrom. The manufacture of gunpowder by Messrs. Curtis's and Harvey, is carried on here on an extensive scale, and give employment to many hands. There is also a good school in the village, a post office, and a comfortable public house, the Clachaig Inn.

SANDBANK is a small but thriving village, 3 miles north-west of Dunoon, on the road to Kilmun. There is a good school in the village, several respectable shopkeepers and traders, two or three good Inns, but that which deserves more particular notice is the Pier Hotel, a fine building erected by Mr. Jamieson, who is also the occupier. This hotel being close to the pier at which steamers call several times a day, affords great accommodation to parties travelling in this direction.

GLENDURUEL is a village in the parish of Kilmodan, about 17 miles N.W. of Dunoon. An Established and a Free Church, connected with each of which is a school and a sub-post office are in the village.

TIGH-NA-BRUAICH, is a village in the parish of Kilfinan, pleasantly situated on the west bank of the Kyles of Bute. An Established and a Free church are in the village, there are likewise two good Inns, and a post office.

COLINTRAIVE is a small village in the parish of Inverchaolaine, also situated in the Kyles of Bute, it contains an Inn and sub-post office.

EASDALE AND LUING, SHUND, TORSAY, BELNAHUA AND PLADDA ISLANDS, WITH MELFORT, KILNINVER, KILMELFORT AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

EASDALE is a village, partly situated on the island of that name, and partly on the island of Seal, from which it is separated by a narrow sound; and in the united parish of KILBRANDON and KILCHATTAN; it is 16 miles S.W. by S. of Oban, 30 N.N W. of Lochgilphead, 40 W. of Inverary, and 142 W. of Edinburgh. It is chiefly remarkable for its slate quarries, which are said to have been open for three centuries; they are the property of the trustees of the late Marquis of Breadalbane, and are wrought by the Nether Lorn Slate Company, who altogether employ about two hundred men, and produce about 17,000 tons of slate annually, of a superior quality, which is exported to all parts of Scotland, and the north of England. Several of the quarries, which are now above one hundred and fifty feet below the sea, are kept dry by pumping with steam engines. The geological formation of the slate-rock here is similar, as to stratification and cleavage, to the Welch rock: and the island of Easdale, which is nearly a mile in circumference, is entirely formed of this rock, except a few trap dykes which here and there intersect it. There is a good quay for shipping the slate, and safe anchorage in the sound, through which the Glasgow steam boats pass almost daily to and from the north. Ardmaddy Castle, an ancient seat of the Breadalbane family, about two miles east of Easdale, is situated in a fine, pleasant bay: the grounds are well wooded, and contain several pretty cascades. A marble quarry was wrought near the castle about a century ago: lead mines have been worked in the island of Luing, and there are several caves in Kilbride well worth visiting.

BELNAHUA and PLADDA, two small islands to the north of Scarba, contain several quarries of excellent blue slate: they are at present wrought by Messrs. J. and W. Shaw. The number of men generally employed is about sixty.

MELFORT is a village, pleasantly situated at the head of Loch Melfort, a mile off the high road, and in the united parish of KILNINVER and KILMELFORT. It is about 8 miles S E. of Easdale, and 15½ S. of Oban. The manufacture of gunpowder is carried on in the village, eight mills being employed for that purpose. There is a convenient quay for its shipment. A Free Church and school are here, and a parochial school at Kilmelfort.

INVERARAY WITH FURNACE, STRACHUR, LOCHGOILHEAD,

CAIRNDOW, CLADICH, DALMALLY AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

INVERARAY is royal burgh, the seat of a presbytery, and the county town of Argyleshire, 102 miles W. by N. of Edinburgh, 60 N.W. of Glasgow, 32 S.E. of Oban, by Port Sonachan Ferry, and 42 by Dalmally, avoiding the ferry, 20 S.E. of Bonaw, by the before-mentioned ferry, but 32 by the coach road and Dalmally, 24 N.E. of Lochgilphead, and 76 N.N.E. of Campbeltown. It is delightfully situated on the north western shore of Loch Fyne, on a point of land. (Ardreanich, or the Fern Point) forming the southern point of a fine bay, which receives the waters of the Aray and the Shira: over the first is an elegant stone bridge of two arches, and is within half a mile of the town, the second is about 1½ miles E. and is crossed by a bridge of one arch. From the former of these streams the town derives its name, "Inver" signifying the mouth—from its proximity to the mouth of the "Aray." A short distance from the town, at the extremity of the bay, stands Inveraray Castle, the princely residence of the Duke of Argyll. The architecture of this mansion is highly finished gothic, with turrets at the angles, and its site is particularly beautiful and commanding. From its southern front there is an expansive view for several miles down Loch Fyne, and of the adjacent lofty mountains, which are adorned with fine plantations to their summits. A square pavilion rising high above its turrets, supplies light to a gallery (which leads to all the upper chambers) and a spacious hall, furnished with an elegant organ, and decorated with the arms used by the Argyleshire militia, in 1745. Amongst the paintings, are those of the earl who was executed in the reign of Charles II., and also the Marquis who suffered in that of James the VII. The drawing room and some other apartments, are lined with rich and costly tapestry of rare designs—indeed, the whole interior is fitted and furnished in sumptuous style. The castle also contains two beautiful pedestals of red granite, or porphyry, of a very rare kind, discovered by the present Duke, near the Ross of Mull: two slabs were sent to Aberdeen and converted into pedestals, in forming which, it was found to be much superior, and to take a higher polish than either the Peterhead or the Aberdeen granite. The Duke of Sutherland subsequently procured a considerable quantity for the internal improvements of Dunrobin Castle. On entering the bay, the castle has a very majestic appearance, and the woods, that, rising for a considerable distance, adorn the domain, give the town an appearance of grandeur. Every stranger is struck with the neatness of the town, which, though small, is well built, and some of the houses approach to elegance. The park and grounds of the castle present a drive, almost in a direct line, of about ten miles, with several others of great extent, all thrown open to the public. Upon the lawn is a brass gun that belonged to the admiral's ship Florida, one of the "Invincible armada," blown up in the Tobermory bay in 1588, where she was forced to put it through stress of weather. The gun which was taken from the bay is about ten feet in length, and is fired upon certain occasions.

The chief business of this place is the herring fishery, a great proportion of the produce of which is sent to the Glasgow market. Loch Fyne terminates about nine miles above the town, and from the fineness of its scenery, and the richness of its herrings, is justly remarkable. The value of herrings taken out of the Loch in a single season, until within the last eighteen years, frequently amounted to £30,000, but of late years, not more than one-fourth of that amount has been realized. In prosperous seasons, there are at times from three hundred to four hundred boats employed at once on its waters: the loch is fifty miles long, and is about ten broad below Loch Gilp, seldom exceeding three above OTTERFERRY. From a convenient part of the town, and projecting from the shore, is a well-built quay. In the town are two branch banks—one of the National Bank of Scotland, the other of the Union Bank of Scotland, and two good hotels and posting-houses. There is daily communication with Glasgow throughout the year, by means of steamers across Loch Fyne and to Saint Catherine's and Strachur, and also by Hutcheson and Co.'s. steam boats, which sail daily during the summer, and twice a week in winter.

Inveraray was erected into a burgh by charter, granted by Charles I., in 1648, and its government is vested in a provost, two baillies, a dean of guild, with eight councillors, a town clerk, and a treasurer. The burgh unites with Campbeltown and Oban in this county, and with Ayr and Irvine, in Ayrshire, in sending one member to Parliament. E. H. J. Craufurd, Esq., is the present representative. The court house and gaol, forming a substantial building of stone, is situate on the shore, and has an imposing appearance when seen from the loch. In it a sheriff's court is held every Friday from 15th January to 15th March, from 3rd April to 31st July, and from 1st October to 15th December; and quarter sessions on the 1st Tuesday in March, May, August, and last Tuesday in October; also a borough court occasionally.

On the quay may be seen a sculptured stone cross supposed to be of the date 1400, it is eight feet high, and bears the following inscription "Hæc est crux nobilium virorum, videlicet, Dondcani Meic Gyllichomghan, Patrici filii ejus, et Maelmore, filii Patrici, qui hanc crucem fieri faciebet." It probably marked the grave of the MacGillacomghan family, who were evidently the original proprietors of Inveraray.

The places of worship are, a neat church of stone, surmounted by a spire, situated in the main street, and in which service is performed both in Gaelic and English; a secession church erected in 1836, on land given by D. Paterson, Esq.; and a neat free church, built in 1844, at the south end of the town. A parochial burgh or grammar school, and a school of industry are supported by the munificence of the Duke and Duchess of Argyll. About a mile and a half north-east of Inveraray is Glen-Shira, in length about six miles; the scenery through which is exceedingly beautiful—presenting gently-sloping hills, whose sides are clothed with wood, and rich meadow land, intersected with winding stream and lake (Duloch), the whole furnishing a landscape of no ordinary beauty. Fairs are held at Inveraray on the last Friday in May, and the last Thursday in October, and a wool market on the third Friday in July. At Glenorchy, on third Wednesday in March, and fourth Tuesday in November. At Strachur, for cattle, last Saturday in May, and for cattle, sheep, and horses, the first Tuesday in October.

CLADICH is a hamlet on Loch Awe, ten miles north of Inveraray, and in the united parish of Glenorchy and Inishail, a road to the left leads to Port Sonachan Ferry, three miles distant, crossing Loch Awe, by which the distance to Bonaw and Oban is shortened ten miles; another road from Cladich on the right leads to Dalmally, and round the head of Loch Awe to Oban.

DALMALLY, 16 miles N.E. of Inveraray, is beautifully situated near the head of Loch Awe, and in the view of the vale of Glenorchy. Here is an excellent hotel and posting house—gentlemen frequenting which, have the privilege of fishing in the river Orchy and Loch Awe, both celebrated for their salmon and trout; boats are kept for the lake.

The parish church is situated on the road to Oban, a Free Church is also close by. Loch Awe is twenty six miles long and from one to half a mile broad, its most attractive scenery lies between here and Port Sonachan, the hills on each side being thickly clothed with timber.

and several small islands interspersed on its surface; on a rock are the fine old ruins of Kilchurn Castle, supposed to have been built about 1440, by Sir Colin Campbell, the first knight of Glenorchy.

At FURNACE, about eight miles south of Inveraray, on the western bank of Loch Fyne, are extensive granite quarries, leased and wrought by Messrs. William Sim & Co. These quarries, which employ generally one hundred and fifty men, furnish nearly the whole of the stone for paving the streets of Glasgow, Greenock Docks, Liverpool, &c. At GOATFIELD, in the vicinity of Furnace, an establishment for the manufacture of gunpowder has been in successful operation for some years.

STRACHUR is a village on the eastern bank of Loch Fyne five miles south of Inveraray, in the united parish Strachur and Strathlachlan, the parish church is in the village, as well as a Free Church, and a parochial school. A ferry steamer plies between here and Inveraray three or four times a day in summer, and twice a day in winter, in connection with coaches to Dunoon and Kilman.

ISLAND OF ISLAY,

INCLUDING BOWMORE, BRIDGE-END, PORT-ASKAIG, PORT-CHARLOTTE, PORT-ELLEN ARDBEG, PORTNAHAVEN, AND THEIR VICINITIES.

ISLAY is a large island, and the most southerly of those called the Hebrides. In length from north to south it is about thirty miles, and its extreme landbreadth about eighteen. Askaig, the most northern port on the island, is distant from Edinburgh (by way of Tarbert), 179 miles, from Inveraray 76, and from Tarbert 40. It lies in a westerly direction from the peninsula of Kyntire, distant from it about twelve miles, and is separated on the north, from the island of Jura by a narrow channel. It comprises three parochial divisions, namely, Bowmore (or Killarrow), Kilchoman and Kildalton. The mountains to the east of the island rise to an altitude of fifteen hundred feet, and are the resort of eagles, falcons, and other birds. The shore is very rugged, but the face of the country is finely varied by hill and dale. Many parts are well planted, and the island contains several beautiful lakes, well stocked with most delicious trout, together with the rivers Sorn and Laggan. The former empties itself into Loch Indaal, and the latter into Laggan Bay. The Laggan water is not surpassed in the West Highlands as a salmon stream. The land is tolerably cultivated, but it is still susceptible of great improvement. Upwards of three thousand head of black cattle, and several hundred horses, peculiarly adapted for small carriages, are annually exported, besides sheep. An immense quantity of whisky, the produce of the distilleries in the island, is also exported to Glasgow, England, and America. Lead and iron are said to abound in this island, and a company was at one time formed, called the Islay Mining Company, for extracting some of those minerals; the undertaking, however, proved abortive, and the company was dissolved. There is regular weekly communication by steamer from Port Ellen and Port-Askaig with Glasgow and the North of Ireland, and West Tarbert on the main land. The proprietary of the island is with Charles Morrison, Esq., London; John Ramsay, Esq., Kildalton; Alexander Mc.Laurin, Esq., Sunderland; Colin Campbell, Esq., Balinabay, and Smith Child, Esq., Stallington, Staffordshire. There are many ruinous remains of ancient castles, churches, &c., scattered over the island; but perhaps the most remarkable natural curiosity in this part of the empire is Sloc-Mhaol-Doraidh, a large basin formed in the rock by the action of the sea, on the south-west point of Laggan Bay, about nine miles from Bowmore, into which the turbulent waters of the western ocean rush, by two channels in the rock, covered with natural arches: the grandeur of the scene presented during the flowing of the tide is inconceivable; this cave is scarcely inferior to the famed one of Fingal, in Staffa, and can only be entered by a boat in fine weather. At the entrance stands a perpendicular rock fifty feet high, with a belt round it, and is designated the 'soldier,' from appearing to guard the approach to it. The interior is dome-roofed and spacious, with a beautiful lake of fresh water, 'icy cold and crystal clear.' There are several other interesting natural perforations in different parts of the island. The scenery in this locality, as well as several other points of the island, is highly interesting, and occasionally approaches the sublime. It was on this coast, in the vicinity of the last-named cave, that, on the 27th of April, 1847, the Exmouth was wrecked, when two hundred and forty-eight of the crew and passengers perished.

BOWMORE, the principal place on the island, is situated on the east side of Loch Indaal, three miles south of Islay House. The town, which consists of two principal streets, and several smaller ones diverging, possesses a good quay and a comfortable inn. It is a place of some business, several trading vessels belonging to it. The public structures are, the parish church—a circular edifice, with a peculiarly formed spire, a neat Free church, a Baptist chapel, a union workhouse, and a building originally intended for a gaol, but now appropriated to the more beneficial uses of a public library, containing eighteen hundred volumes. An assembly room is on the same floor as the library. There is also a large and excellent parochial school, with a house for the master, built and liberally endowed by Campbell of Islay, likewise a Free church school. A sheriff's court is held here twice a year.

At BRIDGE-END, three miles north of Bowmore, and eight miles south of Port Askaig, is a branch of the National Bank of Scotland, which greatly facilitates the commercial transactions of the island. At the inn here a court is held monthly for the recovery of small debts, and sessions for the trial of petty offences. A short distance to the west stands Islay House, surrounded with fine gardens and well planted grounds: it is situated at the head of Loch Indaal, of which it commands a fine view, as well as of the adjacent country.

PORT-ASKAIG is a small creek or harbour, on the north side of the island, opposite Jura, from which it is separated by the sound of Islay, about a mile broad; the port is eleven miles north of Bowmore, and is the only quay on the island where vessels of considerable burden can load and unload at low water.

About four miles from Bridge-End, on the road to Port-Askaig, is the village of BALLEGRANT, where there is a lead mine, worked by an English company, under the management of Mr. Wm. Jeffrey; the lead is of first-rate quality, and contains a small quantity of silver.

PORT-CHARLOTTE is a small village, in the parish of Kilchoman, on the west side of Loch Indaal, nearly opposite to Bowmore; it is 16 miles S.W. of Port-Askaig, and contains a good inn, a distillery, and an excellent school, erected by Charles Morrison, Esq.

PORT-ELLEN is a seaport and village, in the parish of Kildalton, on the east side of the island; 11 miles S.E. of Bowmore, and 22 s. of Port-Askaig. In 1824 there stood only one house here, though in 1836 there were above one hundred and fifty; and the population and habitations have greatly increased since. The bay is considered safe, and is nearly a mile wide; the quay is commodious, and is formed on a rocky promontory near the middle of the harbour; the quay was erected in 1826, and enlarged and improved in 1832, by Campbell of Islay, who also erected a lighthouse. A branch of the City of Glasgow Bank is established here. The village is substantially built, and contains two inns. The inhabitants are principally employed in agriculture and fishing; and the prosperity of the village may be said to have been increasing for several years. About two miles from Port Ellen, is LAPHROAIG DISTILLERY, worked by Mr. Johnston, producing, it is said by competent judges in these matters, the best whisky in the island. In the same locality at LAGAVULIN, is the extensive distillery of Messrs. J. L. Mackie & Co., and at ARDBEG, about four miles distant, is also the extensive distillery worked by Messrs. Alexander Macdougall & Co.; both are equally noted with the first-named for the manufacture of whisky of first-rate quality, and large quantities are exported to England and America, by these and other houses in the neighbourhood.

PORTNAHAVEN is a small village and seaport, 24 miles S.W. of Port-Askaig, and 16 S.W. of Bridge-End. It is at the southern extremity of the island, having a quay formed by the rocks on the shore; and near the port is an elegant lighthouse, erected in 1824-5. Here is also a parliamentary church, and a parochial school. A considerable business is done in the season of fishing, the shores on this part of the island abounding with the finny treasures.

The fairs held in the island of Islay are as follow:—for cattle, last Wednesday in April, last Tuesday in June, July, August, and September. At Bowmore, February, Tuesday, if 12th, or first Tuesday after; August 12th, if Friday, or first Friday after, for horses; last Tuesday in August for cattle; November for horses, Friday, if 12th, or first Friday after; for cattle, Tuesday before; at Bridge-End, for cattle and horses, Tuesday before second last Wednesday in October. At Ballygrant for horses, Tuesday in February after that at Bowmore. At Port-Askaig, for cattle, second last Wednesday in May. At Port-Ellen, for horses and cattle, in November, day before that at Bowmore.

THE ISLE OF JURA,

WITH THOSE OF COLONSAY, GARVELLOCH, LUNGA, ORANSAY, AND SCARBA, WITH MILLTOWN VILLAGE.

JURA, an island of the Hebrides, is thirty-three miles long, and from two to ten miles broad, separated from Knapdale, on the western coast of Scotland by the sound of Jura (ten miles broad), and from the island of Islay, to the south, by the sound of Islay (about a mile broad), and, with the other islands, forms the united parish of Jura and Colonsay. Jura belongs to Richard Denison Campbell, Esq., whose residence is at Ardfin, a respectable mansion on the south shore of the island. The most remarkable object in the isle is the Paps of Jura, an eminence nearly 2,500 feet above the level of the sea, they are three in number, standing on the same ridge, but having two valleys separating them, the tops are round, and consist, for some distance down the sides, of loose stones, rendering the ascent difficult; the top of the highest, called Beinnan-Oir, is about six miles from the village of Milltown. The island also contains several caves, one of them is so large, that it is said, a regiment of soldiers might perform their exercise in its spacious arena. To the north of the island, in a strait, nearly a mile broad, separating the island of Scarba from Jura, is the gulph of Correy Vrecken, where the rush of waters is so great, during the ebbing of the tide, as to form a terrible whirlpool, the noise of which can be heard for many miles. The red deer abound in the uplands of this island.

COLONSAY, a rather high rocky island, to the west of Jura, twelve miles long, and about three broad, is the property of Duncan M'Neill, Esq., of Colonsay, who has a good mansion house on the island of Killoran. The ruinous sacred buildings, and the numerous inscriptions on the grave-stones covering the ashes of the illustrious dead, are considered by many almost equal to those found on the island of Iona.

GARVELLOCH, or Holy Island, contains an extensive old fort, called Dunconnel, once a stronghold belonging to the Lords of the Isles, and in one of them called the Nun's Island, are considerable remains of an old nunnery, said to have been founded by St. Columbus.

ORANSAY, a small island to the south of Colonsay, contains the residence of the late Captain Alexander M'Neill, who was one of the many that perished in the melancholy shipwreck of the Orion steamer, off Portpatrick, in 1850.

MILLTOWN, frequently called Craighouse, the principal village in Jura, is eight miles from Port Askaig ferry. It has a good quay, and the harbour, which is large, and formed by several small islands, has obtained the appellation of Small Isles Harbour. About half a mile north of the village, is the parish church and a parochial school. The village contains a distillery, a comfortable inn, and a corn mill.

KILMUN,

WITH THE VILLAGES OF STRONE, BLAIRMORE, ARDENTINNY, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

KILMUN, formerly the capital of a parish of the same name, now incorporated with that of Dunoon, is a pleasant, thriving village, and of late years has acquired no little notice as a place resorted to for sea-bathing, it is situated on the north shore of Holy Loch, 22 miles S.E. of Inveraray, 16 S.E. of Strachur, 7 N. of Dunoon, 30 W. of Glasgow, and 8 W. of Greenock. This place may be almost said to owe its origin to the late proprietor, David Napier, Esq., for, previously to attracting his notice, there were very few houses, whereas it is now a respectable village, having many handsome dwellings, occupied as summer residences by opulent merchants and professionals of Glasgow. There are also several pleasant and well-furnished lodging houses. Holy Loch is full three miles long: at its entrance it is scarcely a mile wide, but within it expands to a fine sheet of water, extending a mile and a half in width; at its head it receives the lesser and greater Echaig—the latter river flows from Loch Eck, a beautiful fresh water lake, seven miles long and one broad, whose steep rugged shores rising to a considerable height, form a striking contrast, on a fine day, to its wide placid waters. Both the loch and the two rivers before mentioned afford plenty of sport to the angler, and the ride through the valley to Strachur, or Loch Fyne, is seldom exceeded for wild and sublime scenery. The quay, which was constructed by Mr. Napier (before mentioned), in 1829, will admit the steam-boats alongside at all times of the tide. The quarantine station for the Clyde was formerly opposite this village. Of the ancient history of Kilmun, little is known; but its old church, the mausoleum of the ducal family of Argyll, and especially the tower of the original church, evidence it to have been, in former times, a place of some note.

STRONE, a scattered village, which nearly joins Kilmun, has greatly improved in the last few years, and many respectable lodging houses have been built, besides the erection of two churches.

PORTINSTUCK or BLAIRMORE, a few miles further, on the west shore of Loch Long, is a small but improving village of recent erection. ARDENTINNY another small village about five miles higher up the loch, is situated in a beautiful vale, and celebrated for the picturesque scenery its neighbourhood affords.

LOCHGILPHEAD, ARDRISHAIG, BELLANACH,

KILMARTIN, KILMICHAEL, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

LOCHGILPHEAD is a thriving burgh, pleasantly situated at the northern extremity or head of Loch Gilp, from which the name is derived. It is 125 miles W. of Edinburgh, 53 N. of Campbeltown, 24 S.W. of Inverary, and 15 N. of Tarbert. The town is of comparatively modern erection, its site contained only two or three fishermen's huts at the commencement of the present century: it now consists of several well formed streets, the footpaths of which are well paved, and the inhabitants are plenteously supplied with water from a reservoir constructed by the burgh commissioners. The streets are lighted by gas supplied by a joint-stock company, whose pipes extend from the Asylum at Lochgilphead to beyond Ardrishaig, a distance of four miles. Lochgilphead was constituted a burgh under the Act 13 and 14 Victoria, cap. 33, and is governed by nine commissioners of police, including one senior and two junior magistrates appointed under the provisions of the said act. In 1861, there were 1,674 inhabitants, principally employed in agriculture and fishing, others are engaged in a woollen cloth manufactory and dye works established here some time. Meetings of the Argyll prison, police, and lunacy boards are held at stated periods, also monthly meetings of the South Argyll district road trustees and of the local justices, and a sheriff's small debt court is held quarterly. Lochgilphead is rapidly improving, in front of the main street a part of the loch has been embanked, and a new piece of ground made for the convenience of the large cattle fairs or markets. The town is connected by numerous excellent roads with all parts of the county, and a line of telegraph also connects it with Campbeltown, Inveraray, Oban, and Glasgow; the survey of a projected railway has been completed from Ardrishaig to Dalmally, passing through Lochgilphead. A cloth manufactory and a carding mill are worked by water power from a stream passing to the north of the town. On the Kilmory side is a quay, for the accomodation of the small craft engaged in the herring fishery.

Besides the parliamentary church, which was built at the head of Argyle street, in 1827-8, there is a Baptist chapel in the same street, a Reformed Presbyterian church in Union-street, a Free church in Lochnell-street, and there was erected in 1852, on the north side of the town, a handsome Scotch Episcopal cathedral church, and a residence for the Bishop of Argyle and the Isles: the site commands an extensive view of Loch Fyne, and the varied and beautiful scenery around. A commodious court-house and a jail has been built. The County Asylum and medical superintendent's residence are situated on the hill overlooking the town, and a combination poor-house has also been erected there. The Crinan canal passes a few hundred yards to the west of the town, and separates it from Auchendarroch, the residence of Alexander Campbell, Esq., on whose property the greater part of the town is built. A mile to the south-east is Kilmory House, the seat of Sir John Powlett Orde, Bart.; the house, surrounded with its well-wooded grounds, forms a conspicuous and interesting feature in the landscape from all parts of the loch, especially from Ardrishaig, which is nearly opposite. Ten miles north-west is Duntroon Castle, the property of John Malcolm, Esq., of Poltalloch, who possesses extensive demesnes in this part of the county, and on whose estate above two thousand acres of soft peat moss at the head of Loch Crinan, have been converted into excellent corn and grazing land; the farm is appropriately called 'Experiment.' Calton Mor, the elegant residence of this gentleman, erected at a cost of about £200,000, overlooks the fertile plain which has been thus reclaimed. Fairs are held on the third Thursday in March, for horses; on the second Wednesday after the last Wednesday in May, and the second Wednesday after the last Wednesday in October for black cattle, and on the second Thursday after the fourth Thursday in November for horses.

ARDRISHAIG, two miles south, contains 984 inhabitants, who are chiefly engaged in fishing and curing herrings, and in the transit trade which connects the Western Highlands with Glasgow and the other ports on the Clyde, whilst others are engaged in the distillery at GLENGILP, one of considerable repute in its produce. This place may be said to be the port to Lochgilphead, with which it is now nearly joined. In addition to a protective pier of four hundred yards in length, with a small lighthouse at its extremity, a commodious low water pier and slip within the harbour with a depth of seven feet were erected in 1837, by the government commissioners of the Crinan canal. This canal extends from Ardrishaig to Crinan, a distance of ten miles, and affords the means of obviating a boisterous voyage of forty leagues round the Mull of Kintyre. Steam packets pass the canal on their way from Glasgow to all parts of the western coast, and by the Caledonian canal to Inverness. Here is an established church, also a Free church mission house, and an Episcopal and Free church school. There is also a commodious hotel. Many excellent sites for villas are along the coast, several have already been built on, and some villas are let furnished as summer quarters, the increased communication with the south making it a favourite coast residence.

BELLANACH is a small village, about 6 miles W. of Lochgilphead, situated in a glen on the southern bank of the Crinan canal, which here forms a fine triangular sheet of water, and terminates at Crinan, about a mile further west. The village contains a sub-post office, and a parochial school.

KILMARTIN, a small village, nearly nine miles north of Lochgilphead, contains a comfortable inn, a parochial school, a parish church and a free church. About 2 miles to the east is the mansion of Calton Mor, the residence of John Malcolm, Esq., of Poltalloch, about a quarter of a mile more distant, standing on a prominent rock facing Loch Crinan is Duntroon Castle, and about two miles up the valley is Kilmartin House, a commodious mansion, also the property of the above named gentleman, and within two miles from the last named are the beautiful ruins of Carnazarie Castle, formerly the residence of the Bishops of Argyle. Eleven miles west of Kilmartin, by a circuitous road, is Craignish Castle, the residence of Charles F. T. Gascogyne, Esq. of Craignish. At BARBRECK is the handsome mansion and demesne of Captain Colin Yorke Campbell, R.N.. Fairs are held at Kilmartin on the first Thursday in March, for horses, and the fourth Thursday in November, for horses and hiring servants. A prize show in connection with the Poltalloch farming society, is held here for cattle, sheep, and horses, in September.

KILMICHAEL-GLASSARY, at one time a burgh of considerable repute, now a small hamlet, is a parish situated about midway between Lochgilphead and Kilmartin. The parish church and manse of Glassary are here, the parish school and market stance, and a good Inn, are at Bridgend, on the river Add, half a mile west of Kilmichael. Between Kilmichael and Kilmartin there are numerous druidical remains. Two large and much frequented fairs are held here annually, at which from seven to eight thousand head of black cattle are generally exposed for sale—namely, on the last Wednesday in May, which is also for horses and sheep, and the last Tuesday before the last Wednesday in October, at both of which fairs the hiring of servants takes place.

OBAN AND ITS VICINITY.

OBAN is a modern neat town and sea-port, in the parish of Kilbride, 136 miles W.N.W. from Edinburgh, 92 from Glasgow, 40 S.S.W. of Fort William, 32 W.N.W. of Inveraray, over Port Sonachan ferry (but 42 by coach road and Dalmally), and 30 S.E. of Tobermory. To Vint, Staffa, and Iona hence, going round the island of Mull, the voyage is about 120 miles, and it is about the same distance to Portree, in Skye. The town enjoys a beautiful situation on the west coast of Mid Lorn district, and at the head of a fine bay, formed by the island of Kerrara in front, having an entrance at each end. The bay is from twelve to twenty fathoms deep, is well sheltered by lofty mountains, and large enough to anchor with convenience a large number of merchantmen. There are two commodious quays, that on the north was considerably enlarged and improved in 1863. The imports of Oban consist chiefly of merchandise from Glasgow, Liverpool and Ireland, and its principal exports are whisky and wool. The municipal government of the town is vested in two baillies, four councillors, and a town clerk, and Oban is contributary with the burghs of Ayr, Campbeltown, Inverary, and Irvine, in returning one member to parliament—The constituency numbers 113, and the town, according to the census of 1861, contains 1,936 inhabitants.

The court house and police station, comprised in one building, is a new and handsome erection, situated in Argyll Square. In it is held a sheriff's court once a quarter, a justice of peace court for small debts the first Friday of every month, and a police and burgh court on the first Monday of every month. The justices in Oban and vicinity are A. Campbell, Esq., of Monzie: D. Campbell, Esq., Lochmell; A. Gregorson, Esq., Oban; A. Kelly, Bonaw; A. M'Dougall, Esq., of M'Dougall; P. M'Dougall, Esq., of Gallanach, T. W. M. Allan, Esq., of Glenfeochan, J. Stevenson, Esq., of Kerrera, and the two baillies of Oban, ex officio; the magistrates and councillors are likewise police commissioners. A quarry of excellent freestone was some years since opened, about four miles south, on the shore of Loch Feochan, on the property of Patrick M'Dougall, Esq., of Gallanach. The town is divided by a small river, the west side belonging to Robert M'Fie, Esq., of Airds: that on the north to the trustees of the late Marquis of Breadalbane. In the eastern division is a small handsome church, erected in 1821, as a chapel of ease of the parish. St. John's Episcopal church, a neat Gothic edifice capable of seating 200, was erected by subscription for the accommodation of the numerous visitors, at a cost of about £1,700, and was consecrated in September, 1864, by the Bishop of London. The Bishop of the diocese and trustees are the patrons. In Tweedale street is an Independent chapel, built in 1820, and a Secession church, opened in 1835; a handsome Free church occupies a commanding site in the rear of the town. In the same neighbourhood a union poorhouse has been erected, and was opened in 1862, for the reception of the poor of the several parishes in the district of Lorn, it embraces all necessary accommodation, and with the grounds covers an area of three acres.

Oban and its vicinity offer many inducements both to the tourist and antiquarian. Among the antiquities may be particularly noticed the ruins of Dunolly Castle, situated a mile north of the town: and three miles distant is Dunstaffnage Castle—the latter formerly belonged to the powerful Lord of Lorn, and was demolished by Robert Bruce, in retaliation for the injuries inflicted upon him and his followers (after crossing Loch Lomond, on his way to Ireland) by that noble: in the chapel of the castle is a remarkable echo. Six miles to the north, on the opposite side of Loch Etive, are the ruins of Berigonium, the ancient metropolis of Caledonia, and two miles further north is Barcaldine Castle. From a hill contiguous to the town, may be seen the distant objects of Duart Castle, in Mull; Ardtornish Castle in Morven, the Castle of Aross, and the Castle of Geœlin. In visiting these, the antiquarian will find much gratification, all of them having been the residences of the ancient Scotch nobles, and even in their present state, exhibiting proofs of their former strength and grandeur. Oban may also be said to rank among the most healthful and pleasing summer retreats in the Highlands of Scotland. Its situation for bathing is extremely good, and it possesses every accommodation for the convenience of the great number of fashionable and wealthy visitors, who are constantly calling here in the summer on their way to the fine scenery on the western coast, and in Skye, and to the far-famed islands of Staffa and Iona, imparting a liveliness and interest to the appearance of the town. The several hotels afford every accommodation to the traveller or tourist, particularly the Caledonian and Great Western, also the King's Arms and Albert Hotels. The Great Western is a handsome new building pleasantly situated, its interior decorations, furnishing, &c., are superior, but tasteful and comfortable. The inhabitants of Oban endeavour to imitate the manners and conversation of the visitors, which causes much better English to be spoken, and far more politeness and urbanity of manners to be displayed here than in many other places on this coast. Much improvement has been effected of late years, and in addition to the public buildings already noticed, many handsome new villa residences may be seen on the hills behind the town; modern shops and warehouses are also superseding the old, and of the latter a handsome row in George-street, belonging to Messrs. M'Caig attract attention, the windows are of plate glass, 13 feet by 6, the building is a substantial one of stone, and reflects credit on Mr. Donald M'Donald, the contractor.

An Act of Parliament was obtained in 1865 by the Callander and Oban Railway Company, for the construction of a line from Callander to this town, so as to connect it by a direct line of communication with the Lowlands, the length of the intended line is 70 miles, which, when complete, will contribute much to the prosperity of both town and neighbourhood. Steam boats ply between Glasgow, Greenock, Inverness, Mull, Staffa and Iona, five or six times a week in summer; to Skye and Stornaway twice a week, and to other places further north, once a fortnight during that season, also to Ireland. The coach service is likewise constant and regular. Fairs and markets:—For cattle, on the Monday and Tuesday before the last Wednesday in May, and the Friday and Saturday before the last Wednesday in October; for sheep and wool, on the Wednesday after Inverness July market; for horses, on the Monday and Tuesday before the fourth Thursday in March, September, and November, and for hirings in April and October. At CONNELL on Monday before the last Wednesday in May, and on Friday before last Wednesday in October.

POST OFFICE, GEORGE-STREET, Alexander Wilson, Post Master.—Letters from Edinburgh, Glasgow, Greenock, the South, and Ireland, arrive at one afternoon, and are despatched thereto at eight morning, and at ten night.

Letters from Auchnacraig, Aros, and Tobermory, arrive at five evening, and are despatched thereto at half-past one afternoon.

Letters from Bunessan and Iona arrive on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday evenings at five, and are despatched thereto on the same days at half-past one afternoon.

SOUTHEND

IS a parish situated at the southern extremity of the peninsular of Kintyre—the village, which is sometimes called Newton Argyle, is 10 miles S. of Campbeltown. Agriculture and fishing are the predominating occupations of the inhabitants, who in the summer, reap some advantage from the visits of many strangers to this romantic and interesting part of the country. About half a mile south of the village stands the rock Dounavertie, a spot interesting to the historian, and the antiquarian, as having been the scene of many sanguinary conflicts, with the details of which the intelligent villagers are conversant—especially the ruthless massacre of three hundred of the M'Donalds here by General Leslie, after their capitulation in 1649. Few traces of the castle are now remaining, but a mile and a half west stands the walls of a church, said to have been founded by St. Columba, who landed in Scotland in 563. It was called Cill-Cholum-Chille, and the burial ground was formerly divided by a small stream, on the north side of which the Highlanders where interred, and on the south side the Lowlanders; but that distinction no longer exists. There is an excellent Inn at Southend, affording good accomodation either to the tourist or traveller. On the island of SANDA, about three miles distant is a lighthouse, said to be the best, and most efficient one on the coast. A little to the north of the village stands the parish church, and in the village the United Presbyterian Church. The parochial school here is a substantial building, and a well conducted institution. Telegraphic communication is complete between the Mull, and the principal places in county, and Glasgow.

TARBERT (EAST AND WEST) WITH THEIR VICINITIES.

TARBERT, or as it sometimes designated, EAST TARBERT, is a small fishing port and village, situated at the head of a fine sheltered harbour on Lochfyne. It is 139 miles W. of Edinburgh, 37 N. by E. of Campbeltown, 39 S.S.W. of Inveraray and 15 S. of Lochgilphead. The town, or village, may be said to form a semicircle round the harbour—the latter, small, and the entrance to it narrow, having several sunken rocks, and consequently difficult of access; but when a vessel has once entered, no water affords more perfect shelter and security. The quays are commodious, and for many years it has been a noted fishing station, particularly for herrings, which are mostly cured for the Glasgow market. In a commanding situation, overlooking the town and harbour, are the remains of an ancient castle and fortification—formerly a place of great strength, and immediately behind the village, in a southern direction, is a small comfortable established church, and an excellent school; the latter supported by the General Assembly; there is also a Free church, attached to which is a large school.

The steamer Iona calls here daily on its way to and from Glasgow and Ardrishaig; communication is also constant with Inveraray, and a steamer leaves West Tarbert for Islay once or twice a week; the village is likewise connected by telegraph with Glasgow, Inveraray, Oban, Lochgilphead, and Campbeltown.

WEST TARBERT is one mile distant, and there, also is a good quay: it is seated at the head of a loch of the same name, which commences here, and in a circuitous route winds through the mountains to Ardpatrick, beyond which it empties itself into the ocean. The scenery on either side of the loch is remarkably picturesque, embracing mountain, wood, and lawn, with an occasional mansion embosomed in foliage. Two roads branch respectively to the east and west sides of the loch. The road to Ardpatrick winds through a fine country in which many of the mountains were, by the late much respected owner, Lieutenant General Robert Campbell, planted to their summits. About the sixth mile on this road, is Dunmore, the residence of the late William Campbell, Esq.: the house is hid by its plantation from the road; but from its site there is a pleasing view of the loch and the opposite shore. Four miles further on, is the domain of Ardpatrick, the residence of Captain James Carter Campbell, R.N., possessing every requisite for a summer residence. At the foot of this domain is a ferry, by which the traveller may pass to the opposite side of West Tarbert loch. From Ardpatrick a road branches to the west; and at a distance of four miles, Carse is passed, eight miles beyond this is Drimdrissaig, the property of Dugald M'Neill, Esq., the efforts of whose predecessor—the late Lachan M'Neill, Esq., proved so successful in improving the breeds of cattle, sheep, &c., in this part of the country. A mile and a half beyond Drimdrissaig is Ormsary, the seat of William A. Campbell, Esq. The eastern road runs through the village of West Tarbert to Clachan. Near the sixth mile-stone is the village of WHITEHOUSE, containing a societies' school, and about half a mile above the village is Stonefield, the fine mansion and extensive domain of Colin G. Campbell, Esq., who is proprietor of the town and neighbourhood of Tarbert. An extensive fair is held at Tarbert on the last Wednesday in July, which continues three days, and is for the sale of horses.

POST OFFICE, TARBERT, Archibald M'Calman, Post Master.—Letters arrive from Glasgow, Edinburgh, the South, &c., at five minutes before one noon (via Lochgilphead), and at twenty minutes past twelve (via Greenock); from Campbeltown at ten minutes past four morning; and are despatched to Glasgow, Edinburgh, the South, &c., at ten minutes past four morning (via Lochgilphead), and at one afternoon (via Greenock) Campbeltown, to Whitehouse, Clachan, Tayinloan, and Glenbar (Sundays excepted), at a quarter before one noon.

TOBERMORY,

WITH THE ISLANDS OF MULL, STAFFA, IONA, ULVA, TYREE AND COLL, AND THE DISTRICTS OF ARDNAMURCHAN AND MORVEN.

TOBERMORY is a thriving sea-port in the Island of Mull, 171 miles W.N.W. of Edinburgh, 62 N.W. of Inveraray, and 30 N.W. of Oban. It encircles the extremity of a fine sheltered bay, and is one of the safest harbours among the western isles, being protected from the sound of Mull by an island which stretches nearly across the entrance, but leaving ample room at its northern point for the largest vessels to enter the harbour—though few but small craft can effect this at the south-east point, even at high-water. About two miles from Tobermory, in the sound of Mull, a light-house, called the Runagall, was erected in 1857, which has proved of great service to vessels passing that way; it is a fourth-class light, termed Holophotle. The town is between two and three miles from the main-land of Morven, and derives its name from a celebrated well or spring, called Mary's well, to which the vulgar superstitiously ascribed many imaginary virtues. The Spanish admiral's ship, Florida, one of the 'Armada,' when at anchor here in 1588, was destroyed by an emissary of Queen Elizabeth's government: part of the wood of this vessel was presented to His Majesty George IV., on his visit to Edinburgh, by Sir Walter Scott; and there is in the possession of the Duke of Argyll a large brass gun, that belonged to the same vessel, and found many years since in Tobermory bay. On the west side of the town are the remains of an ancient chapel, dedicated to the Virgin, and of a fortification, understood to be of Norwegian origin. Tobermory formerly belonged to the British Society for extending the fisheries and improving the sea coast of the kingdom, but is now the property of Captain Campbell, of Aros. The town, which was commenced about 1790, is well built, and possesses two quays: a new quay was begun in 1835, by Colonel Campbell, of Knock, and was quite dry at low-water; this, subsequently proving inadequate, has been absorbed in a new quay and pier, undertaken and constructed by F. W. Caldwell, Esq. proprietor of this part of the town, at a cost of upwards of £2,000; it is deeper, more capacious, and in every respect an improvement, and was opened in 1864—offices, stores, waiting rooms, and a cattle pen are being erected; it is a little to the north of the old quay, and nearer to the entrance of the bay. The town has increased considerably in this direction of late years, and the harbour is much frequented both by steamers and sailing vessels, which renders better quay accommodation necessary. A branch of the Clydesdale bank is established here, and occupies a handsome new building of stone, completed in 1865, it is situated in the main street, and contributes much to the improvement of the town; there is a good hotel and an inn, besides a few respectable lodging houses. The church, which was erected in 1827-8, at the expense of parliament, stands in a fine prominent situation overlooking the bay, and adjoining the church is a parliamentary school, completed in 1832, in which the useful and general branches of education are taught. A female industrial school is also here, there are likewise a Free church and school, and a Baptist chapel. In the immediate neighbourhood is a beautiful loch, called Mary's lake, situate between two finely wooded hills, extremely precipitous in their descent. This pleasing spot belongs to Capt. Farquhar Campbell, and was a few years since greatly improved, and an elegant mansion erected on the banks of the lake. The tourist will be much gratified by visiting this picturesque scenery, including the three cascades, one of which is particularly grand. Tobermory is the only village in Mull, or the neighbouring islands, of any consequence connected with trade—this is chiefly domestic, with a tolerably productive herring and salmon fishery. Commandingly situated above the town are the county buildings, a substantial erection of stone, embracing the prison, sheriffs' court, procurator fiscal's offices, &c., here the sheriff substitute holds an ordinary and small debts court, every Wednesday during sessions, a police court is also held here as business requires. Tobermory is the polling station at county elections, for all voters residing in the Islands of Mull, Coll, Iona, Tyree, Ulva, and in Morven. By ascending a hill in the neighbourhood a view may be had of the Islands of Tyree, Coll, Eigg, Muck, Skye, and various others of smaller importance. The union poor-house erected for the reception of the poor of the six surrounding parishes, distant rather better than a mile from Tobermory, is capable of accommodating 130 inmates, and cost £7,700. The population of Tobermory, in 1861, was 1,566.

MULL, which is about twenty-six miles long, and in some places twenty-four miles broad, has been much improved of late. Beinmore, the highest mountain in the island, is said to approach 3,000 feet above the level of the sea. The island contains many remains of ancient castles, &c., among which, those of Duart and Aros, on the sound of Mull, are well deserving of a visit from a stranger. On the western side, close to the Ross of Mull, there is worked a quarry of red granite of porphyry, some of which was employed by the Duke of Sutherland, in the internal improvements of Dunrobin Castle. Fairs in Mull: at Salen, a large horse-fair is held on the first Thursday after the 20th of August, or on the 20th if a Thursday, and for cattle and sheep, on the Tuesday before the second Wednesday in May, and the Tuesday before the last Wednesday in October; at Craiganure, Morven, and the islands of Coll and Tyree, fairs are held a few days before those at Salen. The Mull Agricultural Association, under the presidency of the Duke of Argyll, hold an annual show of cattle and produce at Salen, about the middle of September.

The celebrated Island of STAFFA is about fifteen miles distant from Mull. To give a description of this magnificent production of nature is, it must be confessed, extremely difficult. All who have seen Fingall's cave, concur in opinion that, when it first bursts upon the view, the effect is indescribable—awe and astonishment so completely fill the mind, that there is no room for minor emotions. The island is about a mile long, and a quarter of a mile broad, and is almost entirely composed of hard dark-blue stone, called by geologists, trap, it is not in large misshapen masses, however, or formed into layers, as rocks are in most other places, but stands in pillars, close to one another—most of them upright, some much bent, while others lie almost horizontally; they are not round, but have various numbers of faces, some exhibiting three, some four, five, six, seven, eight, nine, and even ten, while others have one half circular, and another angular, they are from one to three feet in diameter, and from 12 to 90 feet in height. Staffa is visited five or six times a week by the steam-boat from Oban; the visitors are generally landed at Fingal's cave, stay about an hour on the island to examine its wonders, and proceed to view, for a similar length of time—

The far-famed Island of IONA, the earth of which may be termed royal, it is about three miles in length, and one and a half in breadth. It was once the luminary of the Caledonian regions, "whence savage clans and roving barbarians derived" the benefits of knowledge, and the blessings of religion. It is separated from Mull by a channel of about a mile in width, and is resorted to during summer by the antiquarian, the historian, the tourist, and even the fashionable—who crowd numerously, some to explore or examine, and others to behold and admire the sacred ruins that on landing arrest the attention of every stranger; these are pointed-out by a person deputed by His Grace the Duke of Argyll. Here the visitor finds himself surrounded by the graves of those who were royal and noble, and holy in Caledonia and Hibernia, a thousand years ago; while the thick walls, the massive arches, and the finely wrought pillars of the many sacred edifices which, in remote ages, flourished in this sanctified isle, supply the deepest reflections, and awaken the most solemn feelings, in the contemplative mind. A parliamentary church was erected here in 1828, and there is a parliamentary school lately established. The inhabitants have made a profitable traffic by disposing of the channel pebbles to the visitors, who now frequent the island. They assert, that the pebbles of a certain appearance are endowed with many secret virtues, given to them by their tutelar Saint, Columba.

The Isle of ULVA, separated from Mull by a channel of about one hundred yards broad, is said to produce the best kelp in the Western Highlands. There is a great number of basaltic columns on the shore, and on the south side is a cave 60 feet long, 58 broad, and 30 in average height, having an arched entrance in the face of an abrupt rock, with a span of 37 feet. About a mile to the north, a mountain stream falls in one unbroken descent from a rock 60 feet in height, directly into the sea. The island is now the property of Francis William Clark, Esq., who resides there.

TYREE, westward of Mull, and distant 30 miles from Tobermory, is a very fertile island, fourteen miles long, and from one to five broad; it abounds in marble, of which, it is said, the rocks on its shore are entirely composed; but, from some unexplained cause, the quarries cannot be profitably worked. In the churchyard at Soroby is a beautiful monumental cross, inscribed "SororAnna Abbatissa de Y." A new harbour is formed at Heynish; the quay was commenced in 1836, the accommodation is, however, deemed insufficient. A lighthouse was likewise raised on the dangerous rocks called Skerryvore, which lie about sixteen miles southwest of Tyree; it is of granite, obtained from the quarries of Mull, and is considered one of the best and most durable specimens of this kind of architecture in Europe; the light is a Diophric. Fairs are held in May on the Wednesday before that at Mull, in August on the Monday, and in October on the Wednesday before those in Mull.

COLL, to the north of Tyree, is rather a sterile and mountainous island; it is fourteen miles in length, and about two and a half in breadth and seven miles distant from Mull. On it are the ruins of a castle, which appear to advantage from the sea. A fair is held here in May on the Tuesday before those in Mull.

ARDNAMURCHAN, chiefly known from the dangers frequently encountered in the navigation around its projecting point, particularly in boisterous weather, when the tremendous billows of the North Atlantic break against it with awful fury, is a district of considerable length, having Loch Sunart to the south, the Atlantic to the west, the same ocean and Loch Shiel to the north, and Ardgour to the east. It is sterile, but feeds large flocks of sheep, and some cattle, and the hills are stated to be rich in minerals. Upon the point has been erected a lighthouse by the Commissioners of the Northern lights, which is of great service to the navigation of this perilous coast.

At STRONTIAN, fairs are held in May on Thursday before last Wednesday June, on Friday after third Thursday (O.S.), August (for lambs), on Wednesday, if 12th, if not, following Wednesday, and October on Thursday before last Wednesday.

MORVEN is an extensive district, bounded on the south-west by the sound of Mull, on the north by Loch Sunart, and on the east and south-east by Loch Linnhe. The country is hilly, and its shores are partially wooded. It is principally occupied in grazing farms, and contains several respectable gentlemen's seats, but no village of sufficient consequence to command attention.

In concluding our brief sketch of these interesting and not wholly unimportant islands, and the parallel districts on the mainland, we may observe that the scenery connected with them is of a description not easily to be forgotten by those who have once visited them; it is faithfully pourtrayed by the incomparable Scott in his 'Lord of the Isles.' Ardtornish Castle, in Morven, so often alluded to by the bard, is well worthy the tourist's notice; as are the interesting remains of Aros Castle, the ancient residence of the King's or Lords of the Isles—and Castle Duart, formerly the residence of the M'Leans, in Mull, with Castle Doonan, in the district of Lismore.

AYRSHIRE.

THIS is a populous maritime county, on the western coast of the Lowlands; stretching upwards of seventy miles along the shore of the Firth of Clyde, from Kelly-burn on the north, to Galloway-burn, which enters Loch Ryan, on the south; its middle part, which is the broadest, extends about twenty miles across. It is bounded on the north and north-east by the small county of Renfrew, on the east by the counties of Lanark and Dumfries, on the south-east by the stewartry of Kirkcudbright, and on the south by Wigtonshire. In figure the county resembles an elongated crescent, with its concavity presented to the sea. At the north and south ends the land is diminished almost to a point, being but a few miles in breadth. The superficial extent of the county comprises about 1,050 square miles of land, and six of lakes. It is divided into three principal or grand districts—Carrick, Cunningham, and Kyle. The first lies on the southern side of the Doon; the second comprehends the whole of the county north of the river Irvine, and Kyle division is situate between the rivers Doon and Irvine.

EARLY HISTORY—This county was anciently inhabited by the British tribe called the Damnii, a branch of the Celtic nation, who survived the period of the Roman yoke, and were, in the course of time, over-run by, and amalgamated with the Scoto-Irish from Kintyre. In 750 these again were partly conquered by a body of Northumbrians, who settled in Kyle. From 843 to 1097, the inhabitants of Ayrshire were governed as a Celtic people, upon Celtic principles. Upon the accession of Edgar, in 1097, the jurisprudence of the county became changed, and an active colonization commenced, which peopled every district with new comers from England. Barons now sprung up, who built castles and churches, and towns arose, which became inhabited by persons engaged in trade. Ayrshire was the scene of perpetual turmoil during the wars of Bruce and Edward. The son of the first Bruce marrying the Countess of Carrick, became Earl of Carrick in her right; and it was their son who, on the expulsion of Baliol, formed pretensions to the throne, which he obtained by his courage, fortitude, and prudence; thus Ayrshire possessed the honour of giving birth to the illustrous restorer of the Scottish monarchy. Some of the valorous exploits of Wallace, in supporting the national independence, were performed in this county. Scarcely any division of Scotland remained so long under the torments of the baronial system, as Ayrshire. For centuries the chiefs were perpetually engaged in feuds and rebellions, and so weak or inefficient were the laws, that it was seldom redress or punishment followed outrage. The Boyd's, the Dalrymples, the Campbells, the Colvilles, and the houses of Eglinton and Glencairn, had their respective quarrels of long standing, which occasionally ended in reckless violence or sanguinary slaughter. A great proportion of these disturbances arose from contests regarding heritable jurisdictions, such as stewardships and bailiewicks of certain districts. Besides the feuds of these pugnacious barons, the country was frequently distracted by the pride or the crimes of the Kennedy's. So late as the reign of James VI, this powerful clan was involved in a feud of more than ordinary importance, which originated in the cruel treatment of Allan Stewart, the commendator of Crossraguell, in 1570, by the Earl of Cassillis, and his brother, Thomas Kennedy, of Culzean. The vexations which the people of this county so long suffered by such an ill-organized system, seem to have impressed them with a fervid desire for those political liberties, which they believed were to accrue from the institution of the Covenant. The consequence was, that during the heats of the seventeenth century, few took so active a share in the insurrections which were opposed to royal authority. A committee of the privy council sat at Ayr in 1678, for directing the military execution to its proper objects. In July, 1680, a conflict occurred, wherein several insurgents were taken, and the rebellion on this occasion quelled. Proceedings of this harassing character induced a ready accession to the government of William III, and the conduct of the people who went armed to Edinburgh, to wait upon the Estates, was very magnanimous. It need hardly be mentioned, that the turmoils which had, from a very early period, kept Ayrshire in warlike attitude, and ever ready for tidings of disaster and spoilation, had the natural effect of keeping its agricultural capacities long shut up, and its energies of a useful tendency long untried.

SOIL, SURFACE, &c.—The most fertile part of the shire is the great vale of Cunningham, which is comparatively level; Kyle possesses much valuable land towards the coast, but its interior lies high, and is a rough mountainous territory; Carrick is a hilly wild region throughout, and is only of value or interest in its northern angle, betwixt the rivers Doon and Girvan. In a general sense, the whole district of Ayrshire is shut out, on its eastern boundary, from the adjacent counties, by high ridgy land; and, with little variation, the surface inclines either to the sea, or to the rivers which flow in that direction. The sea coast is mostly sandy, and indented with several excellent harbours. Abundance of seaweed is thrown on the shore, from which great quantities of kelp are annually made; and the coasts are admirably adapted for white fishing. In the rocks are several remarkable caves, worthy the inspection of the curious. The principal eminences are, Knock-Dolton, 930; Knock Nounan, 1,540; Carleton, 1,554; Knock-Dow, 1,554; Cairntable, 1,660; and Knock-Dollian, 2,000 feet above the level of the sea. There are many elegant seats belonging to the nobility and gentry of the kingdom; among the principal owners are the Earl of Glasgow, the Earl of Eglinton, the Marquis of Ailsa, Lord Leiutentant of the County, the Duke of Portland, the Marquess of Bute, and the noble family of Hastings. To the south of Irvine stands the ancient castle of Dundonald, once a royal residence, and afterwards the family seat of the Cochranes, Earls of Dundonald. The ancient castle of Rowallan is a few miles distant from Kilmarnock, and stands almost on the boundary line which separates the parishes of Kilmarnock, Fenwick, and Kilmaurs. Dean Castle, the former residence of the Kilmarnock family, is still an interesting ruin.

PRODUCE, MANUFACTURES, MINERALS, &c.—It was not until about the middle of the eighteenth century, that the inhabitants of Ayrshire began to discover and avail themselves of its capabilities as an agricultural district. The settlement, at this period, of Margaret, Countess of Loudoun, in Lorn Castle, may be deemed the epoch of efficient improvement; by her great assiduity, precept and example, agriculture was promoted and encouraged; and in a short time the nobility and gentry of Ayrshire began in earnest to improve their estates upon systematic principles, under the skilful direction of intelligent stewards. Farmers were invited by them from the more southern shires, to instruct the tenantry in the management of land according to the most approved methods of the experienced agriculturist. Observing the peculiarities of the climate, and ascertaining the nature of the soil, the judicious culture of the various species of grasses became a primary object, and the general adoption of dairy farms was the natural consequence; this system has been persevered in, and the dairies in this district are superior, perhaps, to any others in Scotland: the value of their product in milk and butter is very considerable, and 'Dunlop' cheese is unrivalled throughout the country, finding a ready market wheresoever offered, and Ayrshire may now be reckoned as the Cheshire of Scotland. Latterly, under the auspices of the County Agricultural Association, and many individual proprietors, of whom the late Mr. Campbell of Craigie, was one of the foremost, the Cheddar method has been very generally introduced, and with great success; so that Cheddar cheese is one of the staple productions of the county. The breed of cattle has likewise been much improved; the Ayrshire short-horns being much prized both for the purposes of the dairy and the butcher. As agriculture thus successfully progressed, excellent roads were formed, and these have recently been followed up by railways for the transmission of goods and persons; a line has been formed as far as Girvan, which it is soon expected will be carried on to Stranraer; and a cross line from Muirkirk, is to join the Caledonian line at Douglas, which, when completed, will be a material addition to direct communication with the great railway centres. From the fostered spirit of industry, and the enhanced value of land, resulted a corresponding exertion for the establishment of Manufactures; the abundance of fuel, the plenty and cheapness of the necessaries of life, materials for building, and means of transit to the large towns in the adjacent shires, presented facilities for this purpose which were obvious and encouraging. The manufacture of stockings, carpets, cloths, and bonnets extended generally, but Kilmarnock became the most noted. At the capital of the county have been established dyeworks, woollen manufactories, iron foundries, extensive and numerous steam-engine manufactories, and chemical works; at Catrine, well-known and extensive cotton works; at Cumnock is an extensive pottery; at Irvine, large brick and drain tile manufactory, likewise a chain, cable, and anchor works, and Muirkirk is noted for its ponderous iron works. On reference to the table of population given below, it will be perceived that during the twenty years between 1841 and 1861, the population of this county had increased upwards of 34,000. This large addition to the population, is in a great measure owing to the prosperous manufacturing state of the county. Ayrshire possesses inexhaustible coal-fields, freestone quarries, and ironstone mines, with several rich ores, particularly those of lead and copper; marble, gypsum, and marl have been found, and black lead has been discovered; fireproof stone and whetstone are obtained, and many petrefactions exist in various parts of the county. In the hills of Carrick are agates, porphyries, and other valuable fossils; and traces of antimony have not escaped the searching eye of the mineralogist.

Rivers, Lakes, Springs, and Railways.—In the ridge of hills which intersect the district of Carrick, almost all the rivers in the south originate. The Tweed, the Esk, the Nith, the Annan, the Urr, and others flow to the east and south; while the Strinchar, the Girvan, the Doon, the Ayr, and the Lugar, traverse the county, and pour their fruitful streams into the Irish channel. Besides these, the Irvine, and some smaller rivers, water the northern parts of Ayrshire. All these abound with salmon, trout, and other fresh water fish. In the midst of so many minerals, a number of springs impregnated by their qualities are to be expected; and indeed almost every parish has its mineral water, though none have attained the dignity of spas. There are various inland lakes, particularly in Carrick—the most extensive being Loch Doon, from whence the Doon river flows. Ayrshire participates extensively in the conveniences afforded to commerce and general transit by Railways, and there are several important lines and branches now in operation, and others progressing. The following, are the principal, and their names are indicative of their destinations:—the 'Glasgow, Paisley, Ayr, and Kilmarnock Railway,' besides those places, takes in its route by branches from the main line, Newmilns and Muirkirk; the 'Scotch Western' includes, by branch, Irvine among other towns; the 'Glasgow, Kilwinning, and Ardrossan' visits those places; and the 'Glasgow and South Western,' which passes direct through the county, gives direct communication with all parts south. It is in contemplation to construct a branch from Maybole junction to Girvan.

Ecclesiastical and Civil Divisions, &c.—The whole of Ayrshire was formerly comprehended in the bishopric of Glasgow; and it formed three deaneries, corresponding with the three divisions before mentioned. The county now comprises forty-six parishes, forming two presbyteries in the Synod of Ayr and Glasgow. The contributory burghs (or those which, in conjunction with others, are represented in the senate), belonging to this county, are Ayr and Irvine; one member also represents the shire at large.

ARDROSSAN,

A BATHING place and port, in the parish of its name, pleasantly situated on the western shore of Ayrshire, on an accessible point of the coast, and only a mile west of Saltcoats, which occupies another promontory; it is 74 miles s.w. of Edinburgh, 30 s.w. of Glasgow, 25 s.s.w. of Paisley, and 8 N. by W. of Irvine. The town is built upon a plan of regularity and taste; the houses all of stone and of commanding altitude. The visitants in the bathing season will find all the appliances neccessary to their enjoyment. The baths include the customary varieties, and are enclosed in a handsome building, both spacious and commodious. The town is chiefly indebted for its existence to the noble family of Eglinton, who had formerly a castle of great strength and extent in the vicinity, but which is now a ruin, the earl having a mansion in the town. There are a large number of villas, many of which exhibit considerable taste in design; and the town is extending in all directions. A large and elegant hotel with a suite of warm and cold baths, was erected by the late Lord Eglinton, at an expense of £10,000. The public rooms, the bed rooms, offices and stabling are most commodious. There are three banking establishments—that of the Bank of Scotland is a commanding building adjoining the hotel. The Royal Bank Building is near to the railway station, and is also a fine building, and the City of Glasgow Bank, at the end of Princes-street, is also a prominent object.

The harbour was commenced under the auspices of the before-named munificent patron, who expended nearly £90,000 upon it, and became the sole proprietor both of it and the town, as well as the extensive barony of Ardrossan. It has been greatly extended, and the yearly increasing business of the port render probable another considerable extension at no distant date. The tide harbour will contain from fifty to sixty vessels. The dock occupies an extent of seven Scots acres, and will admit fifty vessels of from three to six hundred tons burden. Steamers ply regularly between Ardrossan and several parts of Ireland; there is daily intercourse during the greater part of the year between it and the Island of Arran; and the steamers plying between Ayr and Glasgow call at the port during the summer months. There are two yards for ship-building at the harbour, and some extensive timber yards and saw mills. A railway from this port to Kilwinning forms a junction with the Glasgow, Kilmarnock, and Ayr Railway, and the line is continued from the station to the harbour for the transit of coal and iron to the vessels. The church at the entrance of the town from Saltcoats is in elegant taste, and is a highly ornamental edifice. There are also two fine churches in connection with the United Presbyterian and Free Churches. In the neighbourhood is a chalybeate spring, whose medicinal properties are beneficial in cases of debility, scrofula, &c. The picturesque ruins of Ardrossan Castle stand on an eminence overlooking the town. There is also upon an adjoining eminence a handsome monument, erected to a deceased philanthropic gentleman, who, during the latter years of his life, interested himself deeply in the various institutions connected with the town. An agricultural society has been established here, and a coursing club formed The parish of Ardrossan comprises about 7,150 acres. Fairs are held on the Tuesday before Ayr and the Tuesday before Inverness fairs—both in July; on the Tuesday before Falkirk fairs, in September and October, and on the second Thursday in November.

AYR,

THE BURGH OF NEWTON, THE PARISHES OF SAINT QUIVOX AND MONKTON, THE TOWNS OF PRESTWICK AND WALLACETOWN, AND SURROUNDING NEIGHBOURHOODS.

AYR is a royal burgh, and the capital of the county and parish of that name; 77 miles w.s.w. of Edinburgh, 33 s.s.w. of Glasgow, 34 s.s.w. of Paisley, 12 s.s.w. of Kilmarnock, and 11 s. of Irvine; situated in the north-west angle of the parish, where the river Ayr flows past it into the Frith of Clyde. This portion of Scotland has been inhabited from the earliest period of authentic history; for when, in the reign of Severus, the Roman fleet made the complete seaboard survey of Magna Britannica, this part of the coast was crowded with a population that evinced no amicable disposition towards the foreign intruder, subsequently, however, the persevering and insidious encroacher penetrated through southern Caledonia, and the Celtic harp was hushed by the fanning wings of the Roman eagle: accordingly we find that the site of modern Ayr retained, in the 11th century, the undoubted traces of a Roman station, and tradition informs us that a hamlet, the vestige of this station, was in existence until the latter part of the 12th century, when William, surnamed the Lion, erased the odious blot, and laid the foundation of a new town in the ashes of the former conquerer. Here it was that the renowned William Wallace first openly embodied that hardy host which made the Southern 'backward reel;' and the powerful garrison of Edward I. was compelled to cower under his 'thunder arm.' There is still a remnant of the venerable church of St. John, converted by Cromwell into a fort. Attached to the old tower of St. John is a handsome residence, in the old baronial style, so that this old remnant of a bygone age is likely to survive for many generations to come. At a short distance, on the southern shore, is 'Greenan Castle,' one of those uncouthly constructed square castles so frequently arresting the attention of the stranger in this district; it stands on the summit of a rock overhanging the sea, and, from a distance, has an imposing aspect. In the same direction, on a clear day, may be discerned the celebrated Ailsa Craig, rising 950 feet perpendicularly out of the sea. The bay of Ayr is very much admired, and its graceful curve bears a striking resemblance to the beautiful bay of Naples. The river is crossed by two bridges—the one of five arches, with balustrates, has few rivals for chaste beauty. Immediately opposite, across the Frith of Clyde, is the island of Arran, whose majestic mountains present some features of the sublime, and whose summits are visible to the naked eye, in fine weather, from the headlands of Larne, in the county of Antrim, in Ireland. The most conspicuous decoration of the town is the lofty spire, that rises to the height of two hundred and nineteen feet above the Town-buildings, which were erected in 1828, at a cost of £10,000; these buildings contain a spacious suite of assembly-rooms, and a public reading-room. The noble tower, called 'Wallace Tower,' in High street, is another ornamental structure; it is embellished with a statue by Thom, of the hero whose name it bears. A second statue of this warrior occupies a niche in the wall of a house at the corner of New Market street. Wellington square is a fine quadrangle, having a noble erection to form the west side, in the court-house and hall, built at the joint expense of the county and burgh, at a cost exceeding £30,000. The east front of this edifice, which is wholly of stone, is ornamented with an imposing portico. A verdant lawn forms the centre of the square, enclosed with rails, and the surrounding houses are inhabited by the genteeler families of the place. In the centre is a fine statue, in bronze, by Messrs. Noble & Gordon, to the memory of the late Brigadier-General J. G. S. Neill, C.B. and aide-de-camp to the Queen, who was killed at Lucknow on the 25th of September, 1857, and who was born in one of the houses in Wellington square. A large gun, captured at Sebastopol, is placed on an iron carriage at the upper end of the square. In the County-buildings are the public offices, in which are kept the records of the town; and here are held the borough sessions and the courts for the county and burgh. The county gaol is a commodious structure, at the back of the County-buildings, its front looking upon the bay; it is arranged upon the most modern approved system of discipline. Considerable additions to the town, especially to the westward, have been built within the last few years. Many neat villas give accommodation to the natives of Glasgow and other inland localities, who repair to this fine watering place during the summer months.

An extensive trade is carried on in the export of coal from this place to Ireland. Mines of this article, as well as fine quarries of stone, abound in the neighbourhood. The other principal exports consist of iron, coal-tar, casks, lampblack, and water of Ayr stone. Its imports comprise hides, tallow, barley, yarn, linen, spars, deals and hemp. The convenience for shipping is superior to most of the towns on the coast, as the harbour has been much improved by carrying an extensive stone pier into the sea, affording a greater depth of water for vessels entering, and security when in the harbour.

The civil government of Ayr is vested in a provost, two baillies, a dean of guild, a treasurer, and twelve councillors. Ayr is connected with the burgh of Irvine, in this county, and Campbeltown, Inveraray and Oban, in Argyleshire, in returning a member to parliament—the present representative is E. H. J. Craufurd, Esq., Jun., of Auchenames. The county constituency numbers 4,740. The lord-lieutenant of the county is the Marquis of Ailsa, and Neill C. Campbell, Esq., is the sheriff. The present county member is Sir James Fergusson.

An academy, founded by subscription in 1798, stands foremost among the public establishments. It is conducted by a rector and five masters, with able assistants: the superintendence of the whole is vested in certain directors appointed by the Crown, by which the seminary was created a body corporate. The Latin, Greek, English, French, and Italian languages, writing, arithmetic, drawing, geography, navigation, mathematics, &c. are taught in this institution. Ayr library, which contains several thousand volumes, affords recreation to its numerous subscribers. A mechanics' institution, formed in 1825, is now in a flourishing state; it has a library attached, containing more than two thousand volumes. There are other libraries of lesser note, and public reading-rooms in the town's buildings. Three newspapers are published in Ayr weekly, namely, the the Observer, on Tuesday; the Advertiser, on Thursday, and the Express, on Saturday. Races are held here annually in the autumn; an excellent pack of harriers hunt in the county; and in the town are spirited curling and bowling clubs.

There are two churches of the Establishment in the town, one in the parish of NEWTON, one in WALLACETOWN, and another in PRESTWICK. The other places of worship in Ayr and its vicinity are for the Free church, the United Presbyterians, the Episcopalians, Congregationalists, Reformed Presbyterians, Methodists, Moravians, and Roman Catholics. The charitable institutions are numerous and liberally conducted: the poor are assisted from funds arising from lands and donations, and a dispensary gives medicine and surgical aid to the sick. Besides these, there are a sailors' society, instituted in 1581; a merchants' society, established in 1655; a fund, formed in 1821, for decayed members, their widows and orphans, the Ayr Sabbath School Union Society, and the Ayr Universal Society.

The Scottish bard, Robert Burns, whose 100th anniversary was so universally celebrated throughout the civilized world on the 25th of January, 1859, was born about two miles south of Ayr, in a small cottage, now converted in a public-house; about a quarter of a mile from the house a very elegant monument has been erected to his memory; it is placed on the banks of the Doon, amidst objects and scenery which had often inspired his muse. The locality of Tam o' Shanter lies in the immediate neighbourhood of the cottage. An elegant and commodious new parish church has been erected close to the monument, of which the Rev. John Lochead has recently been ordained pastor. The Chevalier Ramsay, Author of Cyrus' Travels, &c. was a native of the town. The parish of Ayr, comprises about 7,200 acres.

There are two weekly markets in the town—Tuesday, for grain, cattle, and dairy produce, and Friday, for the sale of dairy produce, poultry, and general business. Fairs are held on the Thursday and Friday before the second Wednesday in January: on the first Tuesday in April, for black cattle, &c; the last Friday in April; the Thursday and Friday before the second Monday in July, and on the second Thursday and Friday in October.

NEWTON parish is divided from that of Ayr by the river, over which there is a handsome bridge of modern erection. Weaving is carried on here for the Glasgow manufacturers, to a considerable extent; here are also two iron foundries, and the ship-building yard of Messrs. A. & D. Fullarton. The coals from the Ayr collieries are shipped on this side of the harbour; the colliery is in the parish of St. Quivox, and, from the employment it furnishes to the industrious class, is of material importance to the neighbourhood. Acreage, about 696.

SAINT QUIVOX, a populous parish in the district of Kyle, lies on the banks of the Ayr river, and is bounded on the east by Torbolton, and on the west by Newton of Ayr and Monkton. The parish, which is nearly all arable, is finely enclosed, and beautified by plantations, and contains about 4,930 acres.

The small town (or rather village) of PRESTWICK or Prestevick, is one mile and a half from Ayr. It was at one period a place of some consequence, having been created a burgh of barony at an early date; and its charter, which was renewed by James VI. in 1660, granted to it a weekly market and an annual fair. The former has fallen into disuse, from the proximity of its more thriving neighbour, Ayr. The market cross, which is of considerable antiquity, still exists; and it has its gaol and council house. In the latter the baillies and freemen meet quarterly, to regulate the affairs of the burgh; and the Prince of Wales is recognised as the superior of the town. There is a handsome church, for the accommodation of the combined inhabitants of Monkton and Prestwick. Several years ago a golf club was formed here, and it has now about one hundred members, comprising some of the best players in Scotland and England.

WALLACETOWN consists of a number of streets adjoining to Newton, and is in the parish of St. Quivox, A church of the Establishment was erected in Wallacetown in 1834, and opened on the 8th of March, 1836; it is a very handsome edifice, of the Gothic order; the site is well chosen, being in a populous neighbourhood, on the north-east bank of the river Ayr: it was built by subscription, at an expense of nearly £1,500, and has sittings for upwards of eight hundred persons. Nearly adjoining this church is a Roman Catholic Chapel, erected in 1826-7, at a cost of about £2,000; it is a chaste structure, in the Gothic style, fronted with freestone. In Wallacetown are also chapels belonging to the United Presbyterians, Reformed Presbyterians, and Congregationalists.

MONKTON, a parish in the district of Kyle, lies on the sea coast, betwixt Symington and Dundonald on the north, and Newton and Saint Quivox on the south. The parish formerly extended southward to the river Ayr, and comprehended the present parish of Newton, which was erected into a separate parochial district in the last century; it now includes the ancient and abrogated parish of Prestwick. The village of Monkton is situated on the high road to Glasgow, and distant four miles from Ayr. There is a station of the Glasgow and South-Western Railway about a quarter of a mile from the village. Acreage of parish, 3,971.

BALLANTRAE AND COLMONELL.

BALLANTRAE is a small sea-port in the parish of that name, 105 miles S.W. from Edinburgh, 68s. W. from Glasgow, 34 S. of Ayr, 24 N.N.E. of Portpatrick, 18 N. of Stranraer, 13 S. by W. of Girvan, and 25 S.S.W. of Maybole: situated near the south-western extremity of the county, and on the banks of the river Stinchar, which here falls into the Frith of the Clyde. The approach to the town from Stranraer, is over the river, across which is an excellent stone bridge of three well-proportioned arches. On the right, near the bridge, stand the ruins of Ard-Stinchar castle, formerly belonging to the Hamilton family. The ancient clock, belonging to the tower now standing, is still used as the time-keeper for the town. The place is principally supported by its fishery of salmon and cod-fish, the salmon fishery belongs to the Earl of Stair, but the village does not display the amount of bustle formerly caused by the passing of the mail through this place to and from Portpatrick at the period when the Irish mails were conveyed by that route. Old Kirkcudbright kirk, now in ruins, gives a mournful yet pleasing effect to the surrounding scenery. The present kirk is a neat modern building, ornamented with stone, in the plain Gothic style. There are several schools in the parish, including Sunday, parochial, and private schools. In addition to his salary, the master of the parochial school enjoys the interest of £400, bequeated for the education of the poor children of the parish. There are two resident magistrates; and the nearest court is held at Girvan, where small debts are recoverable only by summons. Ballantrae is without either fairs or weekly market, but there is an annual cattle show in the month of June. The acreage of the parish is about 33,876.

COLMONELL is a parish of about 48,153 acres, bounded on the north and west by the mouth of the Clyde—the village, a small one, is situated 5 miles E. by N. of Ballantrae, on the north bank of the Stinchar—a stream famed for its salmon and trout. In the village is a parochial school and an antiburghers' meeting house, there is also within the parish a Cameronian place of worship. The extent of this district is twenty miles in length by nine broad; it is composed of good pasture, and is undergoing great improvements. There are in all twenty-three inheritors, but the chief part is the property of the Duke and Duchess de Cogney, Sir William Fettis, the Marquis of Ailsa, Dr. Hamilton, and Mr. Thomas Kennedy, of Dunure. The picturesque ruins of Craigneil, Kirkhill, Rockdolean, Pinwherry, Knockdaw, and Carleton Castles, are to be seen in this parish, which also abounds in lime. The nearest approximation for persons desirous of visiting the far-famed Ailsa Craig is from LENDLEFOOT, in this neighbourhood. Fairs are held here on the first Mondays in the months of February, May, August, and November (old style); there are also four quarterly cattle markets at the village of BARRHILL, seven miles distant, in this parish.

BARR

IS a parish of about 55,000 acres, lying on the banks of the river Gregg and Stinchar—the village, a small and neat one, is 8 miles E. by S. from Girvan, and 21 S. from Ayr. The greatest part of the parish is intersected by the river Gregg; and about a mile from the village are the ruins of old Kirk Dominae. Barr parish is principally a sheep pasture; its extent is twelve miles by nine. The hiring fair for servants, which, of late was held at 'Kirk Dominae' is now held at Barr on the first Thursday after the 26th of May. The chief landed proprietors of the entire district are the Marquis of Ailsa and Sir James Ferguson. The public erections are an Established Church, a Free Church, with a school connected, and a parochial one.

BEITH AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

BEITH is a market and post town, in the parish of that name, district of Cunninghame, 62 miles W. by S. of Edinburgh, 19½ S. W. of Glasgow, 11 S. S. W. of Paisley, 5 N. by E. of Dalry, and 12 N. by E. of Saltcoats. It is situated near the confines of Renfrewshire, on an eminence commanding a fine and extensive view of the beautifully diversified country around, of which the Loch of Kilbirnie, at the distance of about a mile, forms a charming feature. The town, which contains many excellent houses, is gas-lighted, but irregularly built; it is of modern date, comprising at the commencement of the last century only a few humble habitations. Its neighbourhood is now the residence of many respectable families, and until within these few years was a place of some considerable trade; it is still noted for its manufacture of linen thread, of which a large quantity is made here by the Messrs. Crawford, both for home and export trade. We may also mention the tannery of Messrs. John Muir & Sons, and lands in their possession, upon which is situate the extensive cabinet works of Mr. Robert Balfour, called the Loch Side Works, and placed on the east side of Kilburnie Loch. The manufacture of silk goods too, was formerly extensive, but this has been almost entirely superseded by that of cotton and woollen, in which the majority of the inhabitants are now employed by the manufacturers of Paisley and Glasgow. The principal branches are silk printing and dyeing, in addition to those already mentioned; (for which there is a respectable establishment at Roe Bank, the most extensive in Scotland) lime burning, and the making of ropes and twine. Three banking houses are established in the town, they are branches respectively of the 'Commercial Bank of Scotland,' the 'Clydesdale Banking Company,' and the 'Union Bank of Scotland.'

The whole of the parish of Beith is enclosed and subdivided, and is almost all arable: and the tenants of this and the neighbouring parish of Dunlop may be said universally to make cheese, known by the name of 'Dunlop cheese,' which is held in as high estimation in Scotland as the cheese of Cheshire or Gloucestershire is in England. The value of this commodity sent annually to market from this parish has been calculated at upwards of £4,000. The neighbourhood of Beith produces coal, and abundance of limestone. In 1807 a very handsome church of the establishment, with a tower, was erected on the most elevated part of the town; its site is 343 feet above the level of the sea. The other places of worship are a Free Church, an Evangelical Union Chapel, and two for United Presbyterian Congregations. The town house was built by subscription in 1817; the late W. Wilson, Esq. of Crummock, was a liberal contributor. The upper part of the building contains a court-room and reading-room; the lower part consists of shops, the rents of which are applied to purposes of public benefit. There is an excellent parochial school; connected with the latter is a school of industry for females. There is also a Free Church school. At GIFFEN, a short distance from the town, are the ruins of the once stately castle of the Montgomeries; there is also another ruin at Hasselhead; and at the top of Cuffshill, a considerable eminence, is a druidical remain, known by the name of 'Rockingstone.' Two large stone coffins, supposed to be likewise of druidical origin, were discovered here about fifty years ago. The market is held on Friday; and the fairs on the first Fridays in January and February, and first Friday after the 12th of May (old style), and on the 30th of August.

POST OFFICE, Main street, Robert Snodgras, jun. Post Master.

Letters arrive from London and all parts of England, Edinburgh, Glasgow, Paisley, the North of Scotland, and also from Ireland, at a quarter before six morning, a quarter before twelve noon, and a quarter before six evening, and are despatched to London and all parts of England, Scotland, and Ireland, also foreign letters, at thirty minutes past eleven morning, at half-past four afternoon, and at a quarter before eight evening.

CATRINE IN SORN AND MAUCHLINE.

CATRINE is a thriving manufacturing village in the parish of Sorn, 72 miles W.S.W. of Edinburgh, 32 S. of Glasgow, 14 N.E. of Ayr, 12 S.S.W. of Kilmarnock, 5 N. from Old Cumnock, and 4 N. from Ochiltree; pleasantly situated nearly in the centre of the county, on the north bank of the river Ayr. This place has risen from insignificance to a considerable town. In 1787 its site contained only a blacksmith's shop and a meal mill, while its present population numbers 2,500. The cause of this surprisingly rapid increase is the erection of cotton works by the late Claud Alexander, Esq. of Ballochmyle, who, having acquired a large fortune in the East Indies, purchased the land for the purpose of establishing works thereon, by which he might increase the value of his property here. But not understanding the cotton business himself, he formed a partnership with the late David Dale, merchant, of Glasgow, with whom he carried on the business until the 13th of April, 1801, when it was transferred to the present proprietors. These extensive works employ a large number of hands; and excellent schools, with a library of 700 volumes are among the privileges enjoyed by the work-people, who are in great part owners of the houses in which they live. There is also a public library, the funds of which were raised by subscription, it contains 3,000 volumes, and has upwards of two hundred members. New schools have been erected at a cost of £2,000, they are in the Elizabethan style, and are situate on the south side of the river Ayr. Sorn Castle, about a mile and a half from Catrine, once the seat of the Loudon family, is now the property and residence of Graham Somervell, Esq. who, with Miss Farquhar, Lady Boswell and Lieut-Col. Claud Alexander, Esq., are the principal heritors of the parish of Sorn, which abounds with coal, limestone and ironstone. Dugald Stewart, Esq. the late celebrated professor of moral philosophy in Edinburgh, was born in the neighbourhood of Catrine.

The parish of SORN, is bounded on the east by Muirkirk, on the south by Auchinleck, on the west by Mauchline, and on the north by Galston and Strathaven; its form is nearly square, measuring about six and a half miles each way, and containing about 19 300 acres. Formerly this parish formed a part of the extensive one of Mauchline; the parish church standing about three miles distant from that village. The land, originally moorish, has been much improved and well inclosed, and there are fine plantations near the Ayr, which river runs through the parish, from east to west.

MAUCHLINE, a considerable town and capital of its parish, is two miles and a half from Catrine; situated in a pleasant part of the county, and surrounded on all sides by a delightful country, interspersed with several elegant mansions. In the manufacture of a beautiful description of snuff-boxes, cigar cases, &c, for which this town has long been noted, five firms are engaged; Messrs. W. & A. Smith having long enjoyed the patronage of Royalty. The other firms are Messrs. J. Davidson & Son; Marr, Wilson, & M'Millan; Wilson & Amphlet, and Mr. A. Brown. The buildings of the town are neat, and possess an air of pleasing variety. Mauchline Castle is an ancient structure, well deserving the notice of the antiquarian. The parish school is well conducted and numerously attended, as also is the new educational institution, founded by James Stewart, Esq. of Haughhead. In this establishment fifty poor children are taught free, and the remainder are charged a moderate sum. Burns resided several years at Mossgiel, a small farm, about half a mile to the north of Mauchline on the left side of the road from thence to Kilmarnock. The steading may still be seen environed by a few trees, as well as the fields, in traversing which, it is said, he composed some of his best poems. His chief resort when he visited Mauchline, was the public house, kept by John Dow, which still stands—a thatched house of two flats, nearly opposite the churchyard gate. The cottage of 'Poosie Nancy,' or Mrs. Gibson, the scene of the 'Jolly Beggars,' stands more immediately opposite the churchyard gate. Mauchline kirk, the scene of the 'Holy Fair,' was of the pure barn species. There is now an elegant new church, in the Gothic style, with a steeple. In the surrounding cemetery may be seen the graves of the Rev. Mr. Auld, Nanse Tinnock, and several other persons who figure in the satires of Burns; and on the banks of the Ayr, at a short distance from Mauchline, is the scene of some of the bard's more pleasing poems—his lyrics particularly. The parish contains about 8,972 acres.

CUMNOCK AND AUCHINLECK,

WITH THE VILLAGE OF LUGAR AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

CUMNOCK (or OLD CUMNOCK) is a considerable village of thoroughfare, in the parish of its name, 60 miles S. W. of Edinburgh, 16 E. of Ayr, and the same distance S. S. E. of Kilmarnock, situated on a line of road between Dumfries on the south-east and Glasgow on the north, 44 miles from the former town, and 38 from the latter. The principal part of the town occupies the site of what was formerly the church-yard; the present cemetery was, at one period, the place of execution, and contains the remains of three persons who were shot on the spot, in 1685, by a party of Highlanders, for their adherence to the covenanted work of reformation; and the corpse of Peden, a martyr of the covenanting body, who died in the parish of Sorn, was exhumed by a party of dragoons, after being interred six weeks, and ignominiously buried at the gallows foot. The village, which is of an irregular triangular form, is seated in a deep sheltered hollow, at the confluence of the Glaisnock and Logan waters; it was celebrated for the manufacture of those beautiful wooden snuff-boxes—a species of trade which originated here above fifty years since, and, with some few exceptions, as Lawrencekirk, Catrine, and Mauchline, was confined to Cumnock. This branch of industry is now extinct here. Three banks are in operation, namely, a branch of the Clydesdale Banking Company, one of the bank of Scotland, and one of the Royal Bank of Scotland; there is also a bank for savings, and a public library—the latter established in 1792, by a company of shareholders.

The places of worship are, a church of the Establishment, a Free church, one of the United Presbyterian, and a chapel each for Independents and Roman Catholics. To the parochial school, which is well attended, the sum of £20 annually was left by Charles Duncan, Esq. late merchant of London, and a native of Cumnock; the late Marquis of Bute paid the teacher a salary for educating twenty poor children of this parish, and he also paid the schoolmasters of New Cumnock and Ochiltree for the instruction of ten children in their respective parishes. The castle of Terrenzean, now in ruins, is in the neighbourhood; it gives the title of baron to the family of Dumfries. About two miles east from Cumnock, is the village of LUGAR, containing the Lugar Iron Works, under the superintendence of an able manager, Mr. Robert Angus; the company have built for the workmen and their families, numerous comfortable and neat cottages, forming a considerable village: no trade, however, is carried on here but that connected with the company's store, although the population exceeds fifteen hundred. The market at Cumnock is held on Thursday, and the fairs on the fourth Thursday after Candlemas, on the Wednesday succeeding the last Tuesday in May, and on the Wednesdays after the first Tuesday in July, and after the third Tuesday in October, all old style. The parish of Old Cumnock, comprises about 14,210 acres.

AUCHINLECK, signifying a field or rock, is a parish, eighteen miles in length, by only about two in breadth, and comprising about 24,295 acres, watered on its northern extremity by the Ayr, and by the Lugar on the south. Coal and limestone are produced here, but the soil is for the most part rather unproductive. The village, a respectable little place, is situated somewhat above a mile from Old Cumnock, and about three from Sorn and Catrine. There is one establishment for the manufacture of snuff-boxes. The places of worship are, an Established church, and one belonging to a congregation of Original Seceders. The ruins of Auchinleck Castle stand in an angle, formed by the Dippleburn and the Lugar; and in the neighbourhood is the place of Auchinleck, a handsome mansion, erected in the last century by Lord Auchinleck, senator of the college of justice, and father of the eminent and amiable James Boswell, Esq., the friend and biographer of Johnson: the house is still the property of the Boswell family. A well attended fair, for the sale of lambs, is held annually on the last Tuesday in August.

DAILLY

IS a parish, in the district of Carrick—the village is 93 miles S.W. of Edinburgh (through Maybole and Ayr) 47 S. by W. of Glasgow, 46 N.N.E. of Portpatrick (by the new road, which is longer by three miles than along the coast), 15 S. by E. of Ayr, 7 S. from Maybole, and 6 N.N.E. from Girvan. The situation of this village is not exceeded by any in the county for beauty; it is seated in a fine fertile valley, near to the pellucid water of the Girvan, which is fed by a number of small streams, some of them descending through deep and woody glens, admired for their picturesque and romantic loveliness; while the elegant mansions of the affluent that are interspersed throughout the district, and the hoary ruins of two ancient castles, contribute to the general interest of the scenery. The parish is six miles in length by about five in breadth and contains about 18,078 acres; the uplands are bleak and pastoral; but the more level parts are well cultivated, enclosed, and planted. Coal and limestone abound in several parts of the parish. The celebrated AILSA CRAIG is in this parish. The Duchess de Coigney, Sir James Ferguson, and Sir John Andrew Cathcart, are the principal heritors of the land in this neighbourhood. The old parish church, dedicated to Saint Michael, has fallen to decay; the present structure, which is neat, was erected in 1766. A parochial and a Sunday school, for the children of the poor, have been established in the parish.

DAILLY has a STATION in connection with the Maybole and Girvan Railway—Ths. M'Millan, collector

DALMELLINGTON AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

DALMELLINGTON is a parish, about ten miles in length, by three in breadth, containing about 17,927 acres; the town or village, a burgh of barony, is 72 miles s. w. from Edinburgh, 49 s. of Glasgow, 42 N.W. of Dumfries, 24 s. s. E. of Kilmarnock, 15 s.E. of Ayr, 14 E. of Maybole, 12 s. of Old Cumnock, and 7 E. of Stratton. This thriving little place is pleasantly situate on the north bank of the water of Doon, and near to the base of an eminence, from the summit of which a fine view is obtained of a varied character, comprising rude and lofty mountains and the softer features of cultivation. Besides the trade enjoyed by the town, it derives some advantage from the resort of parties of pleasure, and for fishing; those who intend to partake of the latter amusement will find on the banks of the Loch Doon, neat boats, furnished by the proprietors of the inns at this place, the 'Black Bull' and 'Cross Keys.' The loch is a beautiful sheet of water, with a hard rocky shore, extending eight miles in length and one in breadth, abounding in trout of fine flavour. On an island in the lake are the remains of Balloch castle. Some years since a fishing party discovered, at the bottom of the loch, what appeared to be boats, and having obtained the necessary assistance, they succeeded in raising three canoes, the largest measuring twenty-four feet in length by four in breadth, hewn out of a solid log of oak; two were much decayed, but the third was so little impaired as to allow of its being floated on the surface, with a person in it, for a considerable time; it is now preserved by the Honble. Mrs. Macadam Cathcart, of Berbeth, for the inspection of visitors. In Dalmellington are a public and private library, and a reading room well furnished with standard works, periodicals and newspapers; a sum has been left in trust for the support of the latter and the private library, and for the education of a certain number of children.

Situated about three miles south-east from Dalmellington, on the road to Ayr, are the Dalmellington extensive iron works and collieries. This company not only entirely built the villages of CRAIG MARK and WATERSIDE, but also many other houses on the hills. The total population of their houses alone, which are occupied exclusively by their own workpeople and families, being upwards of 3,000. There are schools for the children of their workpeople at Craig Mark and Waterside, the latter being one of the finest private schools in the county. The company have stores for supplying the workpeople with the necessaries they require. These works are under the management of Mr. John Hunter.

POST OFFICE, DALMELLINGTON, James Smyth, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Ayr) every morning at a quarter past eight, and are despatched thereto at half-past one in the afternoon.
Money Order Office and Savings Bank.

Post Office, DUNASKIN, WATERSIDE, David Shanks, Post Master.—Letters arrive (from Dalmellington) at ten minutes before eight morning, and are despatched at five minutes before two afternoon.

CONVEYANCE BY RAILWAY

On the GLASGOW and SOUTH-WESTERN LINE—David Donaldson, collector

DALRY AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

DALRY is a parish in the district of Cunningham—the town is 69 miles w. by s. from Edinburgh, 25 s.w. of Glasgow, 16 s. s. w. of Paisley, 5 s. w. of Beith, 4 N. of Kilwinning, and 7 N. of Saltcoats; pleasantly situated on a rising ground surrounded by the rivers Caaf, Rye, and Garnock, which run in different directions near the village. The town consists of nine streets, three of which diverge from a centre forming a small square; many of the houses are well built, the shops are neat, and the town is lighted with gas. The branches of manufacture existing in the town and parish are those of worsted spinning (extensively carried on by Messrs. Biggart & Co., Bridgend Mill) and silk and harness weaving, in which many of both sexes are employed; while a considerable number of females are occupied in sewing and embroidering, usually denominated 'Ayrshire needlework,' for the Glasgow and Paisley manufacturers. Two Branch Banks have been established in the town, and lime, coal, and iron stone abound in the neighbourhood. One limestone quarry at AUGHINSKEITH, two miles from Dalry has been reported by scientific men to be particularly rich in geological remains. There are several public houses, and three which belong to the grade of Inns. Near to Dalry are extensive iron works, belonging to the Eglinton Iron Co., but although a large number of hands are employed, the traders in the town derive little advantage from their expenditure, as the company have opened a large store from which every necessary is served out to their workmen at fair prices.

To the west is a beautiful natural cascade, which has a curious and singular appearance during the continuance of frost. Two miles from Dalry, is Blair House, an ancient pile of architecture, (a portion of which retains the original date of 1203), it is at present the residence of Captain W. F. Blair, R.N., who courteously permits strangers to inspect the beautifully laid out grounds, and his fine museum of foreign and British curiosities. Here is also a cave, evidently the work of nature, and well-deserving the examination of visitors to this district; it is about 103 feet in length, and from five to twelve in height; the roof is encrusted with petrefactions, and over the entrance projects a vast rock, 30 feet by 27. Its interior resembles Gothic arched work; near the middle it expands into a spacious chamber, 35 feet long by 12 broad, and 12 feet in height. In former times popular superstition peopled it with elves—it accordingly received the appellation of 'elf-house;' in later days, under the arbitrary reign of Charles the II., it afforded a refuge to the covenanters of this parish from the violence of their infuriated persecutors. In Dalry parish also is 'Camp-hill,' where the Scottish army is said to have encamped previous to the battle of Largs, in 1263. Dalry bestows the title of Baron upon the eldest son of the Earl of Glasgow. The places of worship are two churches of the establishment, a Free church, a United Presbyterian church, one belonging to the Evangelical Union, and one Roman Catholic. There are several public, and two or three private schools. The weekly market is held on Thursday, and there are fairs in May and July, none of which are well attended. Acreage of parish, 19,361.

POST OFFICE, Courthill-street, DALRY, Janet Stirrat, Post Mistress.—Letters from all parts arrive at twenty five minutes past six morning, twelve noon, and six evening, and are despatched at twenty five minutes before twelve noon, at twenty minutes past five, and twenty five minutes past seven evening.

GALSTON AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

GALSTON is a parish of 15,300 acres, in the district of Kyle-Stewart—the town, a considerable one, is eligibly situated on the left bank of the Irvine, on the road from Edinburgh to Ayr, and from Dumfries to Glasgow; it is 22 miles s. from the latter city, 16 N. N. E. of Ayr, and five from Kilmarnock; seated in a hollow, sheltered on all sides by rising grounds. The chief employment of the industrious class is weaving: there is a flour mill, and one for paper mill-board—the latter erected early in the fifteenth century. Another occupation is also presented to the labouring class, that of raising coal, of which a large quantity is obtained from the estates of the Duke of Portland, who is superior of the parish. There are excellent schools. Blair's school occupies a handsome building, opened in 1841, under the will of the late Charles Blair, Esq., of Galston, who bequeathed certain heritable property, which was to accumulate until the income amounted to £200 per annum, for which one hundred and two children of either sex are educated and clothed. There are likewise two sabbath evening schools, wherein two hundred children receive instruction; also a subscription library, a missionary association, and a bible society. A school house has been erected here, at a cost of about four hundred pounds, the sum being raised by public subscription. A United Presbyterian church of Gothic architecture, cost about eleven hundred pounds.

The parish extends about thirteen miles in length, by from four to five in breadth; lying in the upper part of the country, contiguous to Lanarkshire, and separated by the Irvine from the parish of Loudon on the north, Sorn bounding it on the south. The surface is diversified with hills, but the land is generally arable, and there is a considerable quantity of wood. The district is watered by some small tributaries of the Irvine, and the river Avon, which rises in the upper part of the parish. About a mile from the town is Loudon castle, a large and magnificent structure, in the modern castellated style; this, together with the old castle of Cessnock and Barr, surrounded as they are by natural and artificial woods, highly enhance the beauty of this district—in which is also Patie's Mill, celebrated in the delightful song called 'The Lass of Patie's Mill.' The annual fairs are on the third Thursday in April, the first Thursday in June, and the last Wednesday of November.

POST OFFICE, GALSTON, Matthew Robertson, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Kilmarnock), at half-past six morning, and at half-past three, afternoon, and are despatched thereto at twenty one minutes past seven morning, and half-past six, evening.

GIRVAN AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

GIRVAN is a parish of about 15,000 acres, in the district of Carrick—the town, a burgh of barony, is 99 miles W. S. W. of Edinburgh, 56 S. S. W. of Glasgow, 31 N. N. W. of Portpatrick, the like distance N. N. E. of Stranraer, 21 S. by W. of Ayr, 13 N. by E. of Ballantrae, 12 S. S. W. of Maybole, and 6 S. W. of Dailly, situated on the left bank of the Garvan or Girvan, near to its influx with the sea, and at a point exactly opposite the islet, called AILSA CRAIG. This rock, which is thirteen miles distant, rises out of the Frith of Clyde, to the height of a thousand feet. It is two miles in circumference, and the top, which is conical, is covered with a luxuriant crop of heath, grass, and other plants, which feed great numbers of goats and rabbits. In one place the nettles form an impenetrable forest, six feet in height and all the other plants likewise attain a proportionable gigantic size. All around, on the precipitous sides of the rock, uniformly nestle almost inconceivable numbers of solan geese, puffins and gannets, which flutter about, and produce an incessant deafening noise. On a long terrace or shoulder of the craig, at the elevation of 200 feet from the base, stands a deserted square tower, or castellated house, still very perfect as a ruin. Higher up issue two sparkling and beautiful springs of water, one of which forms a small marshy plain, covered with various plants, amongst others the hydrocatile vulgaris, of extraordinary magnitude. The rock belongs to the Marquis of Ailsa, who draws from it a yearly rental of about £30, which is paid by the feathers of the fowls and the rabbit skins. Naturalists and botanists would find a visit of value, in increasing their knowledge of the vegetable world.

The harbour of Girvan, now convenient for shipping, underwent great improvement at the expense of the late Sir H. D. Hamilton, then the sole proprietor. Steam packets between Glasgow, Ayr, and Stranraer, call of Girvan, and land or embark passengers and goods, by means of light boats. Large quantities of grain, of various kinds, are annually exported hence, chiefly to Liverpool and Glasgow. The trade in coal and lime is important—the mines of the former and the quarries of the latter being numerous in the neighbourhood, but the principal business of the town consists in the manufacture of a variety of cotton and other goods, for the Glasgow and Paisley markets, which affords employment to the bulk of the inhabitants. The government of the town is vested in two ballies and twelve common councilmen—four of the latter being chosen annually, upon the retirement or otherwise of the like number, on the 12th of October; the Duchess de Coigney, or her representative, is superior of the borough.

The places of worship are two churches of the establishment; two Free Churches of Scotland, and others for Reformed, and United Presbyterians, and Reformed Protestants. The Episcopalian Church, is a neat structure of Gothic architecture; the interior is beautifully decorated, it also has a very commanding pulpit, and was erected at a cost of eleven hundred pounds. To the parochial school a valuable donation was made by the late Mrs. Crawford, of Ardmillan, who left the interest of £1,000 for ever to the teachers, for the education of forty children, subject only to the deduction of two guineas, to be distributed in small prizes amongst the pupils. The same munificent lady left also the interest of £1,000, of which £12 are given to the precentor of the church for the instruction of ten of the children in sacred music, and the balance to be divided among poor householders, not receiving parish relief. Here is also a charity school supported by various denominations and subscriptions from the gentry and others residing in the town and neighbourhood. A market, chiefly for grain, is held on Monday; and the fairs are on the last Mondays in the months of April and October, for stock, hiring servants, and general business.

POST OFFICE, GIRVAN, Isabella Muir, Post Mistress.—Letters arrive from all parts at twenty-five minutes past six morning; at twenty minutes before five, evening, and twenty minutes past ten, night, and are despatched thereto at thirty-five minutes past six morning, and at ten night.

IRVINE,

WITH THE PARISH OF DREGHORN AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

IRVINE is a royal burgh, the seat of a presbytery, a seaport, and the capital of its parish, in the district of Cunningham; 67 miles W.S.W. of Edinburgh, 25 S.S.W. of Glasgow, 11 N. of Ayr, the same distance S. of Beith, and 7 W. of Kilmarnock,; agreeably placed on a rising ground on the north bank of the river Irvine, about a mile from its junction with the sea, and upon the line of the Glasgow and South-Western Railway. The situation of the town is dry and healthy, being altogether of a sandy bottom. All the streets are broad and airy. The old steeple, with court-house, council-chambers and gaol, that occupied the centre of the main street, has been removed, and a new structure, from a beautiful design, erected. Irvine is a burgh of great antiquity, as appears from its records, Alexander II. having granted a charter to the burgeses, confirming some previous royal grants. From another similar document, it appears that the burgesses were in possession of the entire barony of Cunningham and Largs. The burgh is governed by a provost, three baillies, a dean of guild, a treasurer, and eighteen councillors, and unites with Ayr and with Campbeltown, Inverary and Oban in Argyleshire, in returning one member to parliament; the present representative is E. H. J. Craufurd, Esq., the number of constituents in 1861, was 271. A baillie court is held every lawful day, as business may require, and one for the recovery of small debts, before the justices, is also held every Monday. There are several commodious inns; the King's Arms, in High-street, as a commercial and posting house, is well worthy of public support. The branch establishments of the Royal and Union Banks are handsome structures.

The parish church is a handsome building of large dimensions, with a spire and clock, and stands on a rising ground in the centre of the church-yard: it is an ornament to the place. There are six other places of worship, including a 'Quoad Sacra,' and two Free churches, which are all ornamental erections. At the north end of the town an academy, surrounded by extensive play-grounds, was erected in 1814, at an expense of £2 250, of which sum the burgh paid £1,633 and the remainder was made up by public subscription. In this institution, which is an honour and ornament to Irvine, there are three principal masters besides assistants, by whom are taught, on very moderate terms, Latin, Greek, the modern languages, mathematics, writing, arithmetic, &c. Many valuable prizes are awarded at the annual examinations; and recently the sum of £1,000 was left to this institution by John Ferguson Esq. of Cairnbrook, the interest of which is proposed to be given annually in bursaries, at the disposal of his trustees. The pupils attending the academy have been particularly successful in carrying off the first bursaries and prizes at Glasgow College. There are several private schools, and a large and well conducted free school; also a female free school, erected by the late generous and amiable Countess of Eglinton, and still maintained by that noble family. On the south side of the river, but connected with the town by a fine stone bridge of four arches, is an extensive suburb called FULLARTON, but in the parish of Dundonald: this section of the town has also two large public schools. It abuts on the Frith of Clyde, and includes the harbour and quay, and contains a ship-building yard, saw mills, and three large engineering and foundry yards. The large engineering establishment belonging to Mr. M'Dougall, has for the last sixty-six years been the only manufactory for anchors, and for forty years, of chain cables in this district. There is an extensive export of coal from this port, also a growing trade in the export of iron. Irvine is also the birth-place of James Montgomerie, author of the 'World before the Flood,' &c. but more widely known as the author of the hymn commencing 'Prayer is the soul's sincere desire.' He was born 4th November, 1771, in a little back dwelling still standing in the street leading to the railway station; the small room in which his father preached, is now occupied as a bonnet factory. In 1841 he visited his birth-place and was received with every mark of respect. In this town Burns, Scotland's national poet, served his time as a flax dresser, and the house in which he wrought, and was burnt out of, is still pointed out to strangers. The Burns Club of Irvine possesses the most valuable of his manuscripts, from which the first edition of his poems was printed, namely, 'The Cotter's Saturday Night,' 'The Holy Fair,' 'The Twa Dogs,' &c. John Galt, author of 'Annals of the Parish,' &c. was born at Irvine on 2nd of May, 1779, the house then occupied by his father's family was taken down in 1858, and the office of the Union Bank erected on its site: a neat tablet in the Bank office commemorates this circumstance. He left Irvine in early life, but in his later years remembered the scenes of his boyhood. In a little back house, also removed when the Bank office was built, was born Bryce Gulliland, first lieutenant on board the 'Royal Sovereign,' at Trafalgar, where he fell. He was 'pressed' when young and rose by his own merit. Dr. Montgomerie, the discoverer of gutta percha, and John Ferguson, the founder of the Ferguson Bequest Fund, were also natives. From 1618 to 1640 Irvine was the scene of the labours of David Dickson, eminent as a divine and author of 'O! mother dear Jerusalem,' &c. Only a fragment remains of his manse which from 1650 to 1657 was a house of refuge to many of his poor persecuted brethren in the ministry, especially from Ireland. In 1647, Dickson, then professor of divinity at Glasgow, and his students, removed to Irvine on account of a severe epidemic prevailing in Glasgow. Here was invented the screw propeller so early as 1824 or 1825. Messrs. William M'Cririck and Maxwell Dick constructed a variety of screws, and, during 1827 and 1828, made an extensive series of experiments with working models, to determine the best length and angle of screws. In these trials they applied varied arrangements of screw to each side of the vessel. In this way they discovered the most powerful description, as a strong person would do in pulling an oar against a weaker one.. This object being gained, their next plan was to fix the approved screw in the best dynomical position, namely in the stern of the boat, which they, in their experiments, had also proved. The following is interesting, as being the first attempt at a practical introduction:—In December, 1828, Mr. Dick learned that Captain (afterwards Sir John) Ross, with whom he was intimately acquainted, was about to return to the Arctic regions, taking with him a paddle steamer, he immediately wrote to him about the submerged propeller, pointing out to him its peculiar advantages amongst the loose floating ice, and strongly urging him to adopt it for his ship instead of paddles. A correspondence, the posted letters of which are still preserved, ensued, and continued until the Captain's departure towards the spring of 1829. In one letter Mr. Dick proposed to run up to London with one of the models, in order that the Captain might test the propeller for himself. He, however, fixed a meeting in Glasgow, but though Messrs. Dick & M'Cririck eagerly availed themselves of the appointment, an unfortunate circumstance prevented Captain Ross keeping his engagement. On the 12th November, 1829, this model was next sent by Mr. M'Cririck, with a full description of it, to the Royal Scottish Society of Arts, Edinburgh. And early in 1830, it was taken by Mr. Dick to London, where, accompanied by Mr. Andrew Smith, engineer, Princess-street, Leicester-square, he placed the same model in the hands of Mr. Aiken, the secretary of the Society of Arts, Adelphi, and afterwards furnished (for use of said society) a full description of it in writing. The committee on mechanics of this society, as well as the Edinburgh Society, received it with disfavour, stating in their report, 'that it did not possess sufficient novelty to require their attention.' Mr. Aiken having intimated the adverse nature of the London Society of Arts report, Mr. Dick, on the 16th February, 1831, wrote to Mr. Andrew Smith, asking the favour of his procuring the model and its appliances from the society and retransmitting them to Irvine, which he did in March, 1831. The model and propeller have ever since been sacredly preserved, fitted up exactly as they then were by Messrs. M'Cririck and Dick, and of the identity of the whole there is a great amount of evidence.

Irvine stands within two miles of the far-famed seat of Eglinton, the field of the tournament of 1839, to which the noble earl permits the greatest freedom of access. The market is held on Monday, and the fairs on the first Wednesday in January, the first Tuesday in May, and the third Wednesday in August.

KILBIRNIE AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

KILBIRNIE, or KILBIRNY, is a populous village in that parish, district of Cunningham; 64 miles w. by s. from Edinburgh, 20 s.s.w. of Glasgow, the like distance N. of Ayr, and three from Beith; eligibly situated on the banks of the Garnock, in the heart of a fine country, and within a mile of the loch of Kilbirny, which extends two miles in length by half a mile in breadth, and is well stored with perch, trout, and eel. The importance of this village has been greatly augmented by the establishment of three extensive mills for the spinning of flax and the manufacture of linen thread, worked by the Messrs. Knox. A branch of the City of Glasgow Banking Co. is established here, under the management of John Alexander, Esq. Glengarnock Iron Works is an extensive concern, for the manufacture of pig iron, situated about a mile and a quarter to the south-east of Kilbirnie. These works, which employ more than two thousand persons (including those engaged in raising coal for the use of the furnaces), are superintended by Mr. James Baird, the acting manager. The workmen inhabit a newly erected village, and the company supply them with the necessaries required, from a store, and their children with instruction in a school maintained by them. The Kilbirnie Iron Foundry is situated near the railway station, and also employs a good number of hands. A manufactory has been recently erected near the Kilbirnie Railway Station by Messrs. Paton, Cook, and Co. for the manufacture of winseys, ginghams, &c. Kilbirnie is also noted for its manufacture of fishing nets, by machinery, two firms being engaged in this manufacture.

The old castle of Glengarnock is perhaps one of the most ancient, as well as the most stately ruins in Ayrshire; it is supposed to have been the residence of the once famed family of De Morville, which flourished in great splendour during the reigns of Alexander I., David I., Malcolm IV., and William the Lion; they held the high office of constable of Scotland, and were lords of Galloway and Cunningham. There likewise exists the extensive ruin of the old house of Kilbirnie, long the residence of the ancient family of Crawford, of Kilbirnie. Some time after the death of George, late Earl of Crawford, a person came from Ireland, calling himself John Lindsay Crawford, and assuming to be the heir male to the title and estates: this claim excited a great sensation in the country for several years; but the pretender being convicted of vitiating written evidence, in support of his assumption, was transported to Botany Bay for seven years. Upon his return, however, he renewed his demands, and a society of noblemen and gentlemen in London assisted him; but, after a minute and careful investigation, the claim was decided to be unfounded, and was consequently abandoned. At the present time, the estates of Kilbirnie are possessed by the Earl of Glasgow. Congregations of the Established Church, the Free Church, Reformed Presbyterian, and Roman Catholics, have their respective temples for worship. The parish of Kilbirnie comprises about 10,640 acres.

KILMARNOCK,

WITH THE VILLAGES OF CROOKEDHOLM, RICCARTON, HURLFORD, KILMAURS, FENWICK, ROSE FENWICK, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

KILMARNOCK is a large and important manufacturing town, in the parish of that name, and district of Cunninghame; 65½ miles S.W. of Edinburgh (through Glasgow), 21 S.S.W. from Glasgow, 12 N. by E. from Ayr, and between 6 and 7 E. by N. from Irvine; situated on level ground, near the confluence of the Kilmarnock water with the Irvine. Two centuries ago, this now thriving and populous town was a mere hamlet, dependent upon the baronial castle in its neighbourhood. The advantages of the place, as a site for manufactures, were, the presence of coal, healthiness of situation, a populous country around, and abundance of provisions. For many years and generations, however, it seems to have been distinguished only for the production of the broad flat bonnets, so long the characteristic wear of the Scottish lowland peasantry, as also the striped cowls which yet bear the name of the town. As this business increased, the population augmented; and in the year 1731, the number had swelled so much, that the parish church was found inadequate for its accommodation, and an additional one was erected. Subsequently, and for a considerable period, the staple manufacture was that of carpets, and in this branch it yet stands pre-eminent. In 1837 the ascertained product of this article amounted to £150,000; it is made of every possible kind and texture, from the plainest to the richest colour and fabric: a few years since, the Brussels carpet was successfully imitated, and after that, a variety, termed the three-plie, of extreme beauty and durability was introduced. An extensive trade is carried on in the manufacture of shoes for exportation,—likewise in that of leather, for the tanning and dressing of which, there are several highly-respectable and large establishments. There are two breweries, the same number of rope walks, several extensive nursery grounds, eight iron-founding and machine making establishments; the Caledonian Foundry, belonging to Mr. Andrew Barclay, being the most extensive, and carried on in a highly spirited and scientific manner. One particular description of productive industry and skill, seems, however, of late years, to have outstripped all those before mentioned—namely, the making and printing of shawls: for, in the year 1837, the amazing number of 1,128,814 of this denomination of garment issued from the manufactories of this place, amounting in value to £230,000, the demand since that year greatly increased, and although for the present there seems to be a slight falling off, the productions of the various establishments in this branch are excelled by no other town. A factory for the weaving of cotton cloth by steam power has also been recently established. There is also an extensive and flourishing establishment for the manufacture of a new kind of water meters, a patented article, invented by an ingenious townsman, Mr. Thomas Kennedy. The importance of Kilmarnock as a manufacturing centre, has been much increased by the recent erection of a large engineering establishment in connexion with the Glasgow and South Western Railway, for the manufacture and repair of locomotive engines, carriages, and other apparatus. Many of the shops of Kilmarnock are very handsome, and well furnished with taste in the various wares suitable to the inhabitants of a large and respectable town. The banking establishments are, branches of the Bank of Scotland, the Royal Bank of Scotland, the Commercial Bank of Scotland, the National Bank of Scotland, the Union Bank of Scotland, the Clydesdale Banking Company, and the British Linen Company, together with a Local Bank for Savings, apart from the one recently established in connection with the Post-office. Surrounding the town are extensive coal-fields, from which fuel is obtained for the works of Kilmarnock, besides large supplies transmitted continually by railway to Troon and Irvine, where it is shipped to various places. There are five incorporated trades, namely, the bonnet makers, skinners, tailors, shoemakers, and weavers; the first named is the most ancient, it was incorporated in 1646.

The aspect of the town is agreeable, especially in its central part, where the streets are regularly laid out, and the greater portion of the houses are of freestone; it has of late considerably extended to the south and east, and in these directions has now many elegant edifices. The Town-house, built in 1805, contains a court-room for the magistracy, and public offices. In 1814, a commodious news-room was erected in the centre of the town. The new court-house, in St. Marnock street, erected in 1852, is an elegant structure, attached to which, are the sheriff's chambers, and the offices of the procurator fiscal, and in the same locality a gaol has been built. The Corn Exchange buildings comprise a large public hall, of great convenience and beauty, and a large number of public offices were recently erected by an influential joint-stock company, under the auspices of the Town Council, and form an architectural ornament to the town. Kilmarnock possesses an excellent academy, in which various branches of education are taught by able masters; there are, besides, several private schools of a high character, and many others that impart instruction to children of the poorer classes. The institutions likewise comprise some well-conducted societies; the most important is the Kilmarnock Library, founded 1797 by a few of the wealthy inhabitants of the town and neighbourhood: in 1811, it consisted of 840 volumes, at the present time it numbers from six to seven thousand volumes. The Philosophical Society was formed in 1823, for the promotion of general, and more particularly of scientific knowledge. The Kilmarnock Athenæum was instituted in 1848, for promoting the social and intellectual improvement of the inhabitants, by providing a first-class reading room, the maintaining of a library, and adopting such other means as are usually employed by similar institutions. The reading room of this association, largely supplied with newspapers, magazines, and other periodicals, has been always popular and flourishing. The library soon became extensive and valuable, and is now amalgamated with the Kilmarnock Library. The rooms in which the business of these three important societies are carried on, form part of the new Corn Exchange buildings. Another institution worthy of notice, is the Kilmarnock Philharmonic Society; it consists of about seventy ladies and gentlemen, and every facility is given for the admission of others possessing the necessary capabilities. Besides these institutions, there are in the town two Masonic Lodges, and a society of the Independent Order of Oddfellows. A great object of interest in this town is the observatory, erected in 1818 by the late Mr. Thomas Morton, at an expense of £1,000, which is now the property of Thomas Lee, Esq. F.R.A.S. The observatory, which is seventy feet in height, and furnished with valuable telescopes and other apparatus, stands on a fine site, that commands a delightful view of the surrounding country as far as the Frith of Clyde. Mr. Morton obtained considerable celebrity for his mechanical genius, and received various honourable testimonials from his countrymen and the Board of Trade, and in 1835, he was elected a member of the Royal Society of Arts. In 1847 was erected in the market cross, a very handsome monument to the memory of Sir James Shaw, Bart. late Lord Mayor of London, who was a native of Moss-head, in this neighbourhood, where he was born in 1774, and died on the 22nd October, 1843. The statue of the deceased is eight feet in height, mounted on a pedestal of the same altitude. The former, which is cut out of a solid block of marble, weighing ten tons, represents him in his civic decorations as Lord Mayor, and is, altogether, a very fine production of art. The civil government is vested in a prevost, four bailies, and sixteen councillors; the magistrates preside in their civil and criminal courts by turns, and the justices sit weekly in what is called the small debts court. This town joins with Dumbarton, Port Glasgow, Renfrew, and Rutherglen, in returning one member to parliament. The Duke of Portland is the principal proprietor of Kilmarnock and its neighbouring lands.

The civil parish of Kilmarnock consists ecclesiastically of three parishes, the Low, the High, and Saint Marnock's, each containing an Established church. There is also a chapel of ease connected with the church of Scotland, which is in course of being endowed, and a site for the church of a fourth parish, to be called that of St. Andrew's. Part of the original, or Low church is of great antiquity. The church of St. Marnock's, recently erected, at a cost of £5,000, is a large handsome edifice, seated for 1,700 persons, and ornamented with an admirable Gothic tower. The Free church has three places of worship in the town, and a fourth in the village of CROOKEDHOLM in the parish. The United Presbyterians have also three churches in the town, besides a mission station, which has just been recognised by that body as a pastoral charge. Their church in King-street, erected a short time ago as a Relief church, is very neatly designed, and has a singularly elegant spire, forming a conspicuous object in the scenery of the town. There are also chapels for the Reformed Presbyterians, the Original Seceders, the Independent, the Evangelical Union, the Scottish Episcopalians, and the Roman Catholics, besides several places of worship for other religious denominations. The oldest churchyard is now closed, but a public cemetery covering an acre of ground, purchased by means of a town's rate, was opened in 1838, in a dry and elevated situation, near St. Andrew's church.

The most remarkable object in this vicinity, is the ruin of Dean castle—an ancient, extensive, and well defended mansion, formerly the property of the Boyds, Earls of Kilmarnock; it stands in a 'dean' or hollow, less than a mile north from the town; it was burnt down in 1735, from the carelessness of a servant girl, who, in preparing some lint, for spinning, heedlessly let it catch fire. When in a perfect state, it was considered capable of sustaining a long seige, as, according to tradition it had the means of drawing secret supplies through subterranean ways, that communicated with Craufurdland castle, two miles distant. Kilmarnock House, another edifice, once belonging to, and the last residence of that noble family, is also in the parish: from this house proceeded the last unfortunate Earl in 1745, to join the standard of rebellion, which cost him his head. This building is now occupied by the offices of the parochial board, and a Reformatory school. The markets, which are held on Tuesday and Friday, are abundantly supplied with every necessary article of domestic consumption, including grain and cattle. Fairs are held (for cheese, &c.) second of February, (for cattle) second Tuesday in May, last Thursday in July (commonly called the 'gooseberry fair'), and the last Thursday in October for horses. The acreage of the parish of Kilmarnock, is about 9,550, and the population in 1861, was 23,556. The population of the Burgh (a portion of which is in Riccarton parish) was at the same period, 22,619.

The parish of RICCARTON is in the district of Kyle, lying on the left or south bank of the Irvine river, which separates it from Kilmarnock; it contains about 7,600 acres. The village stands on an eminence, a mile to the south of that town, on the right bank, but is almost connected with Kilmarnock by a long street. The parish extends about six miles in length, by between two and three in breadth; and includes the post-office village of HURLFORD, at which latter place there is an extensive iron smelting works, called the Eglington Co. Iron Works, a large fire-clay work, and several extensive collieries. A very handsome Free church has also been erected in the immediate neighbourhood, but in Kilmarnock parish, and a large subscription school built for the education of the children of the working class. The village of Riccarton is remarkable for having been the residence of the venerable Sir Rowland Crawford, the maternal uncle of Wallace, with whom, it is said, the hero sometimes sojourned; and it was to Riccarton that he generally retired after performing any of his very daring exploits, before he openly unfurled his country's banner. On avenging the treacherous murder of his uncle and other chieftains, by burning the barns of Ayr, he took his way by night to this village, accompanied by a few followers; when he reached a certain eminence about six miles from Ayr, he turned round, and seeing the flames still ascending, exclaimed with stern exultation, 'the barns burn weil!' From this laconic expression (tradition adds) the spot obtained the name of 'Burn-weil,' which it still retains. The church of Riccarton is a modern structure, having been erected in 1823; it has a fine steeple, and from its elevated position, has an ornamental effect upon the country round. A new bridge across the Irvine materially improves the approach from the Ayr road to Kilmarnock. A considerable quantity of coal is raised in this parish. The Duke of Portland is the principal landed proprietor.

KILMAURS is a parish, in the district of Cunninghame, with an acreage of about 5,940. The town, a small one, and burgh of barony, is two miles from Kilmarnock, situated on the right bank of a rivulet, called Kilmaur's water, or 'Carmel water.' It was erected into a burgh of barony, by James V., at the instance of Cuthbert, Earl of Glencairn, and his son, Lord Kilmaurs. The government of the town is vested in two bailies (chosen annually by the portioners), before whom debts may be recovered. Kilmaurs is composed principally of one street, in the middle of which is a small town-house, with a steeple and clock. Formerly this place was somewhat noted for the manufacture of clasp-knives or whittles—the sharpness of the edge of which instruments gave rise in Ayrshire to a peculiar expression of comparison: a man of acute understanding, and quickness of action, is said to be 'as sharp as a Kilmaurs whittle.' The most prominent trades now, are those of shoemaking and weaving, for the Glasgow and Paisley houses. Coals are raised in the parish, the surface of which consists of large level fields, interspersed with gentle declivities and elevations; the summits of the latter are well wooded, and the whole district has a pleasing appearance. There is an old pile of building near to the church, seemingly of very ancient origin; but with respect to its founder, or the date or object of its erection, even tradition itself is silent. In the cemetery of the Glencairn family, adjacent to the church, is a piece of beautiful sculpture, a specimen of the taste and execution of former times, erected as a monument to the memory of the chancellor, William, the ninth Earl. The places of worship are an Established church, a Free church, and a United Presbyterian church, and ample means of education are afforded the children of the inhabitants by the burgh school, and a parochial school, besides one or two private establishments. The market, which was for a long period held on Thursday, has fallen into disuse, but fairs are still maintained on the 11th of June, and on the third Wednesday in that month, and the 11th of November.

FENWICK is a parish in the district of Cunninghame, about nine miles in length by six in breadth, containing about 18,161 acres. The kirk-town is cheerfully situated about three miles N. by E. from Kilmarnock, on the banks of the Mehernock stream, on the road to Glasgow. There is another village, sometimes called ROSE FENWICK, on the same road, about a quarter of a mile south from Kirktown. At a former period, the district was a fen or moss, and hence it is supposed to have acquired its name; but it has undergone most material improvement, and the greater portion of the parish is now under cultivation. Guthrie, a noted champion of the Covenant before and after the restoration, was the first minister of this parish, which, till 1642, had formed a part of the parish of Kilmarnock. He was a celebrated and very eccentric preacher, distinguished by the title of 'the Fool of Fenwick,' an appellation which even appeared on the title pages of his published sermons. The places of worship are a church of the establishment, a free church, and one for an United Presbyterian congregation. Cattle fairs are held on the first Wednesday in May, and the first Tuesday in November.

KILWINNING

Is a parish, containing about 11,069 acres, in the district of Cunningham—the town, a thriving little one of manufactures, is 24 miles S.S.W. from Glasgow, 3 N.W. of Irvine, 4 N.E. of Saltcoats, the same distance S. of Dalry, 10 W.N.W. of Kilmarnock, and 5 from Androssan, to which there is a railway. It is situated on rising ground, about two miles from the sea; stretching westward from the right bank of the Garnock, and approached by excellent roads, skirted by beautiful fields. The weaving and manufacture of gauzes, muslins, shawls, &c. are carried on to an important extent, for the Glasgow and Paisley markets, to which they are conveyed by local agents. There are considerable iron and coal works in the neighbourhood, and in the town, a very excellent inn (the Eglinton Arms), and a branch of the Commercial Bank of Scotland. The agricultural produce of the parish is considerable, and coals, which are obtained in abundance, are conveyed by a railway passing from east to west across the parish. The only remarkable objects are the picturesque ruins of the ancient abbey, founded by Hugh de Morville in 1140, and the beautiful tower of a church, to which its style of architecture bears no resemblance; this tower cost, exclusive of the old materials, the sum of £2,000, raised by subscription, and to which the Earl of Eglinton was a liberal contributor. The present Earl has a fine mansion in the neighbourhood, called Eglinton Castle. Kilwinning was the first place in Scotland where freemasonry was established; it is said to have been introduced by the foreign architect who was employed in erecting the monastery here. Besides the distinction acquired from its ancient masonic lodge, it is also remarkable for being the seat of a company of archers, ascertained to have existed so early as the year 1488; and the society at the present day is most respectable. Fairs are held on the 1st of February (new style) and on the first Wednesday after the 29th October.

POST OFFICE, John Service, Post Master.—Letters arrive from Glasgow, Kilmarnock, and Irvine at five morning; from Kilmarnock and all England, at twelve noon; from Glasgow, Paisley, and Ayr, at six evening; from Saltcoats; at twenty-five minutes past eight night; and are despatched to Glasgow and Paisley, at twenty minutes past eleven, morning, to Glasgow, Paisley, Kilmarnock, and Ayr, at twenty minutes past five evening, to Irvine and Kilmarnock, at half-past eight evening; and to Saltcoats at five evening.

KIRKMICHAEL, CROSS-HILL AND DALRYMPLE.

KIRKMICHAEL, is a parish, containing about 16,115 acres, in the district of Carrick—The village is 76 miles S.W. from Edinburgh, 22 S. from Kilmarnock, 10 S. of Ayr, the same distance E. of Dalmellington, 8 N.E. of Dailly, 4 W. by N. from Straiton, and 3½ E. from Maybole, pleasantly situated in a valley, on the road from Newton-Stewart to Glasgow, 36 miles from the former, and 44 from the latter. The general surface of this parish is hilly—towards the south and east, mountainous and rocky; but the whole is more or less cultivated. The Girvan runs through the parish—the Doon is its boundary for several miles, and the Dyrock water flows through the village—which latter derives its name from a church that formerly stood here, dedicated to St. Michael; the present religious structure which is neat and commodious, was built in 1787, on its site. In the churchyard is the tomb of Gilbert M'Adam, who was shot in 1685, by the laird of Colzean and Ballockmyle, for his adherence to the covenanters. The annual fair is held on the first Thursday in October. CROSS-HILL is a small village in the parish.

DALRYMPLE is a small village and parish in the district of Kyle, pleasantly situated on the banks of the Doon, 4 miles N. from Kirkmichael. The parish, which is about eight miles at its extreme length, and three in breadth, contains about 7,960 acres and comprises some beautiful undulating and flat land, mostly arable. In the upper portion of the parish is a coal mine, and in some other parts lime abounds. The name Dalrymple is said to be derived from Dalrymole, 'signifying the dale on which the king was slain', and it is supposed that Coilus, a king of the Britons, was killed in battle in this place; its Gaelic name, however, was Dail-a-Chruim-Puili, or 'dale of the crooked pool'. Near the Roman road, which intersects the parish, was found in a moss, a vessel of Roman bronze, by antiquarians conjectured to be of that kind used by their priests in their sacrificial oblations; and in 1834 was discovered, near the same spot, an ancient vase; both these relics are in the possession of the Rev. Mr. Wallace, the minister of Dalrymple. In the parish are three British fortlets on commanding sites, and the ruins of three castles; these with the beautiful loch of Martanham, the waters of which are covered annually with the yellow and white water lilly, are objects of considerable interest and curiosity with the visitor to this district.

KIRKOSWALD

IS a parish containing about 15,444 acres, in the district of Carrick—the village, old and picturesque, is 13 miles S. from Ayr, and 4½ from Maybole; situated on a line of road from Portpatrick to Glasgow—90 miles from the former, and 48 (by the new road) from the latter town. The parish is highly interesting, as containing within its limits several objects of great attraction for the stranger and the tourist. The sea-coast presents a sandy beach, with a beautiful rich sward to the very sea-mark; and there are two lakes, from whence flow many small streams, that wander through the district towards the sea. Of late years there have been raised various delightful plantations, particularly near the shore around Culzean Castle, the beautiful seat of the Marquess of Ailsa. The mansion, which is a fine specimen of ancient architecture, is placed on a rock overhanging the sea; and on the land side are delicious gardens, with a noble park of great extent. Not far from the castle is a fort, mounted with thirteen guns, and a mortar battery—both kept in effective order. In a low valley, between Kirkoswald and Maybole, are the remains of the abbey of Crossragnell, founded by Duncan, first Earl of Carrick, and dedicated to the Virgin Mary: at one period it was possessed by Cluniac monks from Paisley; at the Reformation it became the property of the Earl of Cassillis, but it now pertains to Sir James Ferguson, of Kilkerran. From the coast-road between Girvan and Maybole may be seen the ruins of Turnberry Castle, once the residence and property of Robert Bruce. Within view of this memorial of former centuries, and not more than a mile from it, lies the farm of Shanter, once the residence of Douglas Graham, the hero of Burn's poem, 'Tam o'-Shanter;' though that honour is disputed by some in favour of another farmer, called Thomas Reid.

POST OFFICE, KIRKOSWALD, Jane Orr, Post Mistress—Letters from all parts arrive (from Maybole) at nine morning, and are despatched thereto at six evening in summer, and four in winter.

LARGS AND FAIRLIE.

LARGS, popularly called the Largs, is a neat town and sea-bathing place, in the parish of that name; 73 miles W. by S. from Edinburgh, 30 S.W. from Glasgow, 14 S. from Greenock, and 20 N. from Irvine; charmingly situated on the Frith of Clyde, in the northern extremity of the county, in a remarkably healthy and well-sheltered district, particularly on the north-east, in which direction it is separated from the better cultivated districts, by a range of hills; hence a proverbial expression still in use 'Out of the world into the Largs.' It is now one of the most favourite retreats on the western coast for ruralising and bathing, the communication with Glasgow, and other large towns on this side of the country, being rendered convenient and expeditious by means of steam boats, which ply daily on the Clyde; or by rail from Port Glasgow to Wemyss Bay, thence by boat or bus to Largs, a distance of about six miles from the latter place. A second line of railway is in course of construction, to be completed in two years—commencing at Dalry, a station on the Glasgow and South-Western Railway, and terminating at Fairlie, a distance of four miles from Largs. During the season it is enlivened by the presence of a great number of visitors; and the general accommodation afforded by the abundance and superior style of the lodging-houses, the one conducted by Mr. James Paton, affording ample accommodation and attendance, together with the agreeable manners of the residents, fully entitle the town to the extensive patronage it enjoys. An elegant suite of baths was erected, by public subscription, in 1816, some of them after the model of those at Seafield, Leith; and there is one vapour bath; attached to these is a reading-room, supplied with various papers. There are two good inns and two temperance hotels. The monetary transactions of the town are facilitated by branches respectively of the City of Glasgow Bank and the Royal Bank of Scotland. Considerable business is carried on in the fishery. The annual fair, commencing on the first Tuesday in June after the 12th (Saint Columbus day), is a scene of bustle and active traffic, it lasts for two days, and is well attended by people from the neighbouring counties who resort hither to dispose of their agricultural produce and cattle.

The parish church, a handsome structure of stone, with a spire and clock, is a great ornament to the town. There is also a Free Church, one for United Presbyterians, and an English Chapel. There is a benevolent society, called the 'Dorcas Society', composed of ladies resident in the neighbourhood, from which, clothing is supplied to the poor families in the parish; this and two Sabbath schools, form the principal charitable institutions. Three circulating libraries afford literary amusement to domestic readers; and a company of comedians generally attend during the summer; while the Brisbane Academy (an endowed establishment), together with the Parochial and Free Church school, afford the inhabitants ample means of educating their families. Few districts possess more romantic scenery; the old castles of Skelmorlay, Knock and Fairley, with Brisbane House, ornament the parish. It was on the plain of Largs that the celebrated battle was fought between the Scots, under King Alexander the third, and the Danes, under Haco, King of Norway, in their last invasion of this country, in 1263. In the glen near Kelburn is a cascade, which has a fall of fifty feet perpendicular—and various other natural beauties, arrest the attention, and excite the admiration of the traveller. An aisle in the church, built by Sir Robert Montgomery of Skelmorlay more than two centuries back (the sculpture and painting of which would be no discredit to a more advanced age), has underneath a vault, in which lies the body of Sir Robert, enclosed in a leaden coffin, bearing a Latin inscription, signifying 'I was dead before myself, I anticipated my proper burial alone of all mortals, following the example of Cæsar'; alluding it is said, to Charles the Fifth, who, it may be remembered, had his funeral obsequies performed previous to his death. The explanation usually given of this strange affair is, that Sir Robert was a very pious man, and was in the habit of making nocturnal descents into the vaults to perform his devotions, thus burying himself alive. Sir James Montgomery, of Skelmorlay, a subsequent representative of this family, was a distinguished leader among the Scotch Presbyterians, at the time of the revolution, but is reported to have afterwards made himself conspicuous by entering into a conspiracy with the ultra Jacobites, for the restoration of King James. The acreage of the parish is about 22,381.

FAIRLIE or Fairley, is a small village in the parish of, and about two and a half miles s. from Largs. In the vicinity is Kelburn Castle, the picturesque seat and family mansion of the Earl of Glasgow; likewise the ancient square tower of Fairlie Castle, formerly a seat of a family of that name. The extensive plantations around Kelburn Castle are highly ornamental to the general landscape. There are, besides, some very elegant villas, which harmonize with and adorn the prevalent features of the parish; and the marine scenery is truly beautiful and enlivening. There are two places of worship in Fairlie, one an Established church, the other a Free church, and in connexion with each, there is an excellent school. Considerable business is done here in boat building, being noted for the beauty of build and excellent sailing qualities of the yachts launched from the various yards.

MAYBOLE & THE VILLAGE OF CULROY OR MINISHANT.

MAYBOLE is a small neat market and post town, the capital of its parish, in the district of Carrick; 87 miles S. W. from Edinburgh, 52 N. by E. from Portpatrick, 44 S.S.W. from Glasgow, 25 N. from Ballantrae, 22 S. by W. from Kilmarnock, 12 N. by E. from Girvan, and 9 S. from Ayr. It lies in a charming part of the country, on the face of a gentle eminence with a southern exposure, and surrounded by lovely scenery, formed of parks, highly cultivated, and hill and dale, with a sea-view of 'the busy Frith of Clyde' opening on the west. Maybole was created a free burgh of barony in November, 1516, on a grant to Gilbert, Earl of Cassillis, the patron, and to the provost and prebendaries of the collegiate church of Maybole, to which belonged the lands whereon the town stands. In October, 1639, an act, ordaining the head court of Carrick to be held at Maybole, was passed by the Lords of the Articles. The streets of the town are narrow, and contain no eminently fine places or public buildings; several of the dwellings, now inhabited by weavers, bear a venerable aspect, and doubtless were, at a distant period, the domiciles of more dignified personages. The mansion house or castle of the Cassillis family is the finest surviving specimen of the winter seats formerly existing in Maybole: it is a stately well-built structure, standing in the centre of the town, and is said to have been the residence of the repudiated Countess of Cassillis. It is now occupied by Thomas Dykes, Esq. factor to the Marquess of Ailsa. The building now used as the town hall belonged to the Kennedys, of Blairquhan. The principal business carried on here is weaving for the Glasgow houses, in which branch there are many local agents employed, and many families busily occupied.

The collegiate church has been for some time in ruins, and the ground appropriated as a private cemetery for the Cassillis family. The parish church, a Quoad Sacra, a Free church, United Presbyterian church, an Episcopal church, and a Roman Catholic chapel, are the places of worship. The parochial school dispenses instruction to about one hundred and seventy boys and girls, who are taught all the useful, and some of the polite branches of literature, there are besides several other schools public and private. Yearly and quarterly meetings of the 'Carrick farmers' society are held in the town-hall; the annual one is on the first Thursday of August, and the quarterly on the first Thursday in the months of February, May and November; the quarterly in August merges in the yearly assemblage. A 'Knox' club was instituted in 1824, for the purpose of commemmorating the zealous exertions of that extraordinary man. In the vicinity are many interesting objects, among which is the celebrated ruin called Crossreguel (noticed in the sketch of Kirkoswald), and Kilhenzie castle, which was in a similar state of dilapidation but has of late years undergone repairs; it once belonged to a branch of the Cassillis family, who were for a long period hereditary baillies of Carrick. Ancient coins have been frequently found in considerable numbers. In the neighbourhood are two remarkably fine springs of water, popularly named 'St. Cuthbert's' and 'Well trees;' the latter is said to yield ten thousand imperial gallons per hour. The market is held on Thursday; the following are the annual fairs—Beltan fair, the third Thursday of April, and Halloa fair, the third Thursday of October. The acreage of the parish is about 22,720.

CULROY or MINISHANT, is a small village, in the parish of Maybole, three miles and a half from that town, on the road to Ayr, from which it is five miles and a half distant. A manufactory for woollen goods is established in this village.

MUIRKIRK

IS a parish containing 30,429 acres, in Kyle district. The village, a thriving and considerable one, is 50 miles W.S.W. from Edinburgh, 30 S. from Glasgow, 26 E. by N. from Ayr, 24 S.E. from Kilmarnock, and 16 N.W. from Sanquhar, situated near the right bank of the Water of Ayr, at the junction of the roads leading from Glasgow to Dumfries, and from Edinburgh to Ayr: although in a district rude and bleak, the land is being fast reclaimed from its original mossy and moorish character; another considerable portion is, however, profitably employed in grazing and pasture, and in 1835, the black-faced sheep fed in this parish carried the Highland Society's prize, and also gained the first prize at the Paris Exhibition in 1862. Though nature has not here been bountiful to the farmer, or encouraged the labours of the agriculturist, she has been very kind to the miner—for coal, iron, and limestone are liberally dispensed throughout the territory. At the Muirkirk Iron Company's works are three blast and ten puddling furnaces constantly in operation, for the manufacture of pig and malleable iron. There are besides, extensive lime works belonging to H. Howie Aird, Esq. of Crossflatt, and leased by Charles Howatson, Esq. of Dornel, who, with James Baird, Esq. of Cambusdown, the Earl of Home (of Douglas), and the Honorable Mrs. Macadam Cathcart, are the principal proprietors of the land in this parish. The parish is also celebrated for grouse and other shooting. Its length is nine miles by an average breadth of about six; bounded on the north-east by Douglas, on the south and south-west by Auchinleck, and the west and north-west by Sorn and Galston. The places of worship here are one Established Church, a Free Church, and one for the United Presbyterians. A bill for a railway from Douglas to this village has been obtained, which will make it the direct route from Ayr to Edinburgh. There is a library in the village, which is well conducted. Fairs are held in the months of July, August, and December; also a cattle show held annually on the second Friday in June.

POST OFFICE, Margaret M'Caul, Post Mistress.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Douglas) at a quarter past nine, morning, and are despatched at ten minutes before three.

NEW CUMNOCK

IS a parish of about 48,357 acres, in the Kyle district The village is 43 miles s. of Glasgow, 21 S.S.E. of Kilmarnock, the same distance W. by S. of Ayr, 10 N. by E. of Dalmellington, 12 W. by N. of Sanquhar, 34 N. W. of Thornhill, and 5 S. E. of Cumnock. The parish, which lies on the eastern boundary of that of Cumnock (or Old Cumnock), is in general hilly, and affords excellent pasture for sheep; but there are many spots of rich arable land. The river Nith takes its rise in the south-west end of the parish, and runs through the centre of the whole; and there are several small lakes, the sources of the Lagar and Afton. Various mines of coal are worked in this neighbourhood, the property of Sir James Stewart Menteath, of Mansfield, John Hyslop, Esq. and John Hunter, Esq.; and lime abounds in different parts of the district. The church was erected in 1833—it is a neat and well adapted building, sufficiently capacious for a congregation of a thousand persons; there are likewise a Free church, a dissenting meeting-house, a parochial school, and a free school. A subscription library was established in 1828; it contains upwards of six hundred volumes. Some years since a new road was formed, about four miles in length, up the glen of Afton; by continuing the line six miles farther, a communication would be effected between this part of Ayrshire and the adjoining county of Galloway, which would shorten the present distance by twelve miles—all carriages being now obliged to take the circuitous route of Dalmellington. The Free church stands on this site. A cattle fair is held in the village, on the Thursday immediately preceding Whitsuntide.

POST OFFICE, John Paterson, Post Master.—Letters from Carlisle, &c. arrive at twenty minutes before nine, morning, and are despatched thereto at a quarter before seven, evening. NEWMILNS AND DARVEL.

NEWMILNS is a neat market and manufacturing town, and burgh of barony, in the parish of LOUDOUN, district of Cunningham; 24 miles S. of Glasgow, 18 N.E. of Ayr, 7 E. by S. of Kilmarnock, and 16 N. of Cumnock, situated on the bank of the river Irvine, about two miles east from the village of GALSTON. It was made a burgh of barony by King James IV. in 1490; and the charter was confirmed by Sir Matthew Campbell, of Loudoun, in 1566. The bailies are competent to hold courts, from which there is no appeal, except to the court of sessions: and in other respects their jurisdiction is as ample as that of most royal burghs. There is a police commission for the better regulation and improvement of the town, consisting of seven members; the chief magistrate is the chief commissioner; the Marquis of Hastings is superior of the burgh: Thomas Brown, Esq., of Waterhaughs, has also considerable property here, and is superior of a neighbouring village called GREENHOLM. The weaving of muslins carried on here extensively—one thousand hands being employed in this branch of manufacture. The places of worship are an Established Church, a Free Church, and a meeting-house of the United Secession body. The parochial school, and a Sabbath evening school, are both well attended; in the latter more than three hundred children of the working classes receive instruction.

In the centre of the town is seen the remains of an old castle, said to have been erected as early as that of Edinburgh, but record is silent or obscure concerning its ancient possessors. Within the parish, and about a mile and a half from the town, is Loudoun Castle, the elegant seat of the Marquis of Hastings; it is large and magnificent, in the castellated or baronial style, standing amidst beautiful woods. Near the mansion is the old parish kirk of Loudoun, bearing the early date of 1015. The only part now standing is that which formed the choir, and is now the place of sepulture of the noble families of Loudoun and Hastings; and here rest the remains of the lamented Lady Flora Hastings. The parish of LOUDOUN comprises about 15,544 acres.

DARVEL is a small village, in the same parish as Newmilns. In this neighbourhood is Loudoun Castle, before noticed; and the woods and braes of Loudoun, furnish a theme for one of Tannahill's best songs. The Marchioness of Hastings benevolently erected a school and formed a cemetery in this village, the school is still maintained by the family. There is also a free school endowed by the late Alexander Mair for the education of the poor children of this village.

POST OFFICE, NEWMILNS, Thomas S. Gemmell, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive at a quarter before eight morning, and four afternoon, and are despatched at seven morning, and twenty-five minutes past six evening.

Post Office, DARVEL, Robert Tarbert, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive at a quarter before nine morning, and are despatched at half-past two afternoon.

OCHILTREE

IS a small but pleasant village, in the parish of that name, district of Kyle, 64 miles S.W. from Edinburgh, 49 N.W. from Dumfries, 37 S. from Glasgow, 28 N. by E. from Girvan, 22 N.W. from Sanquhar, 16 S. from Kilmarnock, the like distance N.E. from Maybole, 11½ E. from Ayr, and 4 from Old Cumnock, situated on the south side of the Lugar water, and on the high road from Ayr to Dumfries and Edinburgh. The country around is delightfully picturesque, and the face of the parish, which is pretty level, with some agreeable undulations, is well watered. The great Scottish reformer, John Knox, married his second wife at this village; she was the daughter of Lord Ochiltree, who at that period resided at Ochiltree House. Ochiltree formerly gave a baron's title to a branch of the family of Stewart. The church, like most others in this part of the county, is a plain building. The Parochial and Free schools are well attended, and there is a subscription library well selected. Fairs are held on the second Wednesday in May, and the first Tuesday in November, for cattle. The acreage of the parish is about 18,422.

SALTCOATS AND STEVENSTON.

SALTCOATS is a sea-port, partly in the parish of Stevenston and partly in that of Ardrossan; 74 miles W.S.S. from Edinburgh, 30 S.S.W. from Glasgow, 19 N. from Ayr, 14 W. by N. from Kilmarnock, and one from Ardrossan (to which latter place there is a railway); eligibly situated on the Frith of Clyde, near to its northern extremity. The general appearance of the town is by no means prepossessing, but its situation and proximity to Ardrossan, the passing and repassing of the different steam packets, and the railway communication, all contribute to give life to this ancient place. Formerly Salt-cots was the name of this town, and it then consisted only of a small number of cots or cottages, the inhabitants of which obtained a livelihood by making salt. At the beginning of the last century, a harbour was constructed for the convenience of shipments of coal, the produce of the mines in this neighbourhood, and the little hamlet began to assume the semblance of a village; but in recent years the entire exports of the neighbourhood are shipped at Ardrossan, leaving Saltcoats without any maritime trade. During the war it possessed an extensive trade, and ship-building was carried on with great spirit; but since the peace its commerce has been entirely reduced. The manufacture of salt is now considerable; many looms are employed in weaving muslins, &c., for the Glasgow and Paisley houses. The town-house, the foundation of which was laid in 1825, consists of a spacious hall, with two smaller apartments, adjoining, and a lock-up for prisoners. The edifice, which is surmounted by a steeple, is a prominent and effective object when approaching the town. A justice court, for the recovery of small debts, sits here on the first Monday of each month. The Royal Bank of Scotland and the City of Glasgow Bank have branches in Saltcoats, and each occupy a handsome building. The places of worship comprise an Established Church, a Free Church, two for United Presbyterians, an Independent chapel, a Gaelic Church, and one for Roman Catholics. The children of the town have the advantage of Free, Parochial, and Sabbath schools, and of a library of religious and moral works. There are several benefit societies, which alleviate the sufferings and relieve the necessities of the poor. A grain market is held every Thursday throughout the year, and an annual fair is held on the last Thursday in May.

STEVENSTON is a village one mile north-east from Saltcoats, and two south-west from Kilwinning. It consists chiefly of one street, half a mile in length, and derives its name from Stephen, or Steven, the son of Richard, who obtained a grant of lands from Richard Morville, constable of Scotland; the latter, a very celebrated man, died in 1189. Under this grant, Steven settled here, and gave his patronimic designation to the place. The parish abounds with coal and freestone, of which large quantities are annually shipped. The dairy and agricultural produce, comprising cheese, butter, wheat, oats, and potatoes, is likewise of considerable value. A small portion of the inhabitants of the village are employed in weaving, and through the agents here the works of their looms are conveyed to the Glasgow houses. The present church is a neat and handsome building, of modern erection. The old church belonged formerly to the monks of Kilwinning. The parish of Stevenston contains about 4,269 acres.

STEWARTON, DUNLOP, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

STEWARTON is a parish of about 13,667 acres, in the district of Cunningham—the town, one of manufactures, is 16 miles S. by W. from Glasgow, 8 N. from Irvine, 5 N. from Kilmarnock, and 3 from Fenwick; situated in a pleasant part of the county, on the bank of the water of Annock. The parish, which is about ten miles in length, and varying from three to four in breadth, is a rich agricultural district, highly cultivated and improved, and adorned by several tastefully laid out seats of the gentry. For centuries Stewarton remained an inconsiderable and obscure village, and it is only of a comparatively recent date, that, owing to the general extension of trade and manufactures, it has considerably increased in size. The manufacture or forging of clock work forms an item in the trade of this town; and three woollen mills are engaged in carding and spinning for the carpet and bonnet trades. A large portion of the population consists of shoemakers and weavers, who are employed by the Glasgow and Paisley establishments, through resident agents: linens and damasks are also issued from the Stewarton loom to some extent, and in the ingenious pursuit of 'Ayrshire needlework,' a great number of females are engaged. The staple articles of manufacture, however, are Scotch bonnets and military forage caps, in which branches there are about ten employers; the most extensive firm being that of Robt. Mackie and Company. Ample banking accommodation is also afforded the town and neighbourhood by the Clydesdale Banking Company, the Royal Bank of Scotland, and the Union Bank of Scotland, having each a branch under able and efficient management. The invention of 'portable bee boxes' by a Mr. Kerr, of this town, has proved a great advantage in the management of bees: these boxes are so constructed as to prevent 'swarming,' and to produce a very superior honey and comb; it obtains a much higher price in the markets than any other kind, and is known by the name of 'Stewarton honey.' District courts are held on the first Thursday of each month, for the recovery of small debts, and such business as falls under the jurisdiction of justices of the peace for the parishes of Stewarton, Dunlop, and Fenwick. The places of worship are Established and Free churches, and for United Presbyterians and Independents; there are Free church, Parochial, and United Presbyterian schools. The market is held on Thursday. Fairs on the Thursday next before the first Friday in January (o.s.), for horses, cattle, and farm and dairy produce; on the Monday preceding the first Thursday in May, for the like commodities, and for stock and agricultural and dairy utensils, also for hiring servants; and on the Wednesday before the last Thursday in October, for fat cattle, horses, and farm and dairy produce, also for hiring servants.

DUNLOP is a village, two miles and a half from Stewarton, romantically seated on the banks of the Swinsy, about three hundred yards off the road leading from Kilmarnock to Paisley; and when seen from a little distance, through the trees which embosom it, it has an agreeable and retired appearance. The houses being mostly old, and the streets narrow, it does not improve on a nearer view, though in this respect it does not suffer by comparison with other places of similar rank throughout the country. A handsome church erected in 1835, is ornamental to the neighbourhood; its predecessor having suffered the combined effects of age and weather. In the churchyard is a small arched chamber, formed under the direction of Lord Viscount Clanaboyes, in 1641, over the grave of his father, the Rev. Hans Hamilton, who, for forty-one years was minister of the parish; it contains a well executed monument in marble, justly deserving attention: a schoolhouse was also built by the same nobleman, in the wall of which, is a stone bearing the above date, and an inscription, stating amongst other particulars, that it was erected and endowed by him 'in love of his parish, in King James the Sixt his Raigne'; although in excellent preservation, it has long ceased to be occupied as an educational establishment, and is now the residence of a shoemaker; at the present time, there are two excellent schools—one a Parochial, and the other belonging to the Free church. The parish, to which the village gives name, lies principally in the bailery of Cunninghame, and county of Ayr; but on the north, it extends into Renfrewshire, It has long been noted for the excellent quality of its cheese, which bears a high character throughout Scotland. About the close of the seventeenth century, one Barbara Gilmour is said to have commenced the practice of making cheese from the entire milk, nothing but skimmed milk having been used in the process in this district previous to that period; at present all the cheese similarly made in the western counties receives the appellation of 'Dunlop,' a large quantity is made here annually. There is also a considerable trade in meal carried on by the inhabitants of the village, and surrounding territory. Dunlop House, in this parish, the seat of Thomas Dunlop Douglas, Esq., is one of the handsomest mansions in the county: on this estate, resting on a small knoll, is a stone of large dimensions, called the 'O'Great Stone,' supposed to have been employed in some ancient rites of worship. Two fairs for the sale of dairy stock, are held—one about the middle of May, the other on the 12th of November; both are generally well attended.

STRAITON AND PATNA.

STRAITON is a large parish, of about 52,250 acres, in Carrick district—the village, a neat one, is 80 miles S.W. from Edinburgh, 26 S. from Kilmarnock, 14 S.E. from Ayr, the same distance N.E. from Girvan, 8 E.S.E. from Maybole, the same distance N.E. from Dailly, and 6 S.W. from Dalmellington: finely situated on the banks of the Girvan, and on the road leading from Glasgow to Newton-Stewart—48 miles S. by W. from the former, and 30 N. from the latter town. The parish, which extends about fifteen miles in length by five in breadth, consists for the most part of pasture land, the surface, especially in the south-east, being wild and rocky, interspersed with a number of small lakes; there is, however a considerable supply of natural wood and several extensive plantations: and besides the Girvan and lakes, it is watered by the Doon. The inhabitants are for the most part occupied in agricultural pursuits, a few at a neighbouring tile works, and some find employment in weaving. About half a mile south of the village are the vestiges of an oblong entrenchment, from which an extensive view is commanded; about this spot, the artificial work on which must be presumed to be of Roman origin, various ancient relics have been found, particularly two carved vases, or urns, containing ashes. The Marquis of Ailsa, the Honble. Mrs. Macadam Cathcart, Sir James Ferguson, and Sir Edward Hunter Blair are the proprietors of the land. Straiton has a neat parish church, a parochial school, and a female school, the latter built at the expense of, and principally maintained by Lady Blair.

PATNA is a small village, in the parish of Straiton, situated on the banks of the Doon, which abounds with trout. Lime and coal are obtained plentifully in this neighbourhood, and furnishes employment to many of the villagers. Sir Thomas Montgomery Cunningham is the proprietor of the land about here. A chapel and school, in connection with the Established Church, and the Relief Body, have a place of worship.

TARBOLTON, FAILFORD, STAIR AND JOPPA.

TARBOLTON is a parish, containing about 12,142 acres, in the district of Kyle—the village (or town) is 12 miles S.E. from Irvine, 8 S. from Kilmarnock, and 7 N.E. from Ayr, situated about five miles from the shore of the Frith of Clyde, surrounded by a fine country, and occupying a considerable space of ground. In the reign of the second Charles, it was erected into a burgh of barony, and granted to John Cunningham, Esq., of Enterkine. The parish church is rather an elegant structure, with a beautiful spire, surmounted by a clock having four dials: it was completed in 1821, at a cost of upwards of £2,500. The parish is about seven and a half miles in length, and its average breadth, about four and a half. The Duke of Portland, John Bell, Esq., of Enterkine; Hugh Hamilton, Esq., of Pinmore; Edward Hunter Blair, Esq., of Brownhill; William Orr Paterson, Esq., of Montgomery; John Stirling, Esq., of Whitehaven, William Cooper, Esq., of Failford, William C. Cunningham, Esq., Afton Lodge: and Thomas Davidson, Esq., of Drumley, are the principal heritors. The fairs are held on the first Monday in May, the first Tuesday after the 11th of June, and the first Wednesday in November.

The village of STAIR, which comprises but a few dwellings and a neat parish church, is about two miles and a half from Tarbolton: its situation is most romantic, and many highly ornamental mansions add to the beauty of the surrounding country. The neighbourhood abounds with mines of coal. The earldom of Stair is now merged in that of Dumfries.

JOPPA is a village, in the parish of COYLTON, about 7 miles S.W. from Tarbolton. The parish, which is adjacent to the west border of Kyle district, is about five miles in length, by two in breadth, and contains about 11,753 acres. The church, erected in 1833, is a handsome building with accommodation for a congregation of more than seven hundred persons.

The parish of STAIR is in the district of Kyle, lying on the south or right bank of the river Ayr, extending six miles in length, by about two in breadth, and containing about 5,449 acres. It was first erected into an independent parish in 1653, when it was severed from Ochiltree for the accommodation of the noble family of Dalrymple, of Stair.

POST OFFICE, Mary Gibson, Post Mistress.—Letters from all parts arrive at twenty minutes before nine morning, and are despatched at one afternoon.

TROON, DUNDONALD AND SYMINGTON.

TROON, an excellent and improving sea-port, in the parish of Dundonald, is situated 75 miles s.w. from Edinburgh, 31 s.w. from Glasgow, 7 s. from Irvine, and 9 s.w. from Kilmarnock. Under the patronage of His Grace the Duke of Portland, this place has advanced steadily to a degree of eminence, and bids fair to become one of the most important seaports on the west coast of Scotland. Possessing uncommon natural advantages, in having an extensive bay, and a secure harbour, into which vessels of great burthen can confidently enter with the wind from almost any point. Troon is obviously destined to attain a high rank in maritime estimation. It has two superior dry docks for repairing vessels, large storehouses, a lighthouse, a ship-building yard, and a rope and sail manufactory. From the extremity of the harbour directly to Kilmarnock, runs a railway, on which immense quantities of coal are conveyed from the neighbourhood of the latter town, and from hence shipped for Ireland, France, &c. The town is progressively enlarging, and, in addition to the prosperity derived from its commerce as a port, it enjoys the advantage of being visited, in the bathing season, by numerous respectable families—for whose accommodation handsome lodging-houses have been built. The 'Portland Arms Hotel,' stands deservedly high in estimation, from its commodiousness, and excellent management by Mr. John Purdie. The places of worship are an Established and a Free Church, and a chapel for United Presbyterians: and the public schools are a Parochial and Free Church, and an auxiliary.

DUNDONALD is a parish on the sea coast, in the district of Carrick, extending eight miles along the shore, from the water of Irvine towards the south, and containing about 13,405 acres. The village, situated about four miles and a quarter from Troon (which is also in the parish), contains a church of the Establishment. Dundonald Castle is a ruin of great celebrity, and occupies an elevated and commanding situation, within a mile of the sea.

SYMINGTON parish, of about 3,737 acres, is in Kyle district, bounded by Monkton on the south, and Dundonald on the north—the village being about two miles from the latter, where is the parish church. The lands in this district were held, at a remote period, under Walter, the first Stewart, by Symon Loccard, from whom the place orginally obtained the name which it bears at the present day.

WEST KILBRIDE AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

WEST KILBRIDE is a parish of about 11,535 acres, in the district of Cunninghame—the village is 73 miles W.S.W. from Edinburgh, 30 S.W. from Glasgow, 24 S.S.W. from Paisley, the like distance N. from Ayr, 22 S. from Greenock, 19 N.W. from Kilmarnock, 12 N. from Irvine, 7½ S. from Largs, 7 S.W. from Dalry, 5 N. from Saltcoats, 4½ S. from Fairlie, and 4 N. W. from Ardrossan; surrounded on all sides by rising grounds, which on the west protect it from the keen sea breezes, and on the opposite aspect from easterly winds. The scenery around is bold and romantic, interspersed with a few genteel and handsome residences. The ruins of Law Castle and Porten Cross are in the immediate vicinity of the village, and are both objects of interest to the curious in architectural relics. The town, or village, seems to be making but very slow progress in the march of improvement. A branch of the City of Glasgow Bank is established here. The principal employment of the inhabitants is weaving. The places of worship are the parish church, a Free church, and an United Presbyterian chapel. There is a parochial school, one connected with the Free church, and the village supports a considerable library. The parish extends six miles along the shore of the Frith of Clyde and inland from two to three miles. The district, independent of the ruins already mentioned, possesses other attractive vestiges of antiquity; and it is worthy of remark that, off the sea line of the parish, one of the largest vessels composing the Spanish Armada remains sunk in ten fathoms water: an attempt was made about a century ago, to examine the internal condition of this ship, and the operation succeeded so far that a piece of ordnance was raised from her hulk.

POST OFFICE, Robert Dunn, Post Master.—Letters from all parts of England, Ireland, and Scotland, arrive (from Glasgow), at twenty-five minutes past eight, morning, and are despatched thereto (via Greenock) at five minutes before two afternoon. To Ardrossan at fifteen minutes past three, afternoon.

BANFFSHIRE.

THIS county, which is one of no great extent, is bounded on the north by the Frith of Moray, on the south and on the east by Aberdeenshire, and on the west by the shires of Moray and Inverness. Its form is elongated—irregularly concave towards its south-eastern border, and convex on its north-eastern, with a slip or apex inserted between the counties of Moray and Aberdeen. Its extent is fifty miles from east to west, with an average breadth of twelve, containing 647 miles, or 414,080 acres; it diminishes to an apex at the extreme western end, but the base on the coast extends twenty-five miles. The course of the Deveron, for a considerable distance, forms the eastern boundary between this county and that of Aberdeen; and the Spey, with little impropriety, may be accounted its western limit with Morayshire. This district was at one time a component part of the large province of Moray, which altogether forms one of the finest tracts of ground in the northern part of Scotland. On the eastern side of the Deveron, in the district of Buchan, the parish of Gamrie, and some other spots of land, belong to Banffshire.

SOIL, SURFACE AND CLIMATE, PRODUCE AND MANUFACTURES.—The soil with few exceptions, is deep loam or tenacious clay. The face of the county is agreeably diversified by an intermixture of valleys and flat ground, among the ranges of hills, with many beautiful fertile braes, productive of the finest crops, or serviceable for the excellence of their green pasture. The Strath of Glen-Avon proceeds from the forest of Glen-Avon, in a north easterly direction, or on the left, and Strath Deveron on the right. Betwixt these is Glen-Livet, from whence, in a north-easterly direction, diverges Glen-Feddick. The principal eminences in the county are—Noath, 1,830; Buck, or Cabrach, 2,377; Knockhill, 2,500; Corryhabbie, 2,558; Belrinnes, 2,747; and Cairngorm, 4,244 feet above the level of the sea. The principal crops raised are barley, oats, turnips, potatoes, flax, grass, and, in some places, a small extent of pease. Under the auspices of parliamentary commissioners, the county experienced considerable improvement, in being opened by new roads. Limestone may be quarried beneath the surface of nearly the whole county; and at Portsoy is a fine vein of serpentine stone, called 'Portsoy Marble,' as well as a species of granite, which, when polished, exhibits the resemblance of Hebrew characters. Freestone, marl, and slate are also found in various parts. The first Manufacture introduced into this district still subsists, with an almost equal operation throughout the county—this is the spinning of flax, for the merchants of Glasgow, Paisley, Dundee, and Aberdeen. The curing of fish is a branch of some consequence in the towns of Banff, Cullen and Portsoy; and there are distilleries in several of the principal towns. The chief articles of export are black cattle, oats, salted or dried cod, ling, haddock, and skate; the salmon of the Spey and Deveron, put together are also an article of great consideration; Banff herring are much in demand in the foreign markets. The imports may be, in general, comprised under the necessaries and luxuries of life, not produced in the county. The Climate of Banffshire is precarious. In the hilly districts, all the evils of cold and rain are often felt; and as frosts and snows frequently set in without any interval of good weather, the harvests are not only endangered, but the operations of husbandry are suspended for many of the winter months. The lower part of the shire, from Duff-house to Forglen and Kinnairdy (a tract of about twelve miles along the river side), and from Banff to Gordon Castle, including the districts of Boyne and Enzie, must be excepted, being nearly equal to the climate of Moray, and greatly surpassing the most part of the county in the fertility of the soil, the improvement of its agriculture, and the richness of its productions.

RIVERS, &c.—The waters of this county are the Spey, the Livet, the Avon, the Feddick, the Deveron, the Isla, the Conglas, and several more minute streams. The Deveron is not navigable; but this, as well as the Spey, yields excellent salmon fishing, and as such, is the source of much comfort and wealth to the inhabitants. Along the coast there are a number of rivulets, which fall with a quick descent, and are useful in propelling machinery in different little towns and villages where manufactures are established, or have begun to make their appearance.

Banffshire comprehends twenty-eight parishes, or parts of parishes, some extending into, and others locally situate in, other counties; and it contains two royal burghs, Banff and Cullen: these are also contributory burghs, or those which, in conjunction with others, are represented in the senate. One member represents the shire at large.

ABERCHIRDER IN MARNOCH.

ORDIQUHILL, FORGLEN, ROTHIEMAY, CORNHILL, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

ABERCHIRDER is a village in the parish of MARNOCK nine miles S. W. of Banff, seated on the river Deveron. In the village are places of worship for members of the Established Church, the Free Church, the United Presbyterian Church, the Baptists, Episcopalians, and Roman Catholics. The parish is four miles long, by four miles and a half wide. The fairs are held Tuesday after second Monday in January, first and if Monday, in May, day after Wartle, day before Turriff, first in August, day before Huntley in September, Monday before 22nd, or 22nd, if Monday, in November.

ORDIQUHILL is a parish nine miles S.W. of Banff, and seven south of Portsoy, it contains several mineral springs; in length it is 3½ miles, in breadth 2½.

FORGLEN is a small parish, situate on the romantic banks of the Deveron, 7½ miles S. of Banff, in size it is the same as Ordiquhill, and like it, also contains some mineral springs. There is a church of the Establishment and a Free Church.

ROTHIEMAY is a parish 6 miles N.N.E. of Huntley, and 7 E. of Keith, it is seated on the river Deveron and Isla, and contains Druidical remains, and Rothiemay House, a seat of the Earl of Fife. The parish is 7½ miles long, by 5½ wide. There is a church of the Establishment and a Free Church. A fair is held on the third Wednesday in May.

BANFF, ALVAH, WHITEHILLS AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

IS a burgh of barony, the capital of the county and of the parish of its name, 155 miles N. by E. of Edinburgh, 80 E. of Inverness, 46 N. by W. of Aberdeen, 35 E. of Elgin, 25 E. by N. of Fochabers, 13 E. of Cullen, and 8 E. by S. of Portsoy: pleasantly situate on the side of a hill overlooking the west bank of the Deveron and its confluence with the sea. This town was part of the ancient thanedom of Boin, whence the name seems to be derived—for, in some old charters, it is written Boineffe and Baineffe. Tradition says it was founded by Malcolm Canmore, in 1163; and it was erected into a royal burgh in 1372, by Robert II, who endowed it with the same privileges, and placed it on the same footing as Aberdeen. It is governed by a provost, three baillies, and five councillors. Banff and Macduff, in conjunction with Cullen, Elgin, Inverury, Kintore, and Peterhead, returns one member to parliament; the gentleman at present sitting is M. E. Grant Duff, Esq., of Eden.

The town comprises several well-built streets, with handsome shops, and is remarkably clean and neat. From the sea it presents a very interesting appearance, and from any point of view may be regarded as lively and particularly cheerful. The principal street, which is handsome, is ornamented with a suitable modern town-house, surmounted by an elegant spire; and there are public baths, a museum, a billiard room, and libraries. A newspaper, the Banffshire Journal, with a large circulation, is published in the town. Two railways have their termini in Banff—one from the south by way of Turriff, the other from the west by Strathisla. The burgh boasts one of the finest hotels in the north. Coaches arrive and depart daily for Elgin and Peterhead.

The river Deveron, which abounds with salmon, is here crossed by a substantially constructed bridge of seven arches, which gives access to the seaport of MACDUFF. From the bridge a fine view is obtained on looking up the water, of Duff House, the seat of the Earl of Fife, rising out of a beautiful park, surrounded by an apparently interminable wilderness of trees, which together are said to comprise a circumference of fourteen miles. The elegant mansion is partly in the Corinthian and partly in the composite style of architecture, and the front is elaborately decorated with sculpture. The interior is replete with curiosities, and embellished with an extensive collection of paintings by the most celebrated foreign and British artists.

The inner harbour of Banff is secure, but has not a great depth of water. The outer basin, which is defended by a pier and breakwater, is likewise deficient in depth, except at the entrance; it has however been much improved and deepened. A Morton's patent slip apparatus is here fitted up, and is frequently in operation. The number of vessels from the port of Banff is 18, the aggregate burden of which is about 2,208 tons. The chief trade, of an export nature, comprises salmon, herring, and other fish. Some of the largest firms in the herring trade have the chief seat of their business in the burgh, in which there are six branch banks. There is a custom house, and the merchants enjoy the privilege of a bonded warehouse. There is a large distillery, besides a brewery, and an extensive saw-mill. An iron foundry has long been carried on, and does an extensive business. Ship building, rope and sail making, are also carried on to a considerable extent; and there are besides a candle works and a tannery. The places of worship are a church of the Establishment, a neat modern erection, with handsome spire; a Free church, and chapels belonging to Episcopalians, United Presbyterians, Independents, Roman Catholics, Wesleyan Methodists, &c. Chalmers Hospital was founded in 1861, in terms of a bequest by the late Alexander Chalmers, of Clunie, long merchant in the town of Banff, and is for the support, maintenance, cure, and relief of destitute sick paupers, lunatics, and other diseased and poor infirm persons of both sexes born, domiciliated, and resident in any town or parish of the county of Banff; the inhabitants whereof shall make collections at their respective parish churches in aid of the funds of the hospital. It is adapted to accommodate fifty patients, with the requisite buildings for officials and attendants. A permanent revenue for the support of the hospital is derived from the rental of the lands of Clunie and Knockorth. The building is situate in the seatown, and is an imposing erection. Banff Academy ranks high as an educational institution; and, independent of other superior scholastic establishments, there are charity schools for children of the humbler classes. There are also several boarding establishments for young ladies, so that few burghs offer greater educational facilities. A castle of considerable strength and magnitude formerly raised its feudal battlements in the burgh; but, of all that might convey a conception of its grandeur or importance, no vestige remains but part of the ancient wall, the moat, and traces of the entrenchments; a modern mansion now occupies part of its site. The society of the place is polished and agreeable, while the size and position of the town places within reach of its inhabitants all the comforts of city, with most of the privileges of rural life. The weekly corn and provision markets are held on Friday. Fairs, 6th of January; Brandon fair on the Friday before the 26th May, or the 26th if a Friday, and on the Friday before the 22nd of November, or the 22nd if a Friday; the harvest feeing market on the first Friday of August, old style.

ALVAH is a parish, 2½ miles S.S.W. of Banff. The river Deveron is here crossed by a bridge, erected by the Earl of Fife. The parish is six miles long and three wide, and is for the most part fertile. There is a church of the Establishment. The hill of Alvah is a conspicuous landmark for this coast.

WHITEHILLS is a village in the parish of BOYNDIE, 2 miles W.N.W. of Banff, chiefly inhabited by fishermen. The parish, which is 5 miles long by 2 wide, contains an Established church, and the ruins of Boyne Castle.

BUCKIE, RATHVEN PORT GORDON, PORTEASIE,

AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

BUCKIE is a village or small town, and flourishing fishing station, in the parish of Rathven, 20 miles w. from Banff, 7 E. from Fochabers, and 6 w. from Cullen, situated on both sides of the burn (or brook) of Buckie; one part belonging to Colonel Gordon, of Clunie, the other to Sir Robert Glendouwyn Gordon, of Letterfourie. The inhabitants are mainly engaged in fishing, and are famed throughout Scotland for their industry, and hardihood in braving the perils of their avocation: as a natural consequence, their services are eagerly sought at the several herring-fishing stations on the Moray Frith. The harbour is large and commodious, and was formed in 1857, at the joint expense of Sir R. G. Gordon, Bart, and the Fishing Board of Buckie. The places of worship are the Parish Church, a Chapel of Ease, an Episcopal Chapel, a Free Church, and a Roman Catholic Chapel. The Free Church, a handsome building, in the Elizabethan style, was erected chiefly through the praiseworthy instrumentality of the Rev. Robert Shanks, its respected minister.

PORT GORDON is a village on the sea coast, about a mile west from Buckie. Its inhabitants are exclusively occupied in fishing and the ship coasting trade; they employ stake and bag nets for the capture of salmon, which are here abundant, being in the immediate vicinage of Speymouth. A large quantity of corn is shipped annually from this port, and it is hence that the district, to a considerable extent inland, is supplied with coals and salt. A narrow rivulet separates this village from that of PORT TANNACHIE.

PORTEASIE (or Portessie) is a small coast village, about a mile east from Buckie, it is of some consequence as a boat-building station.

The parish of RATHVEN extends about 10 miles along the coast of the Moray Frith, by from 3 to 5 in breadth. The greater portion of the land is hill, moss, and moor, but the more level parts, near the sea, are arable and fertile, being greatly enriched by sea manure: and in some parts the eye is relieved by the appearance of thriving plantations. Throughout the district, the supply of limestone, sandstone, and slate is abundant; and the memorials of antiquity are numerous, the Danish 'cairn' being the most general

ENZIE is a village in the parish of Bellie, 22 miles w. of Banff. The parish is partly in this county, and partly in Elginshire. A church of the Establishment and a Free Church are the places of worship.

CULLEN AND DESKFORD,

AND THE VILLAGES OF PORTNOCKIE, FINDOCHTY, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

CULLEN is a royal burgh, a maritime town, and the capital of the parish of its name; 191 miles N.N.E. of Edinburgh, 22 E. of Elgin, 13 N.E. of Fochabers, 14 W. of Banff, and 6 W. of Portsoy; situated on a commanding eminence, overlooking the Moray Frith. Until within the last forty years it consisted of three independent and distinct towns—the NEW TOWN, near the sea, with a harbour—the AULD TOWN, more inland, and adjoining to the parks of Cullen House; and the FISH TOWN, a low village, exclusively inhabited by fishermen and their families. The Auld Town no longer exists, and the park of the Earl of Seafield occupies its site. To this nobleman the town is indebted for those improvements and modern erections which have conferred upon it that aspect of neatness and respectability so apparent, and raised it to the rank of the third town in the shire. The curing of fish and its exportation is carried on by several of the inhabitants. There are also branches of the Union Banking Company, and the North of Scotland Banking Company, and a good inn.

The acting magistrates are the provost, two baillies, with a treasurer, dean of guild, and thirteen councillors. The burgh joins with Banff, Elgin, Inverury, Kintore and Peterhead, in returning a member to Parliament. The gentleman at present sitting is Mountstewart Elphinstone Grant Duff, Esq.

A very elegant temple of stone was some years since erected upon an elevated spot of ground, very near the sea, and not far from Cullen House. This latter is an ancient and irregular edifice; the interior is, however, furnished with modern taste, and adorned with paintings by the most eminent masters. Cullen stream passes under the south walls; and on the opposite side are the park and pleasure-grounds, which are connected with the house by an elegant arch of eighty-four feet span. Not far distant are the ruins of a dwelling in which Elizabeth, Queen of Robert Bruce, is said to have died. An eminence, called Castle Hill, at the western extremity of the town, is the site of an ancient fortification, which must formerly have been a place of great strength. An almost perpendicular rock renders it inaccessible from the north, and it is surrounded in every other direction by a deep ditch. It is supposed to have been destroyed by fire, as vitrified stones have been frequently extracted from beneath the surface. Fairs are held on the 7th January, the third Friday in May, and second Friday in November (new style.)

DESKFORD is a parish, lying between Cullen and Grange; five miles in length by three in breadth. The places of worship are a Church of the Establishment, and a Free Church, and there are a Parochial and Free Church school in the village.

PORTNOCKIE is a fishing village, in the parish of Rathven, 2 miles W.N.W. from Cullen, and 4 miles E. from Porteasie. It is situated in Moray Frith, and contains a chapel of ease, and a parochial school.

FINDOCHTY is also a small fishing village, in the same parish as Portnockie; 3 miles W. from Cullen. The only place of worship is an United Presbyterian church.

DUFFTOWN IN MORTLACH.

ABERLOUR, CHARLESTOWN, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

DUFFTOWN is a village and burgh of barony, of modern date (having been erected within the last half century), in the parish of Mortlach; 118 miles N. of Edinburgh, 49 N.W. of Aberdeen, 29 S.W. of Banff, 14 N.E. of Inveraven, and 4 S. of Aberlour; situated a short way to the north of the old decayed hamlet of Mortlach, near the junction of the Dullan and the Fiddich waters. The village is rapidly improving in appearance, extent and population, under the auspices of its patrons and owners, the Earl of Fife and the Duke of Richmond. This parish is famous as the scene of the signal victory gained over the Danes by Malcolm II; and the district possesses the ruins of the castles of Auchindoun and Balnevy, of which Mr. Gordon, in his 'Statistical Account of Scotland,' says—'when a stranger is travelling through this part of Scotland for curiosity or pleasure, they deserve his attention, and will contribute to his amusement.' Excellent accommodation may be obtained at the Fife Arms which is also a posting house. The parish church is in the immediate vicinity of the village, which also contains a Free church and a neat Roman Catholic chapel. Fairs are held on the last Thursday in every month, excepting April, when one is held on the 15th, and on the first Monday in June.

About 5 miles distant from Dufftown, in the parish of ABERLOUR is the pleasant and thriving village of CHARLESTOWN. It contains a church of the Establishment, and a Free Church. The Aberlour Hotel is an excellent commercial, family and posting establishment. Fairs are held on the first Thursday in April, May, and November.

INVERAVON.

A PARISH on the banks of the river Avon, lies chiefly in Banffshire, and a small portion in the county of Moray: about 42 miles S.W. of Banff, 72 W.N.W. of Aberdeen, 8 S.W. of Aberlour, 22 S.W. of Keith, 14s. of Rothes, 22 s. by W. of Fochabers, and 22 s. of Elgin. Besides the Avon and the Spey, it is watered by the Livet. The surface is irregular, but cannot be described as mountainous, except the lofty region of Belrinnes, which is mostly in this parish, and abounds in grouse. The district of GLEN-LIVET is remarkably fertile, and noted for the excellence of its whisky, for the manufacture of which there are two extensive distilleries. The sides of the river are shaded with copses of birch and alder, and on the banks of the Spey there is a considerable extent of oak. BALLINDALLOCH, the elegant mansion of Sir George M'Pherson Grant, Bart. is pleasantly situated at the confluence of the Avon and Spey. A dilapidated castle, called Drummin, and the ruins of Castletown, are among the remains of antiquity. A church of the Establishment, a chapel of Ease, a Free church, and a Roman Catholic chapel, are the places of worship within the parish. Fairs are held on the Tuesday before the 26th of May, and the second Tuesday in July (old style); and another on the Tuesday before the 23rd of November.

KEITH, BOTRIPHNIE, NEWMILLS,

AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

A RESPECTABLE market and post town, and parish—the latter chiefly in the county of Banff, but extending into that of Moray—the town is 170 miles N. of Edinburgh, 20 S.W. of Banff, 17 E S.E. of Elgin, 50 N.E. of Aberdeen, 60 E. of Inverness, 8 S.E. of Fochabers, 17 S.S.W. of Portsoy, and 12 S. of Cullen; situate on the banks of the Isla, in the centre of an amphitheatre of hills. It is divided into three distinct towns, namely OLD KEITH, NEW KEITH, and FIFE KEITH; the latter, erected by the Earl of Fife, is separated from Old and New Keith by the Isla. The old town has declined considerably since the establishment of the new: New Keith was begun about the year 1750, by the Earl of Findlater, upon a barren tract of land, feued off in tenements of fifteen yards by sixty; it is formed on a regular plan of three parallel streets and a square; in the latter are held the fairs and the weekly markets. There are no authentic documents to record the origin of Old Keith, but it has certainly existed upwards of six centuries. An extensive manufactory has been erected here by the Messrs. G. and G. Kynock, for the manufacture of Scotch tweeds, who give employment to a considerable number of hands. About half a mile from the town, on the banks of the Isla, is a wool-carding mill; and in the neighbourhood are corn mills—one of the latter, built upon an improved plan, and under the patronage of the Earl of Fife, occupies the site of the old mill, which was known as the mill of Keith. Three branches of the respective establishments of the Union Bank of Scotland; the Aberdeen Town and County Bank, and the North of Scotland Banking Company, are in operation here; and besides the usual trades of a domestic nature, there are dye-works, a tan-yard, and two good inns. On the Cairds' Hill, denoting the 'hill of friends,' are the remains o a druidical temple, near which several tumuli have been opened, and found to contain various sepulchral remains. Tradition relates that an encounter took place in Old Keith, upwards of one hundred and fifty years ago, between Mr. Gordon, of Glengarick, and Peter Roy M'Gregor, the leader of a band of freebooters, who after a desperate resistance, was defeated, himself taken prisoner, and his gang destroyed. A Church of the Establishment was opened for public worship in 1819; it is an elegant and commodious edifice, in the neat modern Gothic style of architecture, with accommodation for a congregation of eighteen hundred, and is considered the most beautiful temple for religious service in the north of Scotland. The Episcopalians, Seceders, a Free Church Community, and Roman Catholics, have each a place of worship. The inhabitants have the advantage of four libraries, namely, two of evangelical subjects, a subscription library, and a juvenile collection. The market is held on Friday. There are four extra markets during the year—the first Thursday of March, the third Thursday of May, the second Thursday of July, and the second Thursday of October.

BOTRIPHNIE, a parish in Banffshire, and the set of a presbytery, is situated about four miles south of Keith town: it extends across the whole county, from Aberdeenshire on the east, to Elginshire on the west, having an average breadth of about three miles: the oil for the most part is arable, and generally speaking, ertile.

NEWMILLS is a village, in the parish of Keith, and one mile N. from that town. It has an United Presbyterian Mission House, a Society's, and a female school.

POST OFFICE, Land-street, KEITH, Barbara Keith, Post Mistress.

KIRKMICHAEL,

AND THE VILLAGE OF TOMINTOUL.

KIRKMICHAEL is a large parish, occupying the upper extremity of the county from beyond the mountain of Cairngorm, to near the confluence of the Livat with the Avon, a distance of twenty-five miles, by a breadth of from three to six miles. The Duke of Richmond and the Earl of Seafield are heritors. The church of the parish is situated in TOMINTOUL, a village in which also are several public schools, and a place of worship each for the Free Church community and Roman Catholics. The Richmond Arms in the village, is an excellent and well-conducted inn and posting house.

POST OFFICE, TOMINTOUL, Donald Meldrum, Post Master.—Letters arrive from all parts at nine night, and are despatched at thirty-five minutes past four afternoon.

MACDUFF AND GARDENSTOWN, IN GAMRIE.

MACDUFF is a sea-port town in the parish of Gamrie, situated about a mile east from the town of Banff, on the opposite side of the Deveron river, and on the declivity of a hill descending towards the sea shore. This town has risen, since the early part of the eighteenth century, from being little more than the huttage of a few fishermen, to a place of respectable size and trade. It is built on the property of the Earl of Fife, whose fine seat lies in this neighbourhood; and to this nobleman it has been indebted for its chief improvements and prosperity; through his influence, it was created a burgh of barony by George III., in 1783, when its name was altered from Doon, to its present appellation; it has from that period increased rapidly in extent and consequence; contains two handsome churches, Parochial and Free Church schools, and a school for poor children of both sexes—the latter, called the 'Murray Institution,' from its having been founded by a Mr. Murray, of London, a canvass manufacturer, and a native of Macduff, in 1849; there is also a town house and gaol.

The church, or rather chapel-of-ease, occupies a conspicuous position on the eminence; and Lord Fife has ornamented his precincts with a cross, which is highly effective at a little distance. The same nobleman has munificently expended a vast sum in the erection and improvement of the harbour, which is now considered one of the best on the Moray Frith; as a station of the herring fishery, it is exceedingly valuable, a great supply of that fish being obtained and shipped from this port. There are two branch banking establishments—the Union Bank of Scotland, and the North of Scotland Banking Co. The greater proportion of the grain produced for twenty miles east of Macduff, is exported hence, as are salmon, cod, and herring; and the country inland, is supplied from here, with coal, bone manure, and lime. Several vessels trade with London, and the Baltic, the number of fishing boats is very considerable, and in the curing of fish there are some respectable establishments, and many of the inhabitants obtain in this branch comfortable and even lucrative employment. the town is governed by a provost, bailies and council; and it has a weekly market on Tuesday.

GARDENSTOWN is also a small seaport village in the same parish, eight miles east of Banff, and fourteen west of Frazerburgh, an Established church and one for the United Presbyterians, together with two schools are in the village. The parish of GAMRIE extends about eleven miles, by an average breadth of about two and a half. The coast is bold and precipitous and indented with caverns. The land is partly under tillage, and partly in pasture. Thriving plantations greet the eye in several quarters, and other beneficial improvements are in progress in this parish, the greater part of which belongs to the Earl of Fife.

POST OFFICE, MACDUFF, George Edward, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Banff) at one and half-past four afternoon, and at half-past six evening, and are despatched thereto at half-past five morning, ten minutes before eleven forenoon, half-past three afternoon, and half-past five evening.

Post Office, DUBFORD, William Ingram, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Banff) at three afternoon, and are despatched thereto five minutes later.

PORTSOY AND FORDYCE.

PORTSOY is a sea-port in the parish of Fordyce; 178 miles N. of Edinburgh, 82 E. by N. of Inverness, 18 E.N.E. of Fochabers, and 8 W. by N. of Banff, situated on a tongue of land projecting into the Moray Frith, at the head of one of those little bays by which this part of the coast is in many places indented. It was erected into a burgh of barony about the sixteenth century, by the Baron of Boyne, whose descendants, embracing the fortunes of the pretender, in 1715, forfeited their lands to the crown. They were subsequently granted to the Earl of Findlater and Seafield, and are still in the possession of that family. The town is small and irregularly built, but as a port, it is in a thriving condition. The point of land on which it stands forms a safe harbour, which has been greatly improved; and it is now sufficiently deep to moor vessels of upwards of two hundred tons burthen. Besides the proceeds of the herring fishery, which has been actively prosecuted for many years, it enjoys a trade in the exportation of grain and stone, and the importation of coal; fish-curing, and a woollen manufactory, are prominent branches among the general domestic business, which, combined with the income resulting from the traffic of its port, has elevated Portsoy into a position of some consequence as a commercial town. The stone raised from the quarries of this district (which has obtained the name of 'Portsoy marble') is a beautiful mixture of red, green, and white accumulations, and is wrought into tea-cups, vases, and small ornaments, but not frequently into chimney-pieces, being found too hard and brittle for that purpose. Some singular specimens of schistus, and a species of asbestos of a greenish hue, are met with in this neighbourhood; but the most remarkable mineral production is a granite, of a buff or flesh colour, which, except here and in Arabia, has not been discovered throughout the world. The export of these different natural rareties is considerable, and adds to the inflowing wealth of the district, which likewise abounds with excellent limestone. The burgh is under the jurisdiction of a baron baillie, and a justice of the peace; the Earl of Seafield is superior. The places of worship are a Church of the Establishment, a Free Church, an Independent Chapel, an Episcopal Chapel, an United Presbyterian Meeting House, and a chapel for Roman Catholics.

The parish of FORDYCE is of great antiquity. The village is situated about three miles W. by S. from Portsoy; and owns at the present day some celebrity from its educational institutions. Smith's Academy is a handsome modern building, in which nine boys are educated and clothed. The Parochial School is admirably conducted. It was in this latter establishment that Sir James Clark, Bart., physician in ordinary to Her Majesty, and John Forbes, Esq., physician extraordinary to His H.R.H. Prince Albert, received the early part of their education. The most remarkable remnant of antiquity in the village, is a large castellated building, standing on the east side of the square, and bearing the date of 1592; it originally belonged to the Durn family, but is now the property of Lord Seafield.

BERWICKSHIRE.

THIS is the most south-easterly county of Scotland: it is bounded on the east by the North Sea, and on the west by the counties of Edinburgh and Selkirk; on the north the range of the Lammermuir hills separate it from the county of Haddington, and on the south it is bordered by Northumberland and Roxburghshire, having a detached portion of the county of Durham upon its south-eastern limits. Its form is an irregular oblong square, measuring from east to west nearly thirty-four miles, and from north to south about twenty; and its area comprises 302,951 statute acres, as computed for the ordnance survey.

EARLY HISTORY.—At the period of the Roman invasion, Berwickshire was inhabited by tribes of British, called Ottadinii; and it was subsequently overrun by bands of Saxons, who engrafted their language and manners on those of the original inhabitants. The conquests of these foreigners extended a considerable way along the shores to the east and west; and, in the course of time, they gave the land of which they thus possessed themselves the title of Lothian, which it still retains in the western division. The entire area of Berwickshire was comprised in this Saxon territory, which was distinguished by the name of Saxonia, superseding its previous designation, Bernicia. Until the year 1020, this district of country was included within the kingdom of Northumberland; in that year it was ceded to King Malcolm II. by Cospatrick, Earl of Northumberland, who settled in Scotland and was created Earl of Dunbar. About the beginning of the eleventh century, many Norman and Anglo-Saxon families settled in Berwickshire, as well as in other parts of Scotland, and were the founders of a number of noble houses still ranked in the peerage in the country. It appears, likewise, that the town of Berwick became a settlement of Flemish and other foreign tradesmen; and it is recorded as a fact, that at Berwick originated those laws which were framed and applied in Scotland for the regulation of burghs and their guild associations. Being the threshold of the Scottish kingdom in entering from England, Berwickshire suffered, in the succeeding centuries, in all the wars between the two hostile nations, and was occasionally involved in jurisdictional disputes with its ecclesiastical neighbour, the Palatine Bishop of Durham; and Berwick, and its bridge across the Tweed, were in general the main objects of contention. The description of Berwick will be found under the more appropriate head of that town. From the variety of successes and disasters which Berwickshire underwent for so many centuries, and from its successive occupation by different mixed nations, the people of this part of North Britain have not that distinct Scottish character so directly recognised in places more distant from the frontier. By their language and personal appearance, especially the former, the inhabitants of Berwick and its neighbourhood are easily particularized, and in common with the Northumbrians, they speak with that remarkable burr which is found nowhere else in the kingdom. The women are famed for their beauty—the men for their gallant bearing in times of warlike strife. The 'Men of Merse' distinguished themselves at Flodden, and other bloody fields, under the command of Lord Home; and there is a tradition that a party, led to the Holy Land by some of their feudal chiefs, obtained on its ensanguined plains the highest honours for their unconquerable intrepidity. When Charles I. paid his first visit to Scotland, in the year 1633, Lord Home met him at Berwick with a train of six hundred Merse gentlemen, 'gallantly arrayed' on horseback. The present generation has seen that the yeomanry of the Merse have lost no portion of the military spirit of their ancestors.

SURFACE, SOIL, &c.—Berwickshire is divided into three districts, namely, Merse, Lammermoor (or Lammermuir), and Lauderdale. The Merse, so called from the word march, or boundary, is the largest and most valuable district, and occasionally gives name to to the whole county; it is the most compact and extensive piece of level ground in Scotland, comprising about 130,000 statute acres; in appearance it resembles a wide-spread portion of some of the English fertile counties; and being well enclosed, and enriched with trees and plantations, when viewed from any of the gentle eminences which its surface occasionally presents, it looks like a vast garden. Lammermoor, which consists of nearly 90,000 statute acres, is a highly pastoral district, with generally a wild brown aspect, and runs on the northern border of the Merse, so as effectually to divide the fine vales of Edinburgh and Haddington shires from the beautiful valley of the Tweed: but for this chain of blackish obstructive hills, the prospect from Edinburgh would be carried the length of the Cheviots. The district of Lauderdale, which has received this title from the Leader Water, along whose bank it ranges, is a mixture of hill and dale, the land in the valleys being essentially arable: this portion of the county contains about 67,000 statute acres. The eminences of Berwickshire are not of such magnitude or interest as to require particular description: those of the greatest altitude above the level of the sea are—Soutra Hill, 1,716 feet; Crib Law, 1,615; Clint Hill, 1,544; Tippet Knows, 1,323; Twin Law, 1,260; and Dirrington Law, 1,145.

PRODUCE, MINERALS, MANUFACTURES, &c.—Within the last eighty years very great exertions have been made to improve the agricultural character of the county, and in this respect it differs nothing from the neighbouring territory of East Lothian: the country is thickly but not redundantly populated with a most intelligent active peasantry and farming class. The exports of Berwickshire consist of great quanities of corn, coal, sheep, and eggs; and these, indeed, may be considered as the extent of its commerce. Minute investigation has failed in discovering minerals or fossils in sufficient supply to be of great and general benefit, although some coal exists in the vicinity of Berwick, and in the parishes of Mordington and Cockburnsbath; and limestone is, almost consequently, found in its proximity. Marl and gypsum have likewise been raised; and freestone and whinstone, of various kinds, abound in every part of the shire. As coal is introduced from Durham by an easy land carriage, the district of the Merse does not feel the absence of that valuable fuel very severely; but in some other parts of the shire, as throughout the upper portion of the vale of Tweed, this article is dear. Berwickshire is strictly pastoral and agricultural. Manufactures, as yet, have made little or no progress within its borders; what is connected with this system of industry finds its chief seat at the principal town, Berwick, where sackings, sailcloths, and ropes are made, and flax dressed and spun. The curing of herrings in this quarter is a somewhat extensive occupation, and it is from hence that large shipments of corn, &c. are made.

Rivers and Railways.—The waters of this county flow in general either to the south or north-east. The Tweed, which is an imposing stream, and the most lovely of Scottish rivers, from its sparkling clearness and its soft sylvan banks, receives all the currents that are poured down from the northern eminences: it is not susceptible of navigation, but it is of great value from its salmon fisheries, which are under a strict system of water police. The Leader, the Eden, and the united streams of the Blackadder and the Whiteadder, course into the Tweed. The Eye is the only other river; it falls into the sea at Eyemouth. The Eden, which runs southwards from Lammermoor, has a remarkable fall, near the house of Newton Don, of above forty feet, exhibiting a fine appearance when there is a flood. It is a peculiarity of the Blackadder, that no salmon can live in it; if any happen to enter, they are said to die in a few days, though the are caught plentifully in the Whiteadder, which also abounds with trout and whitelings: these latter attain a larger size than the trout; their flesh is red, and in flavour bears a partial affinity to that of salmon. The principal lines of railway in this county are the North British and the North Eastern. From the North British there is the Dunse and Riston branch, communicating with Chirnside; and the Edinburgh branch, to Melrose and Hawick, passes about five miles to the west of Lauder; there is also the Kelso branch of the North Eastern. The Northern extremity of the York, Newcastle, and Berwick Railway is at Berwick; and here the magnificent Tweed viaduct connects that line with the North British, and forms, with other railways, an uninterrupted communication from London to Aberdeen.—[See the town of Berwick for a more detailed account of the viaduct.]

Division and Representation.—Berwickshire comprehends (exclusive of Berwick town) thirty-three parishes, and two parts of parishes; and contains one royal burgh, Lauder. The only contributory burgh (or that which, in conjunction with others, is represented in the senate), in this county, is Lauder; the others, representatively connected with it, are Haddington, Dunbar, and North Berwick, in Haddingtonshire, and Jedburgh in Roxburghshire. Berwick-upon-Tweed is a royal burgh, and sends two members; but is not classed as an integral portion of the county, which sends one for the shire at large.

BERWICK-UPON-TWEED, TWEEDMOUTH, SPITTAL,

ANCROFT, SCREMERSTON, NORHAM, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

BERWICK-UPON-TWEED (so denominated to distinguish it from North Berwick, in East Lothian, and several Berwicks in England), is a corporate and parliamentary borough and sea-port, 334 miles N. by W. from London, 64 N. by W. from Newcastle-upon-Tyne, and 49 N. from Morpeth; from the City of Edinburgh it is distant S.E. 58 miles (by rail), and from Glasgow E. by S. 103. It is a town of considerable importance, of Saxon, or Teutonic origin. The etymology of its name is as doubtful as the period of its establishment is obscure. Maitland, the historian of Edinburgh, entered into a dissertation to prove that the title was transferred by the Saxon founders from a town of note, of the same name, in their own country—in the like manner as European emigrants designate cities and towns on the Continent of America; others, and among the rest, Camden, allege that the word Berwick is deduced from Barwica, signifying 'a village belonging to a manor;' while a third party, with more feasibility, derive it from bar and wick, 'a castle on the bend of a river. But, in whatever manner, or from whom, Berwick received its appellation, it was fortified and defended by a garrison at a very remote period of British history; it became the chief town of the district, and was the centre, on various occasions, of many important transactions. It stands on the north side of the river Tweed, about half a mile from the spot where that stream empties itself into Berwick bay. Prior to the year 1551 it was a Scots town, but it was then eeected into a free burgh or distinct liberty in some measure independent of either kingdom—having a small district attached to it called 'Berwick bounds,' stretching about three miles north, and the like distance up the Tweed. It may be added, that it is described as a large and populous town, so early as the reign of David I., of Scotland—mentioned as a place of redoubtable strength in the time of Osbert, one of the last kings of Northumberland—and is assumed to be the point where the Danes landed, in one of their excursions under Hubba, in the year 867. It continued in the possession of the Saxons for some ages, and subsequently was held by the Danes, until the Scottish king Gregory (co-temporary with our Alfred the Great) took it by assault. About the year 1098, Berwick was annexed to the see of Durham, by Edgar; but the gift was soon after resumed, in consequence of the ingratitude of Ralph Flambert, who had been consecrated bishop of that see. William I., of Scotland, who, in 1174, had joined Henry's three sons in rebellion, was taken prisoner near Alnwick, and conducted in chains before Henry, who obliged him to pay homage for the whole of Scotland; and, as a security, he was forced to deliver up the fort of Berwick, together with all the principal forts of Scotland. In 1291, the states of England and Scotland, with Edward I., assembled at Berwick, to determine the claims of Robert Bruce and John Baliol, to the Scottish crown, when after numerous conferences, on the 17th of November, in the following year, the king appointed John Baliol successor to the crown. The town is surrounded by regular fortifications, and was formerly the principal one of the kingdom of Merse; it stands on a gentle declivity, at a short distance from the sea, its gates and walls are yet standing, but the cannon have for some time been removed to Leith; a ditch aided its defence on the north-east, and the river served for a moat on the south side; the ancient castle of which there are only a few remains, must have been of great strength, and is now merely an attractive object to the antiquary.

Berwick, in modern days, is of considerable consequence: it is a regular, well-built town, joined to England by a fine bridge of hewn stone, of fifteen spacious and elegant arches; the whole length of the bridge is eleven hundred and sixty-four feet, and its width seventeen feet; at each of the pillars, which are fourteen in number, there is an outlet on both sides, for the greater safety of foot passengers, when carriages, &c. are meeting on the b idge; it was commenced in the reign of Elizabeth, but not completed until that of Charles I. and was computed to have cost £15,000—a heavy sum at that period. The sixth pillar from the Berwick side separates that town from the county palatine of Durham; and the battlements at the outlet of this pillar are always covered with sods, as a guide to constables and others in the execution of warrants. About a quarter of a mile higher up the river is the railway viaduct, opened by Her Majesty and Prince Albert on the 29th August, 1850. This magnificent structure spans the broad valley of the Tweed, and completes an important link in the chain of railway communication between London and Edinburgh, by the east coast. It forms the northern extremity of the North-Eastern Railway; and in magnitude of construction and grandeur of design is, perhaps, one of the most remarkable architectural achievements of modern times. The foundation stone of the noble structure was laid on the 15th of May, 1847, without any public ceremony. The viaduct consists of twenty-eight circular arches, each of sixty-one feet six inches span, springing from lofty piers eight feet six inches broad at the narrowest point. One half of the arches span the river—here a broad and beautiful stream,—and the remainder are built on the neighbouring land south of the Tweed. The total length of the bridge is two thousand one hundred and sixty feet, and its greatest height, from the bed of the river, one hundred and twenty-six feet six inches, including the parapets; its breadth between the parapets is twenty-four feet, allowing a double line of rails to be laid. The viaduct is built entirely of stone, with the exception of the inner part of the arches, which is brick laid in cement. There are about one million and a half cubic feet of masonry in the structure; and two million and a half of bricks have been placed in the arches. The greatest depth of the water at high tide is twenty-three feet. The design of the bridge is elegant, and the parapets are adorned on the outside by miniature corbelled arches. The piers of the bridge, which are protected by handsome cut-waters, are curved up perpendicularly, and are narrowed near the spring of the arch, by means of offsets. The parapets and springs of the arches are of polished stone, but the rest of the masonry is only rough hewn. The appearance of the arches is extremely graceful. When one-half of the arches had been erected, it was considered desirable, for the accommodation of the traffic, to erect a temporary bridge across the river, without waiting the completion of the stone viaduct, so as to avoid the uncertainty of the river operations. The quantity of timber used in the construction of the stone and timber bridges was not less than three hundred thousand cubic feet. The large embankment at the south end of the bridge, five-eighths of a mile in length, and in some places sixty feet high, completes the junction of the Tweedmouth with the Berwick Station. The entire cost of the viaduct, amounting to about £200,000, was borne by the York, Newcastle, and Berwick Railway Co., now the North-Eastern. The Tweed viaduct is perhaps the largest stone viaduct in the kingdom. Some similar structures may be longer, but less in height; and others may be higher, but not of such length. The last arch of this magnificent bridge was keyed on the 26th March, 1850, by the wife of the resident engineer. The country around here is generally flat, but well suited to agricultural purposes; and some fine views are to be obtained in the neighbourhood. The public erections, besides those appropriated to divine worship, are the much admired town-hall, the exchange, the barracks, the fine bridge before mentioned, and the railway viaduct; while the solid ramparts of the town, and a noble pier of great length, form fashionable and salubrious walks. The old prison at the town-hall being found inconvenient and inadequate to its purpose, a new gaol has been erected at the top of Church-street, on a spacious site. The exportation of coal from the numerous mines in the neighbourhood, forms an important feature in the commerce of the port, while that of grain, and salmon caught in the tweed (the latter sent to London market), are nearly equally profitable. The principal fishing station is from the mouth of the river Norham, a distance of seven miles; the season commences on the 15th of February, and terminates the 15th October. There are some capital inns in Berwick—the 'Kings' Arms,' the 'Red Lion,' the 'Salmon,' and the 'Railway Inn,' may be referred to as complete and comfortable establishments. The port enjoys the privilege of the warehousing act, passed the 6th of George IV, and is now a bonded port for the reception of timber, wines, and colonial produce. Three newspapers, the 'Berwick Advertiser,' the 'Warder,' and the 'Journal,' are published here weekly, on Friday.

The borough previous to the operation of the Municipal Reform Act, was governed by a charter, granted by James I; the late enactment vested the government in a mayor, six aldermen, bailiffs, and eighteen councillors, with a recorder and the usual assistant officers, under the style of 'the Mayor, Bailiffs, and Burgesses of the Borough of Berwick-upon-Tweed;' the same act divided the borough into three wards, and provided it with a commission of the peace: the mayor and bailiffs have the authority of sheriffs; and aldermen who have served the office of mayor are magistrates for life. A gaol delivery is held quarterly, if necessary, for the trial of capital offences; general sessions are held four times a year; the mayor and bailiffs, as lords of the manor, hold courts leet and baron twice in the year; and Berwick is included in the first Circuit of County Court towns under the acts for the recovery of debts not exceeding £50. The limits of the borough are defined by the Boundary Act, to comprise the parish of Berwick, and the respective townships of Tweedmouth and Spittal; the same act appoints Berwick one of the polling stations at the election of representatives for the northern division of the county of Northumberland. The borough was first represented in the English parliament in the reign of Henry VIII., since which time it has continued to send two members.

The church of the Holy Trinity is a flat roofed Gothic pile, begun in 1648 and finished in 1652; from being destitute of either tower or spire it has a rather singular appearance, but in the days of the commonwealth these were deemed unnecessary ornaments. The benefice is a vicarage, in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Durham. The tomb-stones in the church-yard, from their great number, strike the stranger with surprise, and are apt to impress him with the idea that the town is unhealthy; but the number of these mementos proceeds merely from the cheapness at which monuments can be erected. The other places of worship are the 'high meeting house' and the 'low meeting house,' both in connection with the Church of Scotland; others for Presbyterians, Baptists, Methodists, and Roman Catholics. Many valuable schools are in Berwick; six were founded by the corporation for the education of burgesses children of both sexes; there is also a Latin grammar school, in connection with the corporation, a charity school, supported by various bequests, a school of industry, others upon the National plan, and Sunday schools. A number of benevolent institutions are well supported, including an excellent dispensary for the gratuitous relief of the sick poor, and a public library. The weekly market is on a Saturday, and one for fat cattle every alternate Monday. A fair is held on the last Friday in May, for horses and cattle; and there are statutes or 'hirings' for servants on the first Saturdays in March and May. The town and parish contained in 1851, 10,294 inhabitants, and in 1861, 8,613.

Tweedmouth is a parochial chapelry—now forming a part of the borough of Berwick—in Islandshire, and connected with the county of Durham. It is situated at the south end of the bridge, about a quarter of a mile from Berwick, and consists of several streets, irregularly built, but the general appearance of the place has been much improved of late years. The North-Eastern station is situated at the eastern end of the town. The inhabitants are extensively engaged in the salmon fishery; and the other branches of trade, exports and imports, are of the like nature with those in Berwick—there are besides two extensive iron foundries. The corporation of Berwick are lords of the manor of Tweedmouth. The places of worship are a chapel of Ease, and a large and commodious meeting-house, in connection with the Church of Scotland, together with others for the various denominations of dissenters. Population of the chapelry, in 1851, 5,714, and in 1861, 5,414.

Spittal, a populous village in the parish of Tweedmouth, about three quarters of a mile from Berwick, and comprised in that parliamentary borough, is situate at the mouth of the river, and is chiefly inhabited by fishermen and colliers. The curing of herrings is carried on here extensively; large quantities of coal are exported; there is a considerable iron foundry, belonging to John and Alexander Robertson & Co., who have also extensive works at Tweedmouth; and a manufactory of spades and shovels, belonging to Messrs. T. Black and Sons. Many good houses have been built for the accommodation of visitors, who resort hither for sea-bathing. There is also a valuable mineral spa, the waters of which contain fixed air, iron, and a portion of sulphuric acid. A United Presbyterian Chapel is in the village. The population, in 1861, was 1,768.

Ancroft is a parochial chapelry in Islandshire, county of Durham, but situated locally on the north of the county of Northumberland, adjoining Berwick. The village of Ancroft is supposed to have been of much greater extent than at present, from numerous foundations of houses having been discovered in an adjacent field. The church, a very ancient edifice, was formerly a chapel of ease to the curacy of Holy Island; the living is now a perpetual curacy, in the patronage of the Bishop of Durham. There is also a place of worship for English Presbyterians. The chapelry contained in 1851, 1,183 inhabitants, and in 1861, 2,113.

Scremerston is a village, four miles from Berwick, containing an extensive coal mine, a brick and tile manufactory, belonging to Messrs. Johnston & Co., and lime works. The church is dedicated to Saint Peter. Population in 1861, 1,227.

Norham is a populous village in the parish of its name, situate seven miles and a half w. from Berwick. It consists chiefly of one long wide street, with a green in its centre, on which stands a cross. The houses are well-built and very respectable, and the land around is very productive and well cultivated. A bridge crossing the Tweed connects it with Berwickshire, and at Horncliffe it is also connected by a very neat suspension bridge. The church, dedicated to St. Cuthbert, is very ancient, the original one being built in 840, the middle aisle is the only portion of that remaining; this church had anciently the privilege of sanctuary for thirty-seven days. The living is a vicarage in the gift of the dean and chapter of Durham. There are also places of worship for the Free Church and United Presbyterians. The ancient castle of Norham stands on an eminence a short distance from the village, the extent of the ruins show that the fortress had formerly been of great strength and importance. The tower is still standing, though much delapidated, and consists of four stories, seventy feet high, with many vaults or prisons which are yet entire. The grounds surrounding it are now cultivated as a market garden.

Population of the parish in 1861, 3,783, of which number 919 belong to the village.

CHIRNSIDE, CHIRNSIDE BRIDGE, AND ALLANTON.

CHIRNSIDE is a parish of about 5,594 acres lying in the eastern part of the Merse, on the northern side of the Whiteadder, and extending four miles in length by about three in breadth. The village is 50 miles E. by S. from Edinburgh, 13½ N.N.E. from Greenlaw, 9 N.W. from Berwick, and 6 N. from Dunse. It consists of two streets, the buildings of which are for the most part detached and straggling, and extend nearly a mile in length. The upper part of the village is now greatly improved by the erection of several good stone houses; the introduction of gas, and a supply of water brought from about a mile distant. The places of worship are a church of the Establishment, an United Presbyterian Chapel, and a Cameronian Meeting House. From the hill on which the village is situated a fine view of many miles of fertile and well cultivated country, interspersed with many gentlemen's seats is obtained, the view to the south being bounded by the Cheviot hills. The estate of Ninewells, the family seat of the Humes, is in this neighbourhood, and David Hume, the celebrated historian, though born in Edinburgh, was, from his infancy, brought up in this parish, which may therefore proudly claim him as its own, the mansion is at present occupied by Sir John Pringle, Baronet. Some vestiges of ancient encampments are discernable in this district.

Less than a mile to the west of the village is the pretty rural hamlet of CHIRNSIDE BRIDGE, where a good bridge crosses the Whiteadder, and over which also the railway is carried by means of another bridge, a handsome structure of stone. Upon the banks of the river a species of gypsum is found, and in other parts of the district abundance of marl is obtained.

At ALLANTON, a delightful little rural village, in the parish of COLDINGHAM, is one mile from Chirnside, and seven from Dunse, two rivers, the Blackadder and Whiteadder, unite, and here a neat stone bridge crosses the mingled streams. Blackadder House, the seat of Sir George Houston Boswall, is in the centre of the village.

COCKBURNSPATH.

IS a parish, of about 12,952 acres, on the sea-coast—the village being 35¾ miles E. from Edinburgh, 21 N. from Greenlaw, 14 N. from Dunse, 8 S.E. from Dunbar, and 21 N.W. from Berwick, situate on the road between the two last named towns, and on the line of the North British Railway. The shore is precipitous, presenting a line of cliffs about one hundred feet above the level of the sea: behind the cliffs, the ground rises gently toward the hills, having many deep glens, or ravines' whose sides are sometimes sloping and covered with verdure, but the general appearance is rocky, with overhanging woods. Over one of these ravines, cut by the tortuous course of the Pease-burn, is thrown "the Peaths,' or Pease-bridge, planned and erected by Mr. Henderson, in 1786; it is one hundred and twenty-three feet from the bottom of the Pease-burn, which flows beneath—three hundred feet in length, and fifteen in width; it is looked upon as a masterpiece of architecture, in former days it was understood to be one of the highest bridges in the world, and is consequently an object of peculiar attraction to the curious visiting these parts. Nearly a quarter of a mile west of the bridge are the remains of an ancient castle, distinguished by no other appellation than that of the 'old tower.' As this parish is near the boundary of the two kingdoms, many traces of camps are visible on the rising grounds, and indellible proofs of military operations of former days arrest the eye in the passes. The ruins of the church of Auld Cambus, formerly united with this parish, are still standing. A church of the Establishment, a Free church, and a Secession chapel, are the present places of worship. There is also a very handsome school-house.

COLDINGHAM.

COLDINGHAM is a parish of about 24,325 acres, lying on the coast of the German ocean—the village, a burgh of barony, is 45 miles S.E. of Edinburgh, 21 N.N.E. of Greenlaw, 17 S.E. of Dunbar, 13 N.N.E. of Dunse, 11 N.N.W. of Berwick, and 4 from Ayton. It is charmingly seated upon a small eminence in the centre of a fine valley, at a short distance from the sea, near to ST. ABB'S HEAD, a noted point of land projecting into the sea. A lighthouse was in 1862 erected on this point. Its antiquity is unquestionably great, for it is distinctly pointed out in Ptolemy's map of Britain under the Roman sway, and in this respect surpasses Berwick and other more considerable towns whose existence is not authenticated for some ages posterior. About a mile west from St. Abb's is Coldingham Loch, it is of a triangular figure, upwards of a mile in circumference, and two hundred and fifty feet above the level of the sea, covering about thirty acres. On the top of Earnsheugh, four hundred yards north of the loch, are the ruins of two oblong British camps, called the TUNLAW i.e. the TOWNLAW, in order to distinguish them from other camps beyond Moorburn, called OATLOW i.e. OUTERLAW. On the south side of the town are the ruins of the once magnificent and well-endowed priory of Coldingham, rebuilt by King Edgar, who personally assisted at its consecration: all that now remains of it is the east gable and north side (which form part of the modern parish kirk), with a few straggling fragments, including a small Saxon arch, part of the palace said to have been erected here by the royal founder of the priory. At one time this religious house stood at the head of such establishments in Scotland, and was famed far and wide for its wealth and importance. When the church of the priory was destroyed, its fine-toned bell, according to tradition, was carried off to Lincoln. So early as the seventh century a nunnery was settled here, but of what order is unknown, in which St. Ebba, the daughter and sister of kings, became abbess in 670. The history of no religious house would throw so much light on the bloody scenes and misgovernment of Scotland from the fourteenth to the seventeenth century, as this priory, were its history carefully written. The priory has undergone great improvements; the west portion being rebuilt in the same style of architecture as that of the original building, and the south wall also, in a style approaching to the ancient, but without its decorations; the corner towers were carried up, as they were supposed originally to have existed; the roof to a considerable extent was renewed, the ceiling having been replaced with polished stained wood, in imitation of oak; in addition to all these improvements, a handsome gate-way was erected. The cost of the improvements was about £2,200, which was defrayed by the munificence of the crown and the liberality of the heritors. Fast Castle, in this neighbourhood, is supposed to be the place described as 'Wolf's Craig,' in the novel of 'The Bride of Lammermoor.' The village consists of two or three humble streets, with a cross in the centre. The principal occupation of the inhabitants is herring fishery, at Coldingham shore, about a mile distant from the village.

POST OFFICE, COLDINGHAM, Thomas Renton, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Ayton by messenger) at half-past eight morning, and half-past twelve noon, and are despatched thereto at twenty-five minutes past four afternoon, and at ten night.—On Sundays at five minutes before two afternoon.

COLDSTREAM,

WITH THE PARISHES AND VILLAGES OF ECCLES, BIRGHAM, LEITHOLM, CORNHILL, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

COLDSTREAM is a market town and burgh of barony, in the parish of that name; 47 miles S.E. from Edinburgh, 14 S.S.W. from Berwick, 10 S.E. from Greenlaw, the like distance S. from Dunse, and 9 N.E. from Kelso, situated on the north bank of the Tweed, and formerly derived importance from a ford on that river; by this passage Edward I. entered Scotland, with his forces, in 1296; and many other English and Scottish armies, before the union of the crowns, made their way by this facility to ravage the country of their respective enemies. It was last used by a Scottish army as an entrance into England in 1640, when the covenanters found it necessary to have recourse to that extreme measure against Charles I. The Tweed is crossed at this place by a strong bridge of freestone, erected by Smeaton, in 1768, consisting of seven arches, including two for abutments, which forms a main link of communication between the two nominal divisions of the island; it is placed at the distance of a furlong from the east end of the town: and from this spot a very delightful view, up and down the woody banks of the river, presents itself. This neighbourhood is the the scene of Sir Walter Scott's poem of Marmion, a tale of Flodden. The town is irregularly built, quite Scottish in its appearance, notwithstanding its proximity to England, while its border situation at one time rendered it eligible to participate with Gretna-green in the clandestine matrimonial trade. During the winter season Coldstream is much resorted to by nobility and gentry for fox-hunting; the packs of the Earl of Wemyss and the Duke of Buccleuch meet regularly in the neighbourhood.

The town is governed by a baron baillie and commissioners of police for the burgh; Justice of peace small debts courts are held monthly, and sheriff's courts four times a year. The trade here is not extensive, and manufactures are not seated in this locality. Two proprietary banking establishments have branches here. There are several respectable fire and life insurance agencies, and some good inns; amongst the latter the Newcastle Arms, Black Bull, and Commercial Hotels may be noticed. A Mechanics' Institution, erected in High Street, in 1863, at a cost of £1,200, contains a large lecture room, library, reading room, &c., the funds for its erection was raised partly by subscriptions and donations. The places of worship are an Established Church, a Free Church, a meeting-house for United Presbyterians, and one for the Catholic Apostolic Community. At the east end of the town, erected by the friends of Charles Majoribanks, Esq., M.P. for Berwickshire is a handsome memorial to record the successful result of the contested election for this county in 1832. General Monk resided at Coldstream at the critical period when he awaited a favourable opportunity to advance into England, make a decisive impression by the presence of his army, and at once effect the restoration. During the winter of 1659-60 he raised here a regiment, which was, therefore, and has ever since been denominated the 'Coldstream Guards.' Previous to the Reformation, this place could boast of a rich priory of Cistercian nuns, but of the building not even a fragment or vestige is now to be discovered. The parish contains about 5,834 acres. The weekly market, formerly held on Thursday, is now discontinued. A market for cattle is held on the first Monday in each month, and fairs for cattle are held on the last Thursdays in July and September.

The village of ECCLES is nearly six miles from Coldstream, in a highly cultivated parish of that name; the latter extending nearly eight miles in length by six in breadth, lying to the west of Coldstream and bordering the river Tweed. It contains about 12,489 acres. The surface of the country is in general level, the soil rich, and the grounds are well enclosed. There was once a nunnery of great magnitude and repute in the parish. This religious edifice, however, has shared the fate of the one that existed at Coldstream. The farm of 'Deadriggs,' in this district, was formerly the scene of a desperate battle, and a stone which rises nine feet above the surface of the ground, is said to mark the grave of one of the Percies who fell in the contest. BIRGHAM and LEITHOLM, two small villages in this parish, is where the principal retail business of it is carried on.

CORNHILL is a neat small village in the parish of its name: formerly it was a part of North Durham, from which it was separated by act of parliament in 1844, and united with the county of Northumberland; it is situated one and a half miles from Coldstream. The Kelso branch of 'The North Eastern Railway' intersects the village and has a station. The soil of the parish is rich and fertile, and in a high state of cultiva-

ion. The church, dedicated to St. Helen, formerly a chapel of ease to Norham, is a neat structure in the early English style, it was first erected probably in 1082, but was rendered a distinct benefice in 1730, the living is a perpetual curacy in the gift of the Dean and Chapter of Durham. From the parsonage house, a beautiful view of the Tweed presents itself, and in the distance may be seen the celebrated Flodden Field. A commodious inn and posting house is in the village. Fairs are held on the first Monday in March (for hiring), and for lambs, cattle, &c., on the 6th July and 26th September.

CRANSHAWS,

ABBEY SAINT BATHANS, BUNKLE, WITH PRESTON, ELLEM FORD AND LONGFORMACUS.

CRANSHAWS is a small, thinly populated parish, of about 8,738 acres, lying amongst the Lammermoor hills, and intersected by the parish of Longformacus; it is about 30 miles E. by S. from Edinburgh, 15 S.E. from Haddington, and about 10 N.W. from Dunse. The old castle of Cranshaws is an ancient edifice of great strength, and still entire: it is the residence of David Patterson, Esq. The remains of many encampments shew, what both traditionary and historical records testify, that this part of the country has been the scene of much bloodshed and strife.

The parish of ABBEY SAINT BATHANS is seven miles from Dunse, also situated in the midst of the Lammermoor hills. The soil is light and dry, and on the banks of the Whiteadder, fertile and well cultivated; but the hilly district is barren and covered with heath. The remains of an ancient abbey of Bernardines, founded in 1170, and dedicated to Saint Bathan, by one of the Countesses of March, form the only object of interest or curiosity in the parish.

BUNKLE and PRESTON is a united parish, forming a square of nearly six miles, and containing about 9,256 acres. The soil on the high lands, towards the Lammermoor hills, was at one time thin, dry, and poor; but by the application of lime and marl, it has been much improved. The rest of the parish, particularly on the banks of the Whitadder, is a fertile loam, and well cultivated. During the thirteenth and fourteeth centuries, the lands in the parish of Bonkill (then so called) were in the possession of a family of the same name; in the wars of the Bruce, Sir Alexander de Bonkill is frequently noticed; one of his female descendents marrying Sir John Steward, had a son, who was created Earl of Angus in 1329; this title in 1377 merged in the family of Douglas—and they, in addition to the title of Earls of Angus, are sometimes called Lords of Bonkill.

LONGFORMACUS parish, likewise in the Lammermoor district, is hilly and for the most part pastoral, but the low grounds are well cultivated; it is about twelve miles in length, and six in breadth, and contains about 19,604 acres. The village, which is about seven miles from Dunse, has been improved lately by the erection of several neat cottages, a school, and residence for the master. An Established church and one for a Free congregation are the places of worship. Two strikingly fine conical hills called the 'Derrington Laws,' rise in this parish, and form a conspicuous object in the distance. ELLEM FORD, three miles from Longformacus, is in the same parish, and is much frequented in the summer season by anglers and sportsmen, who find accomodation at a neat small inn.

POST RECEIVING HOUSE, at Robert Laurie's, CRANSHAWS.—Letters arrive by the messenger from Dunse to Longformacus about half-past nine morning, and are despatched about seven morning; this messenger collects and delivers letters on his route also for Abbey Saint Bathans.

DUNSE,

WITH THE PARISHES AND VILLAGES OF EDROM, GAVINTON IN LANGTON, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

DUNSE is a burgh of barony, and the largest town in the shire (Berwick not being taken in as strictly belonging to the county); it is 45 miles E. by S. from Edinburgh, 15 W. from Berwick, 11 from Ayton, 8 N.N.E. from Greenlaw; and the Dunse branch of the North British Railway has a station about half a mile on the east side of the town. It lies nearly in the centre of the county, on a fine plane, under the southern skirts of Dunse Law, upon which beautiful hill, before the town was burned down, it formerly stood. Its present position is at the head of a plain twenty five miles long, encompassed on three sides by the Lammermoor ridge, the river Whiteadder running by it: this river, which produces the finest trout, affording ample sport for the angler. There are two or three fishing clubs, well supported. The scenery from Dunse Law may be classed as beautiful, and would well repay a short sojourn in the town by the tourist or visitor. Dunse is a place of high antiquity, but from its situation near the border, it was frequently destroyed by the English, before the succession of James to the throne of Elizabeth, on one of those occasions the town records were burned, so that no authentic account of its origin or early history has been transmitted to later ages. The present town is generally well-built, the streets lighted with gas, contain many well-furnished and handsome shops. The houses are well supplied with good water, and there are two excellent hotels. Several very neat villas have been lately erected in the suburbs, which are every year extending. There are four branch banking houses. The other principal business may be comprised in a brewery, several corn mills, a rope walk, and a good grain trade. The town is governed by a baillie, appointed by Mr. Hay, the superior; the feuars manage by a council of nine the property vested in them; and the police commissioners superintend the business of that department, and some other matters connected with the burgh. A justice of peace court is held on the first Tuesday of every month, and a sheriff's court six times in the year, at both of which debt claims of limited amount are adjudicated. The Town-hall, a fine Gothic building, standing in the centre of the market-place, was originally founded by the Earl of Moray, and the present edifice erected in 1816 by the feuars assisted by subscriptions. There are a Corn Exchange and County Buildings, in Newtown-street. The gaol is situated on Teindhill Green, on the north side of the town. The places of worship are the Parish church, an Episcopal church, a Free church, and three United Presbyterian churches, Parochial and Sunday schools, a Subscription library, a Masonic lodge, and some charitable societies are among the institutions maintained in Dunse. The learned and celebrated metaphysician and theologist, Joannes Duns Scotus, was born here in 1274, and died at Cologne in 1308. The Rev. Thomas Boston, author of the 'Fourfold State,' and other works—Abraham Robertson, LL.D., professor of astronomy at Oxford, and Thomas M'Crie, D.D., in Edinburgh, were likewise born here. Dunse castle, a fine modern mansion, in the castellated style, stands about half a mile north of the town. The ancient edifice was the stronghold of Randolph, Earl of Moray, the nephew and copatriot of Bruce; it is now the seat of William Hay, Esq.; the interior decorations of the house, and the paintings with which it is embellished, render it one of the finest residences in this district of Scotland. The parish of Dunse contains about 11,475 acres. The weekly market, a good one for grain in bulk, is held on Tuesday. Fairs on the first Thursday in June, the 26th of August, and 17th of November, or Tuesday after, for cattle and horses. There are also fairs for sheep on the fourth Wednesday in March, the third Wednesday in May, the second Wednesday in July, and the fourth Wednesday in September.

EDROM is a parish and village—the latter about three miles and a half east from Dunse; situated near the road leading from that town to Chirnside, and on the banks of the Whiteadder. The parish of Edrom, which is ten miles in length by six in breadth, containing about 9,634 acres, is watered by the Blackadder and Whiteadder streams; Dunse Spa, once celebrated for its mineral properties, is on the borders of this parish. Much of the soil is fertile, and produces excellent corn; but towards the hills it is moorish and shallow.

GAVINTON is a village in the parish of LANGTON, situated two miles from Dunse, and half a mile south of the site of the old village of Langton, which has entirely disappeared. The present village, which is neat and regular in its form, obtained its name from Mr. Gavin, the late proprietor of the estate of Langton, which includes nearly the whole parish; it now belongs to the Honorable Lady Elizabeth Pringle, a descendant of Mr. Gavin. Formerly the proprietor of Langton occupied a castle in Langton wood; but for the last century the family resided at the mansion here, Langton House, which is now (1866) in course of re-erection in the Elizabethan style of architecture. In a small chapel in Langton wood, between the years 1670 and 1689, the Presbyterians used to assemble for worship; and it was in this humble and secluded temple that Veitch, and some other eminent divines, occasionally preached. After the latter period it was used for a short time by the Episcopalians, after which it fell to decay, and not a trace of the building now remains. Upon the top of the hill, called Raecleughead, are the vestiges of an ancient British camp. There are now a neat church of the Establishment, a Free church, and a Parochial school in the village. The acreage of the parish of Langton, is about 7,151.

EARLSTOUN,

LEGERWOOD, REDPATH, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

EARLSTOUN (anciently Ercildoun) is a parish and village—the latter 31 miles S.E. from Edinburgh, 11 W. by N. from Kelso, 18 S.W. from Dunse, 15 N. from Jedburgh, 10 S.W. from Greenlaw, 8¼ N.E. from Galashiels, and 7 S. from Lauder. The situation of this village is at once rare and beautiful, being seated in a rich valley encompassed by hills of a moderate height, which are interspersed by thriving plantations, and in a state of high cultivation; the Leader river flows on the west of the parish, and the Eden on the east. At one time the trade of the village and its neighbourhood was confined to weaving certain fabrics for the Glasgow houses, and now there are a few respectable establishments employing a number of hands, the principal are Mr. W. Clendinnen, in the manufacture of furniture stripes, ginghams, winseys, &c.; Messrs. Wilson and Sons, in woollens, blankets, and tweeds. Part of the tower, which was the residence of Sir Thomas Learmont, (commonly called 'the Rhymer'), who flourished in the thirteen century, is still standing; a stone in the wall of the church bears this inscription in ancient characters—'Auld Rhymer's race lies in this place.' The seat of Cowden Knowes stands on the side of a hill, it is an ancient building, and the locality is famous in Scottish song. The parish contains about 10,010 acres. There are two fairs, on the 29th of June, and the third Thursday in October, for cattle and horses, and a cattle and sheep market, every alternate Saturday.

LEGERWOOD parish extends three miles in length by two and a half broad, and contains about 8,817 acres. Its elevated surface is well cultivated, being occupied by opulent and practically skilful farmers, and is adapted in general, both for crops and pasture. The village of Legerwood is three miles from Earlstoun, situate on a cross road off the thoroughfare through Lauderdale. BOONHILL, in this parish, was a signal station during the late war.

POST OFFICE, EARLSTOUN, William Crocket, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive (by messenger, from Melrose), at ten minutes before eleven, morning, and seven, evening. On Sundays at twenty minutes past eleven, and are despatched at twenty minutes past six, morning, and three afternoon. Sundays at six in the morning.

EYEMOUTH, AYTON, BURNMOUTH,
AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

EYEMOUTH is an ancient little seaport and burgh of barony, in the parish of its name; 50 miles E from Edinburgh, 21 N.E. from Greenlaw, the like distance S.E. from Dunbar, 20 N. from Coldstream, 13½ N.E. from Dunse, 8 N. from Berwick, and three from Ayton station on the North British railway. It lies at the mouth of the Eye, where that river discharges its waters into the North Sea, from which circumstance the town and parish takes its name. The port is a very ancient one, being known as such as early as the reign of Alexander II. when it was resorted to by the monks of that age as a commodious harbour for importing supplies for their establishment, and for shipping wool, hides, &c., in which they trafficked. Shipping can work into and out of the bay at all times of the tide, or lie at anchor in the haven, secure from all winds except the north and north-east, or when the passage cannot be effected up the Frith of Forth; and the port is occasionally frequented by wind-bound vessels. The herring fishery is a source of profitable employment to the greater part of the inhabitants, there being regularly employed 94 fishing boats for herring fishing, and 33 large decked boats for white fishing in winter, the produce from which has now reached the sum of about £35,000 per annum. Eyemouth was a great depot for smugglers; it is affirmed that at one time almost every house had secret cellars connected with it, wherein those engaged in the illicit trade concealed the goods and liquors landed here from the luggers, which frequented the harbour and neighbouring shores. The vigilence and energy of the preventive service, together with the judicious alteration of the duties, have, however, long since destroyed this illegitimate mode of acquiring wealth, and turned the trade of the town into more honourable and less hazardous channels. On a small promontory, which stretches out into the sea, there are the remains of a regular fortification, supposed to have been constructed by a French officer entrusted with the command of the Queen Regent's troops.

A Church of the Establishment, a Free Church, an Evangelical Church, and chapels for Primitive Methodists, United Presbyterians, and a Baptist meeting-house, are the places of worship. The St. Abb's Lodge of Master Masons and the Land of Cakes Royal Arch Chapter, hold their meetings here, in a neat lodge-room, formed in 1757: it was in this room that Burns the poet, was initiated in masonry. The parish of Eyemouth contains about 1,080 acres. Fairs are held on the first Thursdays of June and October.

AYTON is a parish and village—the latter is two miles and a half a from Eyemouth, and eight N.W. from Berwick, occupying a delightful situation on the left bank of the Eye, on the main line of railway between Edinburgh and the south. The parish contains about 6,832 acres, and describes an area of about four miles each way, including about two miles of sea coast, which is here bold and rocky; more inland the soil is rich, producing all kinds of grain. Several vestiges of encampments are descernible through the parish, and urns, with pieces of broken armour, have been occasionally brought to the surface by the plough. A new church, the foundation stone of which was laid September 8th, 1864, has just been completed, near to the old one, which for many years past has been falling into decay. It is in the English Gothic style of the fourteenth century, with a lofty tower and spire, and contains sittings for near 800 persons. The cost was about £7,000, to which sum Mr. Innes was a liberal contributor. A handsome chapel has also been lately erected, in lieu of one of the two Presbyterian places of worship. A justice of the peace court is held here monthly, and a sheriff's court for the recovery of small debts is held four times a year. Population of Ayton in 1861, 875: of the parish, 2,014.

BURNMOUTH is a small fishing village, having an harbour situated at the foot of an almost perpendicular ledge of rock; the cottages standing near to high water mark, give it a very romantic appearance. The heights in the vicinity afford very beautiful and varied scenery, extending to the Eildons on the south, Lammermoor on the west, and Bamborough on the East, the north being the ocean. It is about two and a half miles from Ayton, and six from Berwick. It is a coast guard station, and there is a railway station close to the entrance to the village on the North British line. The parochial school in connection with Ayton is close to the village, but there is no place of worship. Thirty-four boats are regularly employed and stationed here for herring fishing, and eight of a larger class for white fishing in the winter season.

FOULDEN AND MORDINGTON.

FOULDEN is a parish and village—the latter one of the prettiest little places in the county, is a burgh of barony, 52 miles E. by S. of Edinburgh, 10 E. of Dunse, and 5 N. W. of Berwick; pleasantly situated on the north side of the Whiteadder river, which is here confined between steep banks. Within the last eighteen years, the dwellings have been nearly all re-built in a neat and picturesque style. John Wilkie, Esq., is superior of the burgh. The parish, which lies in the eastern part of the Merse district, is two miles and a half in length by two in breadth; bounded by Ayton on the north, and Hutton on the south, and contains about 3,298 acres.

The parish of MORDINGTON lies in the south-eastern corner of the county, and the kirk is about one mile from Foulden. It was in the mansion-house of Mordington that Cromwell, when he passed the Tweed for the first time, established his quarters. It has been erroneously asserted that the Princess Margaret was married to James IV. in Lamberton church (now in ruins), in this parish. At the boundary of the parish, with the liberties of Berwick is the toll-bar and hamlet of LAMBERTON: and at this place (within the Scottish border), marriages were solemnized in the same summary manner, and on precisely the same principle, as they were at better known Gretna. The remains of a Danish camp—Edrington castle situate at the top of a steep rock, and 'the Witches' Know,' 649 feet high, where, little more than a century ago, several unfortunate women were burnt for witchcraft—are objects not unworthy the notice of the traveller journeying through this quarter of the county. Ironstone some years ago was discovered within the parish, and subsequently coal has been got on the estate of John Campbell Renton, Esq., of Mordington House. The parish contains about 3,070 acres.

POST OFFICE, FOULDEN, Robert Scott, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive (by Messenger from Berwick), Sundays excepted, at half-past eleven, morning, and are despatched thereto at one, afternoon.

GREENLAW, GORDON AND HUME.

GREENLAW is a burgh of barony, and considered (although Dunse is considerably larger) the county town of Berwickshire, it is 37 miles S.E. from Edinburgh, 20 W. from Berwick, 12 E. from Lauder, 7½ S.W. from Dunse, and 10 N.W. from Coldstream. It is situated in a valley, on the north bank of the Blackadder, which stream is crossed by two bridges, and consists of one long street, with a large square or green, in front of the County buildings, where the fairs are held. After Berwick was taken by the English, the sheriff and county courts were transferred, first to Old Greenlaw (which was one mile to the south, but of which no vestiges remain), and subsequently to the present town, where they have been held ever since, except for a short time during the turbulent reign of Charles I., when they held their sittings at Dunse. Being seated near the centre of the shire, Greenlaw was by royal charter in 1596, and by act of parliament in 1696, ordained the head burgh of the county. A sheriff court and one for the recovery of small debts are held monthly; the justices' court sits at Dunse. The old gaol and courthouse, which stood in the churchyard, have been superseded by the present strong and handsome prison and elegant County buildings, erected in 1831, at the sole expense of, and presented to the shire by the late Sir W. P. H. Campbell.

The parish of Greenlaw lies in the centre of the Merse, extending seven or eight miles in length, from north to south, and on an average about two miles in breadth, containing about 12,200 acres. The surface of the land is for the most part level, rising occasionally into slight detached eminences. Sheep-walks, moor, and soil adapted to turnips, are the main characteristics of the land. Besides the Established church, there are places of worship for Free church and United Presbyterian congregations. A cattle fair is held on the 22nd of May, and another on the last Thursday in October.

GORDON village is five miles from Greenlaw, on the road from Edinburgh to Kelso. The river Eden intersects the parish, which extends seven miles in length by from two to four in breadth, and contains about 9,739 acres. At Castles, resided, as is believed, the ancestors of the present Duke of Gordon; and Huntly and Huntlywood, the names of two farms in the parish, claim the honour of giving the title of Marquess of Huntly to his Grace's eldest son. Greenknowe tower, a venerable structure (now the property of James Dalrymple, Esq.), was frequently had recourse to as a place of refuge by the inhabitants, who fled thither when suddenly surprised by the incursions of the English, prior to the union between the two kingdoms. An Established church and a Free church are the places of worship.

HUME is a small village, situate three miles south from Greenlaw: it is a joint parish with STICHEL (Roxburgshire.) The remains of Hume Castle, noted during the contentions on the borders, stands on a bold eminence, which commands extensive and picturesque views over the greatest portion of the Merse and Roxburgshire. The soil is very rich and fertile, and in a high state of cultivation. The parish contains about 4,103 acres. A parochial school is in the village, and a burial ground, but no place of worship.

HUTTON AND PAXTON.

ARE two small, pleasant and rural villages in the parish of Hutton, and district of Merse, lying to the west of Berwick bounds, from which the parish is divided by the river Whiteadder. Hutton is situate about seven miles from Berwick, in the northern part of the parish, and Paxton five miles distant, is in the eastern quarter. The latter village is understood to have formed the locality of the song entitled 'Robin Adair.' The parish contains about 5,646 acres. The Tweed, which bounds Hutton parish on the south, is crossed by an elegant suspension bridge, called the Union-bridge, from a point near Paxton to a place a little below HORNCLIFFE, a village in the county of Durham; it forms the only connexion of the two sides of the river between Coldstream and Berwick, from which last-named town it is frequently visited by parties of pleasure; it admits two carriages abreast, and has been of great service in facilitating the introduction of coal and lime into Berwickshire. At Hutton a handsome new church was opened for divine service in April, 1835. The late Rev. P. Redpath, the erudite translator of Bœthius, was minister of this parish.

LAUDER,

WITH THE VILLAGES OF BLAINSLIE, CHANNELKIRK, OXTON, AND THIRLESTANE.

LAUDER is an ancient royal burgh, the seat of a presbytery, and the capital of its parish, as it is of the district of Lauderdale; 25 miles S.E. of Edinburgh, 35 W. of Berwick, 21 N. of Jedburgh, 22 S.W. of Coldstream, 20 S.W. of Dunse, 17 N.W. of Kelso, 12 W. of Greenlaw, 7 N. of Earlstoun, and about 6 miles from the Stow station, on the North British railway. It is situated in the vale of the Leader, on the main road from Edinburgh to Kelso, and consists principally of a line of houses on each side of the thoroughfare, with an additional street about the centre, at the west end of which is the town-house. The buildings are plain, and of irregular construction; and the town was destitute of any edifice that could lay claim to particular notice, until of late years. Now there are good school premises, neat and substantial houses, an excellent inn (the 'Black Bull'), in the centre of the town, two banks, and a few tasteful villas in the neighbourhood. The trade is chiefly of a local and domestic nature, and manufacturers have not as yet imparted their benefits to this part of the district. The banks and the inns, several insurance agency offices, and some well stored shops, represent the main business of the place. A Freemason's lodge is held in the Town Hall. The charter constituting Lauder a royal burgh, was renewed in 1502, and the government vested in two baillies, and seven councillors, chosen annually from amongst the freemen of the burgh. A justice of peace court is held on the third Friday in February, April, June, August, October and December: and sheriff's small debt courts are held on the Wednesday before the last Thursdays in March, July and October. By the reform act, it is joined with Haddington, Dunbar, North Berwick and Jedburgh, in returning one member to parliament. The places of worship are a Church of the Establishment, a Free Church, and a Presbyterian meeting-house. The church, which stands to the south of the town-house, was erected in 1673, when the Duke of Lauderdale removed the more ancient church from the vicinity of his residence; the edifice, though cruciform, is not remarkable for elegance. The most conspicuous object in and about Lauder is Thirlstaine

Castle, a massive and spacious mansion, surrounded by a park and some fine wood, and is the seat of the family of Lauderdale. The castle stands between the Leader and the town, on a fine lawn, is fitted up in the best taste of the time of Charles II., and decorated with massive balustrates and cornices, and a profusion of elaborately carved marble chimney-pieces; among the paintings, chiefly portraits, are some rare and valuable productions. The parish of Lauder contains about 34,981 acres. Fairs are held on the first Tuesday in March, for hinds and herds; sixth Tuesday after first Tuesday in March, for servants; Friday before the twelfth of August for lambs; and fourth Friday in October, for servants.

BLAINSLIE is a small rural village in the parish of Melrose (Roxburghshire), situated at the extreme end of the parish, and about seven miles from the town of Melrose. It lies on the old road from Earlstoun to Lauder, 4 miles distant from the former place, and 2½ from the latter, from whence its letters are delivered.

The parish of CHANNELKIRK, containing about about 14,203 acres, is situated among the Lammermoor hills, where they divide the counties of Edinburgh and Haddington from Berwickshire. On the banks of the rivulets, which, united form the river Leader (or Lauder), are about three thousand acres in tillage; but the hills are mostly covered with heath, and are very bleak and unproductive.

The village of UGSTON (now called OXTON), is about four miles from Lauder, on the south of the Edinburgh road, in the upper part of the vale of the Leader. Oxton is now the only village in the parish, and in it, the little business or trade that has existence throughout its entire extent, is almost exclusively centred. About a mile to the west of Oxton, are the remains of the village of CHANNELKIRK, from which the parish takes its name—the minister's manse and church are all that remains of the village, which at one time was a resting place for travellers by the old Edinburgh road, through the Lammermoors to Lauderdale. Population in 1851, 721, and in 1861, 671.

POLWARTH AND FOGO.

POLWARTH is a parish of about 3,013 acres, in the district of Merse—the village, now almost decayed, is 40 miles from Edinburgh, four from Dunse, and about three and a half from Greenlaw, situated on the road between the two last named towns. It was formerly of much greater extent, and, from its connection with Scottish song, continues to the present day the most interesting locality in the district. On the green of Polwarth, in the centre of the village, it was an ancient custom for every new-married pair, with their company, to dance round an ancient thorn, the legend connected with which, according to Chambers, might furnish materials for a good romance. The estate of Polwarth formerly belonged to Sinclair of Hermandston, whose family, so far back as the fifteenth century, terminated in co-heiresses. It appears that the Misses Sinclair, of all their suitors, and they had many, preferred the sons of their powerful neighbour, Home, of Wedderburn, and it so happened, that the youngest sister was beloved by the eldest Home (George), whilst the eldest placed her affections on the youngest, whose name was Patrick. After the death of the father of the young ladies, they fell into the hands of an uncle, who, anxious to prevent their marriages, that he himself might become their heir, immured them in his castle, somewhere in Lothian. In this dilemma the fair prisoners contrived to get a letter transmitted to their lovers, by means of an old female beggar, and they were soon gratified with the sight of the two youths, accompanied by a determined band of Merse men, before the gate of their prison. The uncle made both remonstrance and resistance, but in vain, his neices was forcibly taken from him and carried off in triumph. Part of the nuptial rejoicing (for the marriage ceremony immediately ensued), consisted in a merry dance round the thorn which even at that early period, grew in the centre of the village. The lands of Polwarth were then divided between the two Homes; and while George carried on the line of the Wedderburn family, Patrick was the founder of the branch afterwards ennobled by the title of Marchmont. In commemoration of this remarkable affair, for many years, all future marriage parties danced round the thorn, and a tune seems to have been composed, of the name 'Polwarth on the Green,' to which songs have been successfully adapted. On the front of the parish church (an ancient building), which stands about a mile south-east of the village, is a Latin inscription, importing that it was erected anterior to the year 900. In the vault of this church, Sir Patrick Home, of Polwarth, afterwards the first Earl of Marchmont, and Lord Chancellor of Scotland, found an asylum from the fury of his persecutors, when a price was set upon his head, till arrangements were made for his escape to Holland, which he happily effected. The noble mansion of the late Earl of Marchmont, together with the estate, is now the property of Sir H. H. Campbell, Bart. and his lady has established an infants' school.

The parish of FOGO, which lies to the south of that of Polwarth, is intersected and watered by the Blackadder, upon the right bank of which stream (said to be so fatal to the salmon species) stands the little village of Fogo: and about a mile further up the river is the ancient diminutive hamlet of CHESTERS, reposing on the site of a Roman encampment. The parish is six miles in length, by between three and four in breadth, and containing about 4,669 acres; the land chiefly arable and fertile. A neat church and parish school are in the village.

RESTON,

AUCHENCROW, GRANT'S HOUSE, RENTON, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

RESTON and AUCHENCROW are two villages, pleasantly situated on the banks of the Eye, in the parish of Coldingham, the former being 3 miles from Coldingham, the same distance from Ayton, and about 9 from Dunse; the latter lying between Reston and Chirnside, about 2½ miles from each place. A station on the North British Railway is in the village of Reston. The places of worship are an Established Church, and one for members of the Free Church, both situate at HOUNDWOOD, a mile distant from Reston. A Parochial school is in Reston, and there is also a school in Auchencrow.

GRANT'S HOUSE is a village or hamlet in the same parish as the above, situated on the road to Edinburgh, 7 miles from Coldingham, 8 from Ayton, and 5 from Cockburnspath. The place derives its name from a person named Grant, the contractor for making the highroad to Edinburgh, who erected a cottage for himself, now called Grant's House Inn. From the circumstance of the North British Railway passing the village, it bids fair to be a compact little place RENTON is a small hamlet, a mile distant.

SWINTON, WITH SIMPRIN,

WHITSOME, LADYKIRK, AND HORNDEAN.

THE parish of SWINTON, to which that of SIMPRIN was united in 1761, is in the district of Merse, and contains about 5572 acres. The parish is intersected by the small river Leet, and near thereto is the neat village of Swinton, lying about 45 miles S.E. of Edinburgh, 12 S.W. of Berwick, and 6 N. of Coldstream. The small village of SIMPRIN is situated at the south-east corner of the parish. The estate of Swinton has been for upwards of seven hundred and fifty years the property of a family of that name, who originally acquired it as a reward for clearing the country of wild boars (or swine), whose mischievous and often ferocious depredations continually troubled and alarmed the inhabitants. The grant was afterwards confirmed by the royal ordinance of Malcolm Canmore, for the exertions of the Swintons in reinstating him on the throne. The celebrated Mr. Thomas Boston, author of the 'Fourfold State,' was for some time minister of Simprin. There are two annual fairs—one is held on the third Thursday in June, the other on the fourth Tuesday in October.

WHITSOME (including the abrogated parish of Hilton) is about four miles and a half long, and two and a half broad, and contains about 4897 acres. The land is principally composed of a deep rich clay, but there is some extent of marsh or oozy ground. The small village of Whitsome is situated nearly in the centre of the parish, at the distance of about three miles from Swinton.

The parish of LADYKIRK lies on the north bank of the Tweed, having the parish of Hutton on the north-east, and Whitsome and Swinton joining it on the west side; it extends about three miles along the margin of the river, with a breadth of from one to two, containing about 3447 acres. A bridge has been thrown across the Tweed here, constructed by subscription—a most valuable improvement to this locality, as fatal accidents frequently occurred by fording the river at this part. The church of Ladykirk, a venerable building, completely enshrouded in ivy, stands near the Tweed, about four miles from Swinton and nine from Berwick. Tradition ascribes its erection to the fourth James, in gratitude for his preservation from the violence of the flood when fording the river here at the head of his army. He dedicated the edifice to 'Our Lady,' hence denominated Ladykirk, which name was subsequently extended to the whole parish, previously designated Upsettington. The soil of the district is naturally good from its local situation; cultivation has made it rich and beautiful, and it is celebrated for the breed of cattle and sheep. The small village of HORDEAN belongs to this parish. An annual fair is held in Ladykirk on the 5th of April.

POST OFFICE, SWINTON, George Buchanan, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Coldstream) at half-past two afternoon, and are despatched at six morning.

Post Office, WHITSOME, John Turnbull, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive (by messenger from Chirnside), at a quarter before one noon (Sundays excepted), and are despatched thereto at a quarter before seven evening.

Post Office, HORNDEAN, Robert Trotter, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Berwick) per rail to Noram Station; thence by messenger, at half-past eleven morning (Sundays excepted), and are despatched thereto at five evening.

WESTRUTHER, HOUNDSLOW AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

WESTRUTHER, is a parish, chiefly in the Lammermoor district—the village, a small one, is 32 miles S.E. of Edinburgh, 8 from Lauder, 6 W. by N. from Greenlaw, and 5 N. from Gordon; situated on the road between Lauder and Dunse. The parish, which is six miles in length by four in breadth, and containing about 14,644 acres, is under the best process of husbandry. Spottiswoode—the fine residence of John Spottiswoode, Esq., is in this parish; Wedderlie—the seat of Lord Blantyre, is in the neighbourhood, and the ruins of Ively Castle, the walls of which are pretty entire, stand on the north eastern corner of the parish. It was one of those castellated mansions of residence and defence that were common on the borders before the union of the two crowns, in the reign of James VI. There are two places of worship—one under the Establishment, the other a Free Church. There are also a Free Church school, and a Parochial one. In this parish is the village of HOUNDSLOW, a straggling assemblage of dwellings. The land in the vicinity is of a barren nature, but great improvements have been made, and every year shows an increased extent under culture.

BUTESHIRE.

THE Islands of BUTE, ARRAN, GREAT and LITTLE CUMBRAY (or Cumbrae), HOLY ISLE, PLADDA, and INCH-MARNOCH, compose this shire, which comprises 171 square miles of land, 4 square miles of lake, and, by a recent calculation, about 30,000 acres of cultivated, and upwards of 70,000 of uncultivated ground. Though far separated from the properly denominated Western Islands, those of Bute statistically constitute a portion of the Hebrides. The northern extremity of Bute projects into the district of Cowal, Argyllshire; and the water division between the island and latter is often so slender, that vessels find a difficulty in navigating the straits, which have obtained the title of 'the Kyles of Bute.' The southern part forms the western shore of the Firth of Clyde. About the middle it is narrowed by the indention of bays on either side. The length of the island is fifteen, and its breadth averages five miles. Towards Cowal it is bleak and mountainous, but on the southern parts it consists of green fertile eminences or low hills, either affording excellent pasture, or capable, with low grounds, of being cultivated so as to produce fine crops of barley, oats, &c. The island altogether is distinguished for picturesque beauty, and both the botanist and the geologist will find it a rich field for their respective researches. The antiquary, also, will discover many relics of bygone days existing in the island; among others, the interesting ruins of Rothesay, East and West Kaines, and Kilmory Castles. Here, as on all the west coast of Scotland, there is little or no extent of sea-beach, in comparison with other shores; the marine border is in most places rocky, with several good natural harbours. On the south-eastern side, the island is clothed with fine plantations, raised by the taste of the late Marquis of Bute, and the family seat, Mount Stuart, an elegant modern mansion, lies on the woody slope facing the entrance to the Clyde.

The CLIMATE of Buteshire is eminently salubrious—neither mists nor noxious fogs, so prevalent in the east of Scotland, infest it; snow rarely lies on its hills, and the only qualification to its general genial character, is a liability to severe and sudden rains. In the interior, in a secluded situation, the late celebrated tragedian, Edmund Kean, erected a cottage, to which he purposed retiring from public life. The view of the island from the sea is enlivened by several other cottages on the different green declivities. Bute has for many years been the place of Summer resort, for sea-bathing and ruralization, of the fashionable mercantile gentry of the west, who congregate chiefly in and about Rothesay, its capital, and contribute materially to the vivacity of the place.

The large Island of ARRAN lies five miles south-west of Bute, and between the peninsula of Cantyre and Ayrshire: in form it approaches an oval, extending from north to south twenty miles, and in breath twelve. While Bute is mostly low and green, Arran is lofty and brown, with many heathy mountains, some of which exceed three thousand feet in altitute. A small portion of the lower grounds are cultivated, but the whole is essentially and characteristically pastoral. There are several remarkable caves: the most distinguished is that on the west, opposite to Campbeltown, called 'the King's Cave,' from its having afforded shelter to Robert Bruce, before he discomfited Baliol, and ascended the throne of Scotland: it is one hundred and twenty feet in length, sixty in height, and forty-eight in width. Arran belongs principally to the Duke of Hamilton, who has on the island an ancient though somewhat modernised seat, called Brodick Castle; it furnished the title of Earl to the chief of the house of Hamilton, who was regent during the minority of Mary Queen of Scots. The island comprehends two parishes, and its villages are Lamlash and Brodick. It was formerly famous for the excellence of its whiskey; and coal, freestone, and ironstone are said to lie beneath the surface of the soil. The beautiful little Island of INCH-MARNOCH, rising a few miles south-west of Bute, is about a mile in length; near its eastern shore are the ruins of a chapel dedicated to Saint Marnoch. The CUMBRAYS are two small Islands, lying in the Firth of Clyde, betwixt the isle of Bute and Ayrshire: the greater Cumbray lies highest up the Firth, and is two miles and a half in length, by a breadth of one and a half, distant from the coast of Ayrshire about two miles. The capital, and the only town on the island, is Millport, a neat little place on the north side, with a harbour. The island forms a parish, to which the lesser Cumbray is attached: this latter island is about a mile in length, by half a mile in breadth. These Cumbrays once belonged to the Norwegians, and were frequently the objects of contest with the Scots. Two-thirds of the larger Cumbray belong to the Earl of Glasgow, and the remainder is the property of the Marquis of Bute. The Earl of Eglingtoun is the owner of the lesser Cumbray.

The island of Bute at one time contained ten or twelve parish churches, and about thirty hermitages of religious men; the island has now but three parishes, and the shire altogether only seven. The constituency in 1866 was 510. The only royal burgh is Rothesay; the county is represented in parliament by one member. Bute gives the title of Marquis to the family of Stuart, a branch of the royal family of Scotland. The Marquis of Bute is descended in a direct line from Sir John Stuart, a son of Robert II, who, by his father's grant, became possessed of the island of Bute, with the heritable jurisdiction of the county, in which he was confirmed by a charter of his brother, Robert III. The family was elevated to an earldom in the person of Sir James, a privy councillor of Queen Anne, in 1703.

THE ISLE OF ARRAN,

INCLUDING THE PARISHES OF KILBRIDE, KILMORY, AND LOCHRANZA, AND THE VILLAGES OF BRODICK AND LAMLASH, WITH THEIR VICINITIES.

THE ISLE OF ARRAN has been partially described under the head of Buteshire, to which county it belongs. It is divided into three parishes, KILBRIDE, KILMORY, and LOCHRANZA, and its villages are LAMLASH and BRODICK. Kilbridge parish occupies about one-half of the island, on the east side, extending eighteen miles in length, by a breadth of from four to six. This parish, and others of the same name, are said to have derived their designation from Saint Bride or Bridget; and the fame of this sainted female seems to have been extended over the whole of Britain. The ruins of the old church of Kilbride are still remaining. The present edifice, which is situated in Lamlash, was erected in 1774. The anchorage in the bay of this village is reckoned the best in the west of Scotland; affording perfect security to vessels driven by stress of weather from the Irish channel. The haven forms a natural basin, with the high protecting rocky islet or Holy Island lying at its mouth. On the inner side of the bay is the village where there are three good inns. In this parish are some tall obelisks, which are supposed to be fragments of Druidical circles, or places of worship. The Duke of Hamilton is superior of the island; he munificently contributes a sum annually towards the repairs of the two packets on this station, as likewise for the support of a surgeon for the necessitous sick of the island.

At BRODICK a justice of the peace court is held on the first Monday of every month, for the recovery of small debts, and the punishment of misdemeanours and other petty offences, also a sheriff small debt circuit court quarterly.

The parish of KILMORY occupies about half the island of Arran, on its western side, and the kirk of Kilmory is situate on the southern extremity. Arran Castle, the seat of the Duke of Hamilton, is placed on a rocky bank, which rises from the north side of the bay of Brodick. The bank forms parts of a peninsular elevation or shoulder, projecting from the base of Goatfield [or Goatfell] mountain, which eminence rises nearly three thousand feet above the level of the sea, and overlooks the three kingdoms. Brodick village contains a good inn. The island is noted for its station as a herring fishery; in a good season, the value of the fish taken amounts to several thousand pounds, and a great number of the inhabitants are supported from this source of industry, whilst others are occupiers of small plots of land, in the cultivation of which they obtain subsistence. LOCHRANZA parish comprises the northern end of the island, and has recently been formed from parts of Kilbride and Kilmory. The climate of the island is considered highly salubrious, and the longevity of people is remarkable. A fair is held in Lamlash, on Lammas [old style], and at Brodick on the first Tuesday after the 20th of June, and another for horses, in the month of January.

MILLPORT, ISLE OF CUMBRAY.

THE ISLES of CUMBRAY (or Cumbrae) have been already noticed at a preceding page, in the description of Buteshire. Millport is a burgh, constituted in 1864, under the Act 23 and 24 Vic., cap. 96, and is governed by commissioners and a senior and two junior magistrates. It is chiefly resorted to for sea-bathing, being charmingly situated on the south side of the greater Cumbray, about four miles from Largs, in Ayrshire; between which town, as well as Ardrossan, Ayr, Greenock, and Glasgow, communication is maintained by means of a regular service of steam-packets. The excellent harbour and pier here present perfect convenience for the landing or embarkation of passengers. Ninety years ago this place possessed only one dwelling, the hut of a fisherman. The number of inhabitants in the two Cumbrays amount at the present time to about twelve hundred, of whom a considerable proportion are resident in Millport; and in the summer months, from the influx of visitors, a life and bustle is exhibited which forms an agreeable contrast to the quietude prevailing in other parts of the isles. The village is gas-lighted, a parochial board exists, a sheriff and small debts court is held in March and September, and a cricket club and choral society are established. Pleasantly situated on the shore is a beautiful marine pavilion, in the pointed style of architecture, belonging to the Dowager Countess of Glasgow. The Earl of Glasgow is owner of nearly two-thirds of the isle, the remainder belonging to the Marquis of Bute. The principal object of attraction is the Episcopal College and Church, a beautiful Gothic erection, situated on an eminence overlooking the town and bay; an elegant spire surmounts the church, the grounds are extensive and laid out in lawns, terraces, and parterres, which are adorned with the choicest flowers and shrubs; indeed everything evinces signs of the most correct taste. The college and church were opened in 1850 and 1851 respectively, and were founded and endowed by the Hon. George Frederick Boyle. It is purposed that the church and college shall eventually become the "Cathedral seat of the Isles" within the united dioceses. The other places of worship are a church of the Establishment, a plain edifice with a handsome quadrangular tower; a Free church, United Presbyterian church, and Baptist chapel. The parish school is kept in a very neat structure, and well attended. The inhabitants of these isles are a class remarkable for their industrious habits—chiefly fishermen and owners of their own boats. Some parts of the greater Cumbray are well cultivated, producing good wheat, and here and there may be seen some thriving plantations. On the western side of the lesser Cumbray is a lighthouse. This isle is the property of the Earl of Eglintoun.

ROTHESAY, KAMESBURGH, ASCOG, KINGARTH,
AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

ROTHESAY is a royal burgh, a town of great antiquity, and the capital of its parish; 96 miles W. from Edinburgh (by Mid-Calder), 40 S.W. from Glasgow, 18 from Greenock, 22 from Lamlash, in the Isle of Arran, 12 from the Cumbray, and 9 from Largs; finely situated at the head of a bay, called Rothesay, on the east side of the island of Bute, of which it is the capital, as well as of the shire. The origin of Rothesay was its castle, whose ruins yet exist, and the following are considered as some of the most remarkable particulars respecting it:—The first mention of it in history is in 1228, when it was besieged by Hushac, the Norwegian, in conjunction with Olave, King of Man, and taken after a stout resistance; having been recovered from the northern invaders, it was again taken by them about the year 1263, and retaken by the Scots shortly after the battle of Largs. It was seized by the English during the reign of John Baliol, but in 1311 it surrendered to Robert Bruce; in 1334, Edward Baliol took the castle, and fortified it; it soon afterwards, however, submitted to Bruce, the steward of Scotland. King Robert II visited this castle in 1376 and in 1381, he again visited it in 1392, and subsequently created his eldest son, Prince David, Duke of Rothesay, which has ever since been the principal Scottish title of the heir apparent. Additional facts are given in Mr. Wilson's admirable 'Guide to Rothesay,' to which we refer our readers.

The herring fishery, which has long been active here, caused a great revival in Rothesay, and stimulated the restoration of decayed buildings and the erection of new ones: fish curing is still carried on, but not to the same extent as formerly. Cotton spinning, and the manufacture of cottons and muslins by power looms, give employment to many hundreds of hands; there are several mills or factories in Rothesay, worked by steam and water power. Three branch banks and one for savings, and several comfortable hotels are in the town, The Queen's Hotel, in Argyle-street, and the Victoria, in Victoria-street, being the principal; they are all conducted in a manner satisfactory to their numerous visitants. The lodging houses are very numerous, and upon every scale. Two newspapers are published here every Saturday, the 'Buteman,' and the 'Rothesay Chronicle.' About a mile to the east of the town, is a sulutary mineral spring, very efficacious in cutaneous diseases; near this is Glenburn House Hydropathic establishment, belonging to William Paterson, Esq., M.D., M.R.C.S.L. Dr. Paterson studied the water treatment in Gräefenberg, under Priestnitz, the discoverer, and in 1843 opened this establishment. It is commandingly situated, and having been much enlarged, affords ample accommodation. A complete set of new baths have also been erected, embracing all modern improvements, for the treatment of various diseases. The chief revenue of the burgh is derived from the harbour dues, which in 1861 amounted to £1,056. The bay is very spacious, and the anchorage ground excellent; the present pier was erected in 1822, it has since been enlarged, and the harbour much improved and deepened, at a very considerable expense. In the east harbour, a new pier has also been erected to facilitate the landing of heavy goods. At TOWARD POINT, on the north-east side of the entrance to the bay, from the Frith of Clyde, stands a fine and conspicuous lighthouse, the beacon of which is revolving and intermitting. The battery is placed at BOGANY POINT, on the shore of the east bay, and is mounted with several pieces of cannon. In front of the east pier, an elegant fountain has been erected, as a memorial of the late Prince Consort, and another neat fountain is erected in Guildford-square. The town-hall and county buildings were rebuilt, at an expense of upwards of £4,000, raised by assessments on the county and burgh, and by subscriptions: they form a handsome pile, and are ornamented with an elegant castellated tower, containing a bell, and beautiful clock, having two transparent dials, which at night are illuminated; the clock was the gift of the late lamented Marquis of Bute: the edifice, comprising a spacious court room, in which the sheriff, burgh, and justice of peace courts are held, and the town and sheriff clerk's offices, with other requisite apartments. Beneath the court room is the prison. The Victoria Hall, a splendid building, near the Town Hall, was opened in 1858, and built by James M'Indore, Esq. at a considerable expense. The body of the hall is used for lectures, concerts, public meetings, &c. There are several good schools and academies in the town, amongst the latter is Rothesay Academy, Croft Lodge, West Bay, conducted by Mr. John Slack. Rothesay was erected into a royal burgh by Robert III, under charter dated 12th January, 1400; and its privileges were confirmed and extended by James VI, in 1584. The government of the town is vested in a provost, three baillies, a dean of guild, the town treasurer, and twelve councillors. The sheriff and commissary courts are held on every Tuesday and Friday, and that for the burgh on Friday during the session; a justice of peace court for the recovery of small debts, sits on the first Monday in every month. The quarter sessions are held on the first Tuesday in the months of March, May, and August, and the last Tuesday in October, and all criminal cases, for the circuit court justiciary, are tried at Inveraray. The list of places of worship will be found at the end of the directory of the town, and the educational establishments at the commencement.

In the neighbourhood of this respectable town there are many mansions of the nobility and gentry. About five miles south is Mount Stuart, the beautiful and romantic seat of the Marquis of Bute. In the same direction is Woodend, or (as it is more generally denominated), 'Kean's Cottage,' from having been built by that eminent tragedian; the house stands in a sweet retired spot, a little above the western shore of Loch Fad, whose waters are usefully employed in propelling the machinery of various mills.

The climate of Bute being very salutary, from its mildness, to those afflicted with pulmonary complaints, the faculty recommend numerous patients to the balmy influence of Rothesay. Four miles to the north east on the opposite shore of the bay, in Argyleshire, is Castle Toward, a massive modern edifice, erected by the late Kirkman Finlay, Esq. and now the residence of his son; the grounds contain the ruins of the ancient castle. In the neighbourhood of Mount-Stuart, an extensive vitrified fort has been discovered; and on the summit of a gentle eminence, called 'Chapel hill,' rising above Argyle-street, were the remains of the ancient chapel of Saint Bride, lately removed when improving the hill. The Bute Farmers' Society has done much for the agriculture and farm stock of the island, premiums and prizes are awarded at the annual show, which is held in Rothesay, in May. A nominal weekly market is held on Wednesday, and fairs on the first Wednesday in May, third Wednesday and the following Thursday in July, the last Wednesday in October, and Tuesday before Kilbarchan December fair—all chiefly for cattle.

KAMESBURGH, (formerly called Port Bannatyne) is situated full two miles north from Rothesay, and is a fish-curing station. This branch of industry is, however, not prosecuted extensively at the present time. The port possesses a small quay, and there are several well-furnished houses, the latter occupied principally by the families who make this pleasant village a summer retreat. Half a mile distant is the ancient Castle of Kames, the mansion of John Colquhoun, Esq. Nearly a mile to the west is the new church of North Bute, erected in 1836, at an expense of £1,000, defrayed by the Marquis of Bute; and between the village and ARDBEG POINT is a handsome Roman Catholic chapel.

ASCOG, about three miles S.E. from Rothesay, is situated on a lovely bay. There are many elegant mansions and neat villas here, and on a point of rock jutting out into the water, is a neat Free Church.

KERRYCROY hamlet, about a mile further, is pleasantly situated on SCOULAG BAY, the village forming a crescent round the strand, and having a comfortable inn. The entrance to Mount-Stuart policies commence here, and between the village and Ascog is an Assembly school.

KILCHATTAN village, about eight miles S. of Rothesay, is beautifully situated on a bay of the same name. Within a short distance is the parish church of KINGARTH, an elegant modern edifice. Half a mile from the east shore, are the remains of a druidical circle, and towards the west shore, and also near the N.E. shore of the bay, are several other interesting remains. In the neighbourhood of Kilchattan, is the curious promontory of GARROCHHEAD; about a mile to the south of this, in a quiet romantic dell, stands the remains of the church or chapel of Saint Blane, and about a mile south-west from Saint Blane's chapel, is the vitrified fort of Dun-na-goil.

CAITHNESS-SHIRE.

THIS is the most northerly county of Great Britain, lying on the north-eastern extremity of Scotland. It is bounded by the German Ocean on the east, by Sutherlandshire on the south and south-west, and the Pentland Frith on the north separates the mainland from the Orkney Islands. In figure the county approaches to that of a triangle, and is nearly forty miles in length, and about twenty-five in breadth at the middle: altogether it comprehends 487 square miles of land, 10 square miles of lake, 92,333 acres of land cultivated, and 347,347 acres uncultivated.

The EARLY HISTORY of this county is of little or no interest, owing to its distance from the central part of the kingdom. It was anciently inhabited by the Catinii, from whom the present appellation is supposed to be derived. The names of various places, and the monumental remains, indicate its having been the theatre of numerous petty exploits of the Danes and Norwegians. The ruins of Castle Sinclair and Gernego, the remains of old chapels, and other relics of antiquity, combine to prove that this district was inhabited at an early date. Caithness is an earldom in the family of Sinclair. This peerage is of remote antiquity: before the year 1450 it was enjoyed by three successive families, who lost it either by forfeiture or extinction; at length it was renewed in the person of William Sinclair, Earl of Orkney, a great-grandson, by the female line, of Robert II; he was made chancellor of Scotland in the reign of James II, and received a grant of the Earldom of Caithness. The Earldom of Orkney having been derived from the King of Norway, though confirmed by a Scottish monarch, was resigned to the Crown in the reign of James III. After a long period the title was revived, but not in the family of the Sinclairs of Caithness.

SOIL, SURFACE, PRODUCE, CLIMATE, &c.—The county is in general level, with a few mountains on the borders of Sutherlandshire, and some eminences of trifling altitude throughout. The soil is almost entirely argillaceous heavy land, lying upon horizontal clay-slate, which, in wet seasons, keeps the water upon the surface. This district is nearly destitute of wood, and the few enclosures are but of a rude quality. The greatest elevations in this county above the level of the sea are, Maiden Paps, 2,000; Scarry Hills, 1,876; and Ord of Caithness, 1,250. Although improvements have certainly been effected, much remains to be done to raise the condition of Caithness-shire to that of the adjacent counties. Since the year 1809 a better system of farming has been introduced, and the number of roads through the country has been augmented. Though black cattle form an article of consideration, this is rather an agricultural than a grazing county: clover and turnips are pretty broadly cultivated; the crops of grain are mostly limited to oats and bear, both of good quality, and the yearly exports amount to many thousand bolls. Besides cattle and corn, kelp, salmon, cod, herrings, bacon, with some butter and cheese, and a considerable quantity of wool, comprise the articles of exportation. The mountains abound with red deer and various kinds of game; and throughout the district, hares, rabbits, grouse, plovers, and a bird called the snowfleet, are in great plenty: the latter bird, about the size of a sparrow, is exceedingly fat and delicious. In the caverns along the coast, seals form their harbours: the hunters enter in small boats, with torches, and with loud shouts alarm the animals, which they kill with clubs as they attempt to pass into the sea. This county has no coal, and the principal fuel of the inhabitants is peat. Freestone and limestone abound in many parts. The CLIMATE, though by no means genial and mild, is temperate, considering its high lattitute (the fifty-ninth degree), where the duration of the night, at one period of the year, is nineteen hours.

RIVERS, LAKES, &c.—In the interior there are upwards of thirty small fresh water lakes, from which flow a number of streamlets, and some waters of greater magnitude: the principal among the latter are Forss and Thurso rivers on the north-west, and Wick and Berrydale on the south-east. The most extensive loch is the Wattin, a fine sheet of water about three miles in length, from which issues a branch of the river Wick. The only bays of any note are Sinclair Bay, on the north-east, and Cannes Bay, on the north.

Caithness-shire was anciently a bishopric, the earliest traces of which refer its origin to the twelfth century; at present it contains ten parishes, which constitute a presbytery. The shire contains one royal burgh—Wick, and a burgh of barony—Thurso. The county sends one member to parliament; and Wick, joined with Kirkwall, Dornoch, Dingwall, Tain, and Cromarty, elects another representative.

LYBSTER IN LATHERON,

DUNBEATH, BERRIEDALE, BRUAN, SWINEY, TORBEY, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

LYBSTER is a village in the parish of LATHERON, 13 miles S. from Wick, and 25 N. from Helmsdale, situated on the south-east side of the county; the parish extends from the Ord of Caithness, twenty-seven miles along the coast, by a breadth of from thirteen to fifteen miles. The village, which, some thirty years ago sprung from a mere waste, goes on increasing annually in population and in extension of habitations. The houses are substantially built and regularly laid out, and in the suburbs are some which are entitled to come under the description of neat and handsome residences. No port from Cromarty to the Orkney Isles has greater claims on the attention of the mariner, nor has any been more successfully or beneficially employed for the purpose of the herring fishery. From the indentation of its coast, with bold headlands at either side, which throw off the sweeping currents so general on the Caithness shores, there is comparatively still water at the entrance, and perfect security within the harbour. The 'Brother's Port,' the name bequeathed to this haven by the Scandinavians, who settled in Caithness in the eighth and tenth centuries, appears to have been much resorted to by these 'sea kings, or pirates'; but it was subsequently destroyed by a devastating land-flood, which choked up the small river that flows into it with trees. (still extant), earth, moss, and stone; and thus converted into a solid beach and cornfield what theretofore was capable of affording shelter and safety to the largest ships of the present day: however, from the progress already made in clearing out this obstruction, there can be no doubt that, at an incredibly small expense, the importance of this valuable harbour may be increased even beyond its ancient reputation. A proof of the disastrous occurrence just related is furnished by the fact that, but an inconsiderable time since, mooring ring bolts were to be seen at a rock three hundred yards from the present high water mark. Upon a contiguous eminence the ruins of a Roman Catholic chapel, and some well-carved relics in Morayshire freestone, still survive the lapse of time. A good road intersects the parish along the shore, and on this road are some pretty cottages. A church of the Establishment and a Free church are the places of worship, and with these are connected schools. LATHERON kirk stands half way, on the coast near to a road that crosses the country to Thurso. DUNBEATH, BERRIEDALE, BRUAN, SWINEY and TORBEY are also villages in Latheron parish. A cattle fair is held at Lybster on the 12th November, and a sort of market for engaging men for the arduous employment of the fishing season takes place on the 20th July.

THURSO,

CASTLETOWN IN OLRIG, REAY, HALKIRK, AND DUNNET.

THURSO is a town and burgh of barony, in the parish of its name, nearly 290 miles N. from Edinburgh, 20½ N.W. from Wick, the same distance W. from John o' Groats, 46 E. from Tongue, and 96 from Bonar Bridge, by way of Tongue and the Western road. Thurso is situated on the north-west coast of the county, at the head of a spacious bay, surrounded by a rocky coast; its headlands forming a bow, renders it one of the finest bays in the kingdom. Here the turbulent waves of the Pentland Firth, and the powerful currents, find resistance on the east by Dunnet head, which stretches out its rocky promontory with a precipitous front, whilst the furious winds from the west are checked in their wild career by the Holburn head,—its original name, and what it is still called in the Gaelic language, is 'Inverhorsa;' Inver signifying the mouth of a river. It is said, and with probability, that the name is derived from Horsa, a Saxon general, who landed here in the fifth century. The Danes were the earliest possessors of Caithness. Torfœus, the Danish historian, mentions, that, in the beginning of the eleventh century, Count Moddan quartered his army at Thurso, which he terms 'The Town of Caithness,' and that they were plentifully supplied with spoil from the neighbourhood, till subdued by Thorkel. He adds, that Moddan had his camp on the promontory of Thurso, where vestiges of a wall, which fortified it, may still be perceived. Dr. Barry states that Earl Erland, in the time of Malcolm II., King of Scotland, about the year 1005, resided for the most part at Thurso. Buchannan mentions many battles between Malcolm and the Danes in Moray, which in those times comprehended Caithness and all the northern counties of Scotland. We find by one of the statutes of King David, of Scotland, that the weights and measures of Caithness, or Thurso, were the standard for Scotland. Vessels of any burthen may find shelter in the bay under any weather, and few places possess superior advantages for refuge to the mariner as Scrabster roads, as it is called. A pier has been erected by subscription, but it is not of that magnitude demanded by the nature of the place, and the depth of water which one upon a larger scale, with addition of a breakwater, would ensure. The town, which is situated about two miles to the eastward, on the left bank of the river, is neat, clean, and rapidly increasing in size. A line of railway is intended to proceed from this town to Wick. The walks in the neighbourhood of the town are romantic, and some approach close to the edge of the precipitous cliffs overhanging the sea. The river too is beautiful, and famed for the almost miraculous draughts of salmon occasionally furnished. Either bank is connected by an elegant stone bridge, but the want of a better pier is much felt, as vessels intending to enter must wait the tide before they cross the bar. This is a great inconvenience to the main export of the place, which consists of the 'Caithness pavement,' an article in great demand, and the manufacture of which is carried on to a prodigious extent, and involves the prosperity of the place. The peculiar excellence belonging to this staple is its durability, its resistance to moisture, and its retention of an unbroken surface. Specimens may be seen in the new houses of Parliament, London, and many public buildings throughout the United Kingdom. Nowhere in Scotland has agricultural progress been so rapid as in Caithness. The industry and energy of the farmer generally rise in proportion to the obstacles which nature presents. Immense tracts of heath land, which would have been left uncultivated in the fertile Lothians, have been subjected to the plough; whilst many thousands of acres of bog and swamp have been drained. The monetary establishments are, branches of the National Bank of Scotland, the Commercial Bank, the Aberdeen Town and County Bank, and a Savings' Bank. Thurso is a burgh of barony, holden of Sir George Sinclair, as superior. The places of worship are the Parish church, two Free churches, and chapels for Original Seceders, Independents and Baptists. The church of the Establishment is a neat Gothic structure, with a tower and clock—the latter presented by the late Henry Miller, Esq., of London, but a native of Thurso. There are Parochial and Free Church schools, well conducted and attended. Two institutions have lately been erected in Thurso, the first mentioned situate at the top of Sinclair-street, and was endowed by Alex. Miller, Esq., for the education of males; the second erected by public subscription, and situate in Olrig-street, for the education of females. A little to the east of the town stands Thurso Castle, the seat of Sir George Sinclair, Bart., an ancient building in excellent repair, and enlarged by an elegant modern addition. Thurso parish gave birth to Richard Oswald, Esq., one of the plenipotentiaries from the court of Saint James for settling the peace of 1783. It is also the birth place of the late Sir John Sinclair, Bart., of Ulbster, whose name is associated with the statistical account of Scotland, which was collected and published in consequence of his indefatigable exertions, to whose memory a very elegant monument of freestone has lately been erected on a square piece of ground fronting the Established church; it was presented to the town by Alexander Miller, Esq. The market is held on Friday, and the fairs on June 29th, and the Friday and the Tuesday after August 15th (old style).

REAY is a parish about 30 miles W. of Wick. It is very wild and hilly, Binra mountain being 2000 feet above the sea level. The parish is about 17 miles long, with a breadth of 8 miles. There is lime, granite, millstone, with traces of lead and iron, mineral springs, &c. There are Established and Free churches and schools in the parish. Fairs are held on the Monday before and Tuesday after August 15th.

CASTLETOWN is a small neat village in the parish of Olrig, situated rather more than 15 miles N.W. of Wick, and nearly 6 E. of Thurso. In the immediate vicinity of the village is the mansion of George Traill, Esq., M.P., upon whose estate is quarried an excellent kind of stone, adapted to the purposes of flooring and flagging footways, &c. It lies in beds of from three quarters of an inch to six inches in thickness. Blocks have often been raised measuring one hundred superficial feet; from hence they are carried to the shore, where they are prepared and dressed, previous to shipping, to facilitate which the small and convenient harbour has been formed.

DUNNET, a parish 3 miles N.E. from Castletown, about ten miles long by four wide, is the most northern part of Scotland. Dunnet Head is a rock from 100 to 400 feet high. There is a light upon it at an altitude of 346 feet, first lighted in 1831, and is seen by the mariner for 23 miles. There are Established and Free Churches, together with schools. Fairs are held on the first Tuesday in April and October (old style) for cattle, horses, and pigs.

HALKIRK is a parish 7 miles S. of Thurso, in length it is about 24 miles, by a breadth of about 9. It contains about 24 small lakes, abounding with trout, &c. There are Established and Free churches, and a parochial and two female schools. Many ruins may be seen in this parish.

WICK,

LOUISBURGH, PULTENEYTOWN, WATTEN, BOWER, CANISBAY AND KEISS.

WICK is a parish and royal burgh—the town a considerable one, improving and flourishing, is 290 miles N. from Edinburgh (20 of which may be saved by crossing the ferry from Tain to Dornoch); 61 N. by E. from Dornoch and 20 S.W. from Thurso; situated on the sea coast or bay of Wick, where the river of its name enters the North Sea. The town is divided into three parts—namely, PULTENEYTOWN, LOUISBURGH, and WICK. The old town, or rather Wick proper, is composed of the High street and Bridge street; the former runs from the bay along the curvature of the river, and is flanked on either side by several lanes. Bridge street, more regular in its construction, is ornamented by several elegant erections: among which the town and county buildings form a neat and handsome pile, faced with free stone and surmounted by a cupola exhibiting a public clock. The interior comprises a spacious apartment, containing portraits of the late eminent Sir John Sinclair, and other local celebrities, and which is used as a council room, and for the meetings of the commissioners of supply for the county; also the sheriff clerk's, town-clerk's, and other offices. Within the last four years new buildings have been erected in this street at an expense of upwards of £20,000, they include a handsome new church, a large hotel, new Court House, and a new Town and County Bank, all superior specimens of architecture. The suburb of LOUISBURGH is regular in its streets and possesses some good buildings: a large temperance hall (in which public meetings are held), is among the latter. Among other objects deserving notice here, is an extensive museum of natural curiosities and coins, the property of Dr. Sinclair, to which the public are courteously granted access. Two other suburban villages are STAXIGO and BROADHAVEN, which with KEISS and SARCLET, where harbours have been erected are populated principally by fishermen.

PULTENEYTOWN, which may be reckoned the seat of the manufactures, commerce, and fisheries of Wick, to which it is still considered a suburb, was purchased when a mere waste by the society in London formed for extending British Fisheries, and various means have been adopted to carry out the great and beneficial object of the society. The local business of the society is managed by an agent, whose residence overlooks the harbours, and who is ex officio, chairman of the Pulteneytown Improvement Commission, who under a special act of Parliament, have the oversight of lighting and cleaning the town, for which an assessment is imposed. A new harbour is being erected at a cost of of £120,000 with thirty feet of water at its entrance. There are two harbours, but the depth of water within is not sufficient for ordinary class vessels; and during easterly winds the heavy swell in the bay renders it the most perilous sea ground on the east coast, and the scene of frequent disasters, which will now be remedied by the extensive works in course of construction. The portion of the burgh has been laid out with a due regard to regularity and taste, having a large square in the centre, from which diverge numerous streets in different directions—those to the north being terminated by handsome terraces, overlooking a rapidly extending part of the town known as LOWER PULTENEYTOWN. Here are situated principally the warehouses, coopers-ages, and places of business, whilst at the south are ranges of buildings, occupied by manufacturers of ropes, sail-cloth, &c. There is also a large distillery, brewery, and corn mill at the upper end, and in the vicinity an hospital for sick poor, and a reservoir which supplies the town with water, conveyed in an aqueduct from a neighbouring sheet of water, the Loch of Hempriggs. Near the river banks is a steam saw mill of great power. Ship building has entirely ceased since the demise of Mr. Bremner, whose engineering talents were successfully employed in floating the Great Britain leviathan steam-ship, which grounded some few years since on the coast of Ireland: but the business of boat building has greatly increased, and with the manufacture of herring-barrels and netting, is the principal source of employment in the winter months. The manufacture of pavement is carried on here, and there is an iron foundry, but the herring trade must be taken as the staple, and in the season, commencing in July, and ending in September, the fishery is prosecuted to an extent unparalleled elsewhere. The population is doubled here at this time by persons from all parts, and the bay is crowded with boats, manned frequently by three thousand persons engaged in trade (the number of boats in the district in late years range from 1,000 to 1,100, with five men to each boat), besides great numbers, both male and female, employed in the process of curing the fish. The scene at this period is very animated both on the water and the land. For several months succeeding the termination of the season, extensive exports are made to Ireland, to the Baltic ports, and elsewhere, while considerable importations of timber are made from Norway, and ports in the Moray Frith. A winter herring and cod fishing has recently been established and successfully prosecuted. The want of railway accommodation is greatly felt, but steps are being taken to secure for the county the extension of the railway to Wick and Thurso, which will give a great impetus to all descriptions of business, and greatly promote the prosperity of the county generally. The gross value of the herrings exported in one year is computed to be from £150,000 to £200,000, and the amount of capital invested in the trade is very great, diffusing wealth and employment over an extensive district. Three bank establishments are settled here—namely, branches respectively, of the 'Commercial Bank of Scotland,' the 'Aberdeen Town and County Bank,' and the 'Union Bank of Scotland.' The premises of the first and second-named banks, which stand in Bridge-street, are handsome structures. Near the market (which is merely an open space, surrounded by old ruinous buildings), is the 'Caithness National Security Saving's Bank—a very useful institution to this district. Two well conducted newspapers issue from the press of Wick weekly—they are noticed with their titles under their proper head. Communication with the south is had by the mail coach, and by bi-weekly steamers plying to Aberdeen and Granton.

Wick was erected into a royal burgh in the year 1593, by the influence of George, Earl of Caithness, whose principal residence was at the strong castle of Gernego, concerning the antiquity of which there is no tradition, but by its construction and workmanship it appears to have been of Danish origin; it is situated about two miles from Wick, and the greater part of its walls are still standing. Another interesting ruin in the vicinity is an old castle, known as the 'Old Man of Wick,' which with a fine light-house on Noss-head, forms an excellent land mark to seamen, otherwise the district is comparatively destitute of antiquities except some of a very remote and obscure period. The old tower of Ackergill has been extended into an elegant castellated mansion, for the chief proprietor in the district, Sir G. Dunbar. The Duke of Sutherland is superior of Wick, which is the county town of the shire, a parliamentary burgh, and the station of returns at elections. It joins with Kirkwall, Dornoch, Dingwall, Tain and Cromarty, in returning a member to the Imperial Parliament; the present representative is Samuel Laing, Esq., recently Finance Minister for India, and a native of Kirkwall. The government of the town is vested in fifteen councillors, from whom are chosen a provost, three bailies, a dean of guild, and a treasurer—their jurisdiction, however, is confined to narrow limits, and the amount of their revenue inconsiderable, and confined to the rental of market dues, and some curing stations; the harbour dues, with the feus and rental of Pulteneytown, form the revenue of the British Fisheries' Society; the justice of peace and sheriff's court, the former sits every alternate Monday; the latter every Tuesday and Friday; with power to appoint a sitting when and where within and county. The customs collection extends from Meckle Ferry to Cape Wrath, with sub-stations at Thurso and Little Ferry, the number of shipping registered being about 50, or 2,500 tons. Different foreign states are represented by resident vice-consuls.

There are places of worship both of the establishment and the Free Church of Scotland (one of each in Wick and Pulteneytown), and others for congregations of United Presbyterians, Independents, Evangelical Union, Baptists, Cameronians, and Roman Catholics; the locality of each and their officiating ministers are given in the directory. The Pulteneytown Academy was founded and endowed by the British Fisheries Society. There are other good schools, some friendly associations, and one of an agricultural character which holds an important annual cattle show, and shows for seeds and roots, alternately at Wick and Thurso. A chamber of commerce comprises the respectable traders in the place. A market is held every Friday, and fairs on the 24th of June (if Tuesday), or Tuesday after, the Tuesday after the 20th July, and the first Tuesday after the 17th of November (old style), but the stock of the district is generally disposed of at trysts held at Georgemas Hill, now rising into importance as a market ground.

CLACKMANNANSHIRE.

THIS county, the smallest in Scotland, is bounded on the south and west by the Firth of Forth and Stirlingshire, and on the north and east by Perthshire: on the east also, it joins, for a short distance, the county of Fyfe; and a detached portion of Stirlingshire, touches part of its northern verge. Its figure, which is extremely irregular, does not exceed nine miles at its greatest length, nor more than six at its extreme breadth.

Anciently the whole of that valuable territory lying between the rivers Forth and Tay, and bounded on the north-west by the chain of the Ochil Hills, was called Ross, as being a sort of peninsula, terminating at Stirling. In course of time the district of Ross was divided amongst the shires of Fyfe, Kinross, and Clackmannan, with the introduction of a slip of Perthshire, on the edge of the Forth, in which is situated the town of Culross. Among the ancient structures of the county are three old towers: one of them, near Clackmannan, is said to have been erected by Robert Bruce; another, contigous to Tillicoultry, is supposed, from its similarity of architecture, to have been built by the same person, or about the same period; the third, the Alloa Tower, is more particularly noticed in the description of that town. From the shore of the Forth, the surface of the county rises gradually to the Ochil Hills, the highest of which (Bencleugh) attains the height of two thousand feet above the level of the sea, and is in the parish of Tillicoultry. The higher grounds are partly pastoral, but the whole of the lower parts, adjacent to the Forth, are rich, arable, and beautifully enclosed. Besides the Forth, the county is watered by two other streams, namely, the Devon and the Black Devon; and it is connected with RAILWAYS by means of branches of the North British Railway, communicating with Alloa, Clackmannan, and Alva. A sub-branch runs to Tillicoultry.

MANUFACTURES, PRODUCE, &c.—The manufacture of woollen goods, in shawls, plaidings, tartans, &c. has been for many years established in the parishes of Dollar, Tillicoultry, and Alva, with complete success, and the villages belonging to them have become thriving places, in consequence, and furnish employment to many hundreds of persons. Throughout the whole district coal is worked.

This shire contains, four parishes, and two portions of parishes; its only towns are Alloa, Clackmannan, Dollar, Alva, and Tillicoultry. The county possesses neither royal or parliamentary burghs, but it unites with Kinross-shire in returning one member to parliament.

ALLOA,

WITH THE PARISH OF BLAIR LOGIE, AND THE VILLAGES OF LOGIE, SAUCHIE, TULLIBODY, MENSTRIE, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

ALLOA is a town of considerable commercial importance, and the leading one of the county; 30 miles N.W. from Edinburgh, 32 S. from Perth, 7 from Stirling, the same distance from Dollar, five from Kincardine, and three from Tillicoultry; situated at the base of a gentle declivity, on the north bank of the Forth, at the spot where it ceases to be a river and becomes a frith; the water is nevertheless deep enough, for ten miles above this place, to admit vessels of seventy tons. Alloa was a burgh of barony up to 1854, under the management of trustees; but in February of that year the inhabitants, by a very large majority, adopted the Burgh and Police Act. The town has considerably improved in appearance of late years, several dilapidated houses have been removed, and others of a more modern and substantial class erected in their stead. At the top of Mar-street, a new Court-house has been built, at a cost of £7,000; the building which is very attractive, is in the Flemish style of architecture, from a design by Messrs. Brown and Wardrop of Edinburgh; it was formally opened on the 8th of December, 1865. The National Banking Company have also erected a very handsome building for their branch here; it stands at the bottom of High-street, and is in the Scottish Gothic style, after a design by Mr. M'Gibbon, of Edinburgh. A new Corn Exchange has recently been added to the many other improvements worthy of notice, it is situated about the centre of High-street, and as it is also to be used as a public hall or assembly room, the interior has been tastefully fitted up; the design is by Mr. Thomas Frame, of Alloa. Villas are rising to the west in two lines in rapid succession, adding much to the beauty of the place. The quay stretches along the bank, and large vessels or steamboats can thus lie close up to the thoroughfare, much to the convenience of passengers, and the more worthy of appreciation, as this is the only port on the Frith at which such can be accomplished with perfect ease and safety at any tide. The trade of Alloa has also greatly increased, and the town and neighbourhood has long been noted for its extensive distilleries, breweries, maltings, glass works, and collieries, together with several extensive woollen manufactories. The Stirling and Dunfermline branch of the North British Railway, passes through the suburbs, and has a station at the top of Primrose-street, thus affording quick transit to all parts of the country. There are four branch banking establishments—the Clydesdale Banking Company, the Commercial Bank of Scotland, the National Bank of Scotland, and the Union Bank of Scotland, together with a bank for savings. Two newspapers are published in Alloa weekly—the 'Advertiser' and the Journal.' Immense quantities of whisky are made here for the London market, and the quality and quantity of the ale exceed those of any other town in Scotland. About one hundred vessels, of various burthens, belong to Alloa and its adjacent creeks. The exports comprise ale, whisky, glass bottles, coal, wool, and woollen goods; the imports are timber, oak, bark, hides, butter, cheese, and large supplies of grain for malting. The latter forms now a principal feature in the imports; large vessels of 600 and 700 tons may be seen discharging here at one time. A daily communication with Edinburgh, Stirling, and the towns on the Frith, is afforded by steam-packets throughout the year; and the ferry steam-boats (on board of which a carriage and four horses may be driven, without either horses or passengers being removed), give every facility to families proceeding to the south side of the river. On the south side of the Forth, opposite to Alloa, is the extensive timber yard and sawing and planing mills of the Messrs. James Donaldson, jun. & Co. and also the terminus of a branch of the Caledonian Railway. The landed proprietor here is Sir Alexander Gibson Maitland. A free shipping port is formed at this part of the Forth. The great depth of water, together with the facility of railway transit, show this locality as eminently eligible for the purpose, as is proved by the fact of the large number of vessels daily arriving. The ordinary and small debt courts are held weekly, in Alloa; a sheriff court twice every week, and a justice of peace courts for the county at stated periods, and a fiars court annually.

The Established Church, which was first opened for divine worship on the 20th of June, 1819, forms the most prominent object in the town. It is a fine structure, in the pointed style of architecture, and was raised at an expense of nearly £7,000. The spire is very handsome, and was added to the tower by public subscription. The Earl of Mar, added considerably to its improvement by giving a bell and a fine clock. The other places of worship are two Free Churches, two for the United Presbyterians, and one for the Episcopalians. The last named occupies a pleasant site to the east of the town. The educational institutions embrace a Charity school, a Parochial school, an Academy, several Sabbath evening schools, Ragged and Industrial, and an infant school, to which must be added a large and commodious school, recently erected from a sum of £5,500, bequeathed by the late A. Paton, Esq. of Cowden Park, as an endowment for the education of poor children. There are also the Alloa Colliery schools. A public assembly room has been long upheld; a library, instituted in 1797, is supported by an annual subscription and entrance fee from each member; a news room, supplied with London and local papers and a bowling-green, give to every class its appropriate portion of rational recreation. In winter, two curling clubs, viz., the Alloa club and the Prince of Wales' club, meet on their respective ponds to practice the 'roaring game of curling. The convivial festival of 'King Crispin' was first celebrated here in 1824, with the customary pomp, pageantry, and ceremonies.

Alloa in its immediate neighbourhood presents scenery at once lovely, bold, and picturesque. On the north side is the proud range of the Ochil hills, covered with verdure to their very summits, and are, perhaps, unrivalled in the fascination of Scottish landscape; the south displays the Forth in all its natural splendour, and its borders the embellishments of rural taste. Stirling Castle on the west, and Alloa and Clackmannan Towers on the east, empower the pencil to complete the picture, and present to the eye a panorama of no common brilliancy. The noble and ancient family of Mar, have long been the proprietors of this place. They forfeited the earldom by their participation in the ill-digested rebellion of 1715, and the title and privileges were not restored until June, 1824, when the inhabitants, on the welcome intelligence of the resumption of these appanages by their landlord, the late John Francis, Earl of Mar (who had endeared himself to his tenantry by a life devoted to the promotion of their happiness and the prosperity of Alloa), celebrated the event by every demonstration of gratitude and joy. Alloa Tower was long the residence of this family. It is a quadrangular building, and though time and the elements are hastening its decay, it is still a place of great strength. The walls are eleven feet thick, and the highest turret is eighty-nine feet. It was built by the sovereigns of Scotland previous to the thirteenth century, and is a stately remnant of feudal grandeur. It has frequently been the resort and residence of royalty. The beautiful and unfortunate Mary spent a portion of her youth and maturity with the Mar family; her son James, also passed many of his youthful days here, having been committed by his mother to the then Earl of Mar; and his son, Prince Henry, received a part of his education in this tower, under the celebrated George Buchanan. The prospect from the summit is beautiful and extensive, and worthy the attention of the tourist and stranger. The tower is now uninhabited. The present Earl of Mar now resides in a mansion near to the tower, built by himself since he entered into possession of the estates. The market is abundantly supplied with every necessary during the week, and more particularly on Saturday. Cattle fairs are held on the second Wednesday in February, May, August, and November (all new style).

Sauchie (New and Old) are populous villages immediately contiguous to each other, in the parish of Alloa, two miles north from that town, on the road to Alva. A great number of colliers, employed by the Alloa Coal Company, reside in these villages, and there are schools in which their children are instructed.

Tullibody parish was united to that of Alloa about the time of the Reformation. The ancient kirk of Tullibody was unroofed under circumstances of a peculiar character. In the year 1559 it was made to serve the purpose of a bridge across the Devon for the French troops when they retreated before the English. The church continued in a dismantled condition for upwards of two centuries, when it was again covered in by George Abercrombie, Esq. of Tullibody, and fitted up as a place of worship for the use of this populous district. It is again in disuse, there being erected adjoining a neat and modern edifice.

The parish of Logie, or Blair-Logie, lies partly in the shires of Stirling, Perth, and Clackmannan—the larger portion being on the north bank of the river Forth, opposite Stirling. Within the parish, on a flat peninsula, formed by a sinuosity of the river, the tall and desolate ruin of Cambuskenneth abbey presents itself; the plain adjacent was the arena in which Wallace obtained his first open and signal victory over the arms of King Edward. The village of Logie is most agreeably situated at the base of the Ochil hills, at the entrance to Sheriff Muir, and presents a singularly pleasing scene of natural beauty; and is a favourite resort for families, from the large towns during summer, lodgings being generally full during the season. The kirk, which is small and neat, stands about five miles from Alloa Menstrie is a village in the parish of Logie, and the southern part of Perthshire; situated at the base of the Ochil hills, on the road from Stirling to Dollar, five miles from the former and two from Alva. The manufacture of different kinds of woollen fabrics give employment to many of the inhabitants. A quaint old house in this village, is pointed out as having been the birth-place of Sir William Alexander, who figured as statesman and poet, during the reign of James VI., when he held his court at Stirling; having become an especial favourite with that monarch, he conferred on him the order of knighthood, besides various offices of high trust; he was afterwards created Viscount Canada, and first Earl of Stirling, at the coronation of Charles the first, at Holyrood, in consideration of his services, and of having been the founder of the colony of Nova Scotia. The estates having at a subsequent date passed into the possession of the Abercrombie family; it was in the same house that in the year 1734, was born the celebrated general, Sir Ralph Abercrombie.
